58 on Plane Disappear Over Lake Michigan

Sea, Air Search For Northwest Airlines DC-4 Proves Fruitless

Milwaukee, June 24 (AP).—Fifty-eight persons were believed tonight to have perished in a Northwest Airlines plane that apparently vanished over storm-churned Lake Michigan early today.

Darkness forced searchers to call off much of their far-flung hunt 20 hours after the last word received from the passenger-packed plane. That was a radio report shortly after midnight (E. S. T.).

Search efforts in the air, on the surface, and even beneath the waves east and northeast of Milwaukee produced no definite clews. As the hours passed, little hope was held that any of the 58 escaped alive.

The last of 60 search airplanes that scoured the lake and northern Wisconsin and Michigan were ordered tonight to call off their hunt until daybreak.

Fog Hampers Search

Small boats also gave up the search. A number of large Coast Guard vessels continued looking for any survivors or wreckage, but foggy weather made visibility poor and hopes of success forlorn.

The Milwaukee Coast Guard Station said it had received a report a raft had been sighted about 10 miles east of the Milwaukee Breakwaster light "with people aboard" and had sent boats to investigate.

But a Navy patrol plane buzzed the object and determined it was a yellow balloon.

Northwest Airlines, owners of the missing DC-4 "Air Coach," said its planes do not carry life rafts on domestic flights. The big plane, en route from New York to the West Coast, was last reported over the lake at 11:15 p. m. (C. S. T.) Friday.

A Navy destroyer-escort engaged in the widespread air and surface search found oil, gasoline and air bubbles rising to the lake's surface about 6¼ miles east of South Milwaukee.

The craft's Navy Reserve captain, George Parkinson, said dragging of the bottom, 66 feet below the waves, located what was "unmistakable" wreckage.

Later, however, the Racine (Wis.) Coast Guard station reported a diver found nothing on his first descent at the spot.

The missing plane carried 55 passengers and a crew of 3 on a nonstop flight from New York to Minneapolis. It was last heard from as it headed into a thunderstorm area over the lake.

The pilot, Robert Lind, 35, of Hopkins, Minn., reported by radio to the CAA traffic control station at Minneapolis. He was headed northweast from Grand Rapids, Mich.

What happened after that last radio report is mystery.

It appeared possible that the plane ran into some sort of trouble southwest of Ludington, Mich.,

'49 Food Bill $342 Per Capita; Living Costs Up 0.9 Pct. Here

Meat Price Is Blamed For Reversal of Trend

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A big upward push in food prices has increased the cost of living here by 0.9 percent between February 15 and May 15. This is a reversal of the previously declining cost of living.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics put the blame for the boost on food prices and particularly on meats. Local food prices rose 2.6 percent between mid-April and mid-May. The reasons cited by the bureau were:

"Beef and veal prices rose 6.6 percent; increases on various meats ranged from 2 percent for veal cutlets to more than 9 percent for round steak. Pork prices were 7.9 percent higher as pork chops advanced from 65 to 78 cents a pound; prices of whole ham rose 6 percent during the month. Leg of lamb prices were 6 percent higher than a month earlier."

Then, too, fruit and vegetable prices moved up 5.7 percent over the month and not all this was seasonal. For example, lettuce

Grocery Bill in 1939 Was $118.60 a Person

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The average American spent $342 for his food last year, as compared with $118.60 in the prewar years, 1935 to 1939, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday.

However, he is eating better, or "higher up on the hog" as many farmers say. His food expenditures last year were 27 percent of his "disposable income"—the amounts he has left after taxes and such items. In the prewar years the $118.60 he spent was 23 percent of his disposable income. But, if he had been content to eat the same food in 1949 as in 1935-39, it would have cost him only $243 or only 19 percent of his income.

This is because the per capita disposable income was $1274 in 1949, and only $510 in 1935-39. Out of his $1274 income last year, the average American spent a total of $1198. Out of his $510 income prewar, the average American spent $490 for all goods and services. In other words he

Smith Beats Graham by 20,516 Votes

Incumbent Concedes To Lawyer Opponent In Primary Runoff; Setback to Fair Deal

Raleigh, N. C., June 24 (AP).—Willis Smith, Raleigh lawyer who campaigned as an opponent of President Truman's "Fair Deal," was nominated in North Carolina's Democratic senatorial primary runoff today.

Smith held a commanding lead of 20,516 votes on returns from all but 50 of the State's 1990 precincts.

His opponent, Truman friend and supporter Senator Frank Graham, conceded the victory to Smith at 9:43 p. m. (EST).

Returns from 1724 precincts gave: Smith 277,672, Graham 257,156.

Victor Congratulated

While a statement was being typed in his headquarters the Sir Walter Hotel here, Graham went to Smith's offices in the same building to congratulate him.

In his statement Graham said:

"I congratulate Mr. Smith on his victory. I have for him every good wish in his high opportunity for service to our State, our country, and the world in this critical time."

It was a major political upset and another Southern rebuff to the President. Smith held the lead from the start of the vote tabulation.

Smith, former president of the American Bar Association, made the President, FEPC and communism the issues in the bitter, hard-fought campaign which preceded today's voting.

In the first primary on May 27, Graham led a field of four candidates by 53,000 votes.

Reynolds Gave Support

Since Graham did not poll a clear majority in the first primary, Smith called for the runoff. He waited 11 days to issue the call and said that at one time he was close to a decision not to make the runoff.

Former Senator Robert R. Reynolds, who ran a poor third in the first primary, threw his support to Smith in the second.

In the State's single runoff race for a congressional nominee. State Representative Woodrow W. Jones apparently had cinched the nomination in the 11th District. Returns from 94 of 154 precincts gave Jones 18,492 votes to 7562 for Charles E. Hamilton of Gastonia.

Both are lawyers and veterans of World War II.

U. S. Calls For Meeting Today of UN Council

Planes Roar Over Seoul; First Onrush Reported Checked; 1700 Yankees There

BULLETIN

The United States early today formally called for an "immediate meeting" of the United Nations Security Council to deal with a communist invasion of South Korea. It was requested the meeting be held this afternoon.

BULLETIN

The State Department at 1 a. m., EDT, said a preliminary report from the American Ambassador to Korea, John J. Muccio, indicated Red attacks on southern Korea were serious.

The Department estimated the total number of Americans in Southern Korea at 1700.

This includes 500 officers and enlisted men in the Korean Military Advisory Group; 1000 officials of the Army, State Department, and ECA, and 200 dependents.

Seoul, Korea (Sunday), June 25 (U.P.).—Forces of Communist North Korea launched a series of attacks into the American-sponsored South Korean republic today and the Northern Pyongyang radio said that war had been declared formally effective at 11 a. m. (9 p. m. EDT Saturday).

The Moscow-supported North Korean forces attacked in heavy rain after mortar and artillery bombardments, which started at 4 a. m. (2 p. m. E. D. T. Saturday), reports to Korean army headquarters said.

Shortly after noon, the Communist Pyongyang radio said the North Korean government had formally declared war on this southern republic.

The text of the declaration was in Korean.

(The Associated Press quoted United States military advisers as saying the invasion was virtually stopped by afternoon.

(The advisers said the northerners pushed 3 miles south of the border at one point before they ran into the first determined resistance.)

(The Associated Press reported strange planes droned over the uneasy capital. No bombs were dropped, however. Attacks rolled up at 11 points or more along the thirty-eighth parallel, which divides this country at the forefront of the cold war between East and West.

(Amphibious landings were reported on the east coast, as much as 40 miles south of the dividing line.

(First accounts said they encountered only minor resistance in the suprise attack. Progress by the Reds was reported all along the line.

(The invaders were supported by artillery and tanks. Heavy overnight rains were believed to have prevented use of the North Korean air force.

(Two flights of planes were reported over this southern capital at 11:30 a. m. No bombs were dropped and the flight was believed merely for observation).

A report received at 9:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m. EST Saturday) indicated that the North Korean forces had taken the town of Kaesong, 40 miles northwest of Seoul. Kaesong is headquarters of the 1st Division of the South Korean army.

There was no immediate indication of the purpose or extent of the attacks, though reports received here said they were general in the frontier area. The frontier line is the thirty-eighth parallel of latitude.

There have been frequent guerilla-scale clashes between North

Cooperation Built Airport, Truman Says

President Dedicates Baltimore Project; Praises Aid Programs

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., June 24.—President Truman dedicated the Nation's biggest postwar airport here today and denied that local government was weakened by Federal aid toward its construction.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Truman said, the great Friendship International Airport which he dedicated was "a symbol of what local government and the national Government can do when they plan together and work together for the improvement of the country." The airport, he added, was a symbol of some other things.

It was a symbol, said the President, of progress and of faith in the Nation's future.

It was a symbol of the value of competition which had triumphed over "mossbacks," in and out of Congress, to make progress possible.

And, he declared, it was a symbol of "faith in a peaceful future," and embodied "our determination to develop the marvels of science and invention for peaceful purposes."

In the middle of his optimistic speech, carefully attuned to the occasion today, Mr. Truman interpolated a haymaker at those members of Congress who have blocked a large part of his Fair Deal program. His extemporaneous crack at Congress was the only part of his talk which drew applause from the sun-baked audience.

"If," said he, "we had listened to the mossbacks who complained about competition, we would never have given up the stagecoach."

At this point he looked up from his manuscript and said in his best whistle stop manner:

"Some of those old stagecoach thinkers are still with us—still in Congress, if you please. But thank God they are not in the majority."

Friendship Airport, designed to serve Baltimore, Washington and Annapolis, was built at a cost of 15 million dollars, of which the Federal Government contributed three million through the Federal Aid Airport Program. Aid

Enka Union Heads Blamed In Shootings

Warrants Are Issued For Leaders After Four Are Questioned

Knoxville, Tenn., June 24 (AP).—State Safety Commissioner Sam K. Neal charged tonight union officials ordered pickets to "start the fireworks," in an outbreak of gunfire at the strike-harassed Tennessee rayon plant of American Enka Corp.

Four workers were wounded in a fusillade of shots at the plant Thursday.

The commissioner said warrants have been sworn out for "union leaders who passed the word down to start the fireworks."

"We have information which confirms our suspicion that repeated acts of violence in the (Enka strike) were directed by union officials," Neal added.

The commissioner made his statements after questioning four men who were arrested today and charged in connection with the violence. He described them as "key figures" in the outbreak, and said all are members of the striking CIO Textile Workers Union Local 1054 at the Enka plant.

Nine other union men were charged at Morristown in connection with the Thursday shootings.

False Teeth Prove True Friend, Ward Off a Bullet

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—Morris Maisus isn't interested in hunting for a lost bullet—even if it was the one which hit him in the mouth.

All the bullet did was cut his lip and dent his upper plate. The 52-year-old tavern owner is too happy to be living to worry if police cannot find the bullet.

Maisus was shot in his tavern last night by a holdup man, who fired twice and escaped with about $100.

The tavern keeper was treated for a cut lip at a hospital. Other than that, his only memento of the holdup is a dent in his denture.

Daughter Arrives Too Late

Phoned Warning Fails to Save Engineer Found Shot to Death

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

The chief engineer of Pepco's Buzzard Point power plant was found shot dead in his office yesterday, 30 minutes after he told his daughter he wasn't "coming home any more."

Found sprawled on the office floor with a bullet wound in his right temple and a .25-caliber automatic in his right hand was Howard H. Harrigan, 51, of 343 Baltimore ave., Takoma Park, Md.

Seven minutes before the fatal shot was fired at 4:50 p. m., Harrigan's 19-year-old daughter, Nancy, had warned plant engineer John Cannon to look after her father because he wasn't feeling well.

After alerting Cannon, Miss Harrigan raced to the office. She arrived to find her father dead.

On Harrigan's desk were four sealed envelopes, one to his wife Ruth, one to his mother, one to his immediate superior, George Bisset, the company's chief operating engineer, and one to a fellow employe.

Homicide detectives said the gist of the notes was that Harrigan was "tired, despondent and wanted to rest."

Police said there were indications Harrigan had been in a depressed state of mind for some Old saws about weather to the contrary yesterday, it was the heat—96 blistering degrees of it—more than the humidity.

At 2:40 p. m., the 96 degrees made it the hottest day of the year, the warmest June 24 for 20 years, and the warmest it has been in Washington since last August 11.

It would have been worse if the humidity had been higher. The 2:40 p. m. top-temperature reading was accompanied by the "modest" humidity of 42 percent.

The temperature did not drop below 90 degrees until after 8 last night.

The best the Weather Bureau could say about today's temperature was that high would be about 90. The forecast was for partly cloudy skies and possible scattered thundershowers in the afternoon.

But Washington felt the heat yesterday. Downtown streets were

Despite Crisis

Pool Parleys To Continue, Monnet Says

Paris, June 24 (NYHT).—Jean Monnet, the chief French delegate at the six-power conference on establishment of a coal-steel pool, announced today that the negotiations would continue regardless of the French government crisis.

There will, however, be a nine-day suspension while the delegates of Germany, Italy the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg return to their capitals for consultations.

This interruption is not the result of the fall of Prime Minister Georges Bidault's government. An adjournment had already been planned because the talks have reached the stage where government decisions on major policy questions are necessary.

Bidault said this morning in asking for the vote of confidence that even if it went against him—which it did—the negotiations would continue. He added, however: "Serious harm could be caused by a governmental gap."

He was apparently referring to the psychological effect on other countries of the fall of the French government at a time when it was

Efforts Continue To Identify Lake Body as Major's

Trieste, June 24 (AP).—American authorities today continued their efforts to identify a body taken from an icy mountain lake as that of United States Army Maj. William Holohan, who disappeared after a parachute jump into Italy six years ago.

The body was brought up from Lake Orta west of here last week in the climax to a search that has been going on since 1946.

Holohan parachuted into the North Italian mountains in the summer of 1944 as head of a mission to join Italian Partisans. He was officially reported killed by raiding Germans on the night of December 5, 1944.

Paris Cabinet Overthrown; Talks Periled

Bidault Quits in Vote 352-230 Against Him; Socialists Push Pay Bid

Paris, June 24 (NYHT).—The French National Assembly, voting 352 to 230 against the government on a question of confidence, forced Premier Georges Bidault to resign today amid indications that it would be difficult to form a new parliamentary majority.

Socialist demands for civil service wage increases that the government considered excessive threw the country into a political crisis just when France is playing host to two international conferences.

The overthrow of the 8-month-old Bidault regime was not connected with the current Paris negotiations for a western European coal and steel pool or with economic talks among the associated states of Indo-China.

Although the administration's fall from power came on a purely internal issue, it seemed inevitable that the confidence friendly peoples have in France would be undermined.

Bidault's Cabinet was the seventh that the National Assembly has forced to resign since the fourth republic's constitution came into being in January, 1947. All the resignations have been as the result of disputes on internal politics.

Vincent Auriol, the President of the republic, started talks with party leaders immediately after Bidault had submitted his resignation. This was mandatory because the government was defeated by the constitutional majority

The Bidault Cabinet was the first to experience this humiliation. The preceeding ministries had all been defeated by less than 311 votes, but resigned anyway.

Gaston Monnerville, a Radical-Socialist and president of the advisory parliamentary body known as the Council of the Republic, told the press on leaving the presidential palace: "I don't think the crisis will be short. Questions are more important than men now."

Sesqui Officials Reexamine '50 Program of Special Events

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

With economy in mind, Sesquicentennial officials are busy reexamining the 1950 program of special sesqui events.

These events were formulated originally as side attractions to a Freedom Fair which was to be the main event in the city's celebration of its 150th birthday.

With the Freedom Fair abandoned, the special projects are all the Sesqui Commission has. They are now being screened to make sure that expenditures can be justified. Where possible, costs re being cut to increase the amount to be returned to the Treasury. Congress appropriated three million dollars to run the Sesqui celebration including the Freedom Fair.

In screening the fund allotments, the question is being asked whether some participating groups and institutions are tapping the commission for money to pay for equipment, repairs and programs which they otherwise would underwrite themselves.

Many of the special events were planned to provide entertainment for the many Freedom Fair visitors who otherwise would swamp the town's normal recreational facilities. In addition the Sesqui "adopted" a number of scheduled civic functions and celebrations which would have been held any way.

The commemorative events run the gamut of a symphonic drama in a specially built amphitheater, art shows, concerts, State honor days, athletic events, including a track meet, and dressed-up holiday and civic celebrations.

The Sesqui executive committee has allocated about $1,350,000 to cover the whole special events program.

Largest item in the total is $650,000 to construct an amphitheater in Rock Creek Park and produce Paul Green's "Faith of Our Fathers," a symphonic drama specially written for the celebration. The outdoor theater will remain as a much-needed civic improvement.

Paul Massmann, Sesqui general manager, has high hopes of saving at least $150,000—possibly as much as $350,000, thereby keeping all special events expenditures under one million dollars. This may mean virtual abandonment of

Walked From Court

2 of 21 Arrested in Dice Game Now Face Contempt Citation

Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie indicated yesterday he may consider contempt citations against two of seven men who failed to appear on crap shooting charges before him at Upper Marlboro Friday.

The men were among 21 arrested April 29 when Prince Georges County police raided a big-money dice game in Colmar Manor. Three of the men were charged as operators of the game, the others with the lesser offense of crap shooting.

Bowie said two of the men who did not answer to the crap-shooting charges were in his court Friday when the cases were called and walked from the court while the cases were in progress. He said he considered this "contemptuous."

He repeated that he does not intend that persons charged with crap shooting shall forfeit their bond and thus ecpape an appearance in court.

In court Friday, Bowie criticized Lieut. Elon Turner of the county police for making a deal with the operators of the game whereby they would "take the rap" as kingpins of the game if the players were not booked.

Turner defended his action as sound police practice but Bowie replied that it was not up to police to decide such matters.

The 11 men charged with crap shooting who did appear in court were acquitted. For the seven men similarly charged who did

Republicans Attack Truman Tax Bill

4-Year Extension

Truman Signs Rubber Plant Control Bill

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday signed the bill extending for two years the law controlling the Nation's Government-owned $700 million synthetic rubber plants. The law would have expired June 30, 1950.

This means that the Government will continue ownership of its war-built synthetic rubber plants, which it has been leasing for operation to private industry.

The law requires that industry see to it that the plants are kept capable of producing annually 660,000 tons—and they must turn out each year 220,000 tons.

In voting the extension, Congress rejected a Truman recommendation that the Executive be given a freer hand in administering the synthetic rubber facilities.

The present law, passed in 1948, bars the Government from disposing of any of its synthetic rubber plants until Congress approves.

Mr. Truman had asked for a new 10-year law that would have given the Government authority to dispose of at least part of the plants to private industry under terms requiring adequate production for defense needs.

NYHT News Service

House Republicans charged last night that Truman Administration tax rates are "enslaving" the American people, branded the Democratic excise tax cut bill as inadequate, and called for an immediate cut in "appalling" Federal spending.

Unanimously, all 10 Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee condemned the Administration tax bill in a bristling minority report. Reported earlier this week, the bill would cut excise taxes by $1,010,000,000, but plug "loopholes" with additional levies, mainly on corporations.

The minority warned that the 700 million dollars corporate tax rise proposed by the Administration would be passed on to the consumer, and would result in a "combination of higher prices, reduced purchasing power and curtailed business expansion."

Reed Calls Bill 'Phony'

Their leader, Representative Daniel A. Reed (N. Y.), ranking Republican member of the committee, went even further. He charged the Democratic bill is a "phony" which is "deliberately conceived to hoodwink the taxpayer," called for its recommittal, and promised a "real" tax bill to be passed even over a presidential veto if a Republican Congress is elected this fall.

"The appalling fact facing the people of this country," the Republican report said, "is that annual Federal expenditures have increased by 10 billion dollars in the last two years. Six billion dollars of this increased spending has no connection with past wars or with national defense.

"The national debt is 256 billion dollars. President Truman has recommended legislation now pending in Congress which, if enacted, would increase expenditures for next year by seven billion dollars. Within the next four or five years the increased cost of this proposed legislation would be 25 billion dollars annually. We must warn the Congress and the American people that the sources of revenues to meet even present-day expenditures are not available."

Called 'Deficit Bill'

Confiscation of all individual taxable income over $10,000 and raising the corporate rate to 50 percent would not yield enough to meet the Truman program, and would cause "wheels of industry to grind slowly to a halt," the Republicans said.

Analysis of "all other known sources of revenue reveal the equally obvious impossibility of devising a tax program to meet expenditures called for by President Truman," they added.

"This is not a tax relief bill; it is a tax deficit bill, Reed said. "By imposing an increase in the corporate tax rate the Democrats practically wiped out what advantage the American people get from the excise cut. Completely ignored is the fact that corporations seldom pay corporation taxes themselves. What they usually do and what they will do in this case is to pass any tax increase along to the consummer and that means every Tom, Dick and Harry in the United States . . . The Democrats know that this is true, but for partisan political reasons they imposed that corporate increase fervently hoping to deceive the American people."

Limit Urged On Spending In Primaries

By The Associated Press

Senator Gillette (D., Ia.) yesterday urged that a limit be clamped on the money a candidate may spend to win nomination as a United States Senator.

He is chairman of a three-Senator subcommittee set up to police the election of 36 Senators this year.

Complaints that some Senate candidates are spending huge sums of money have caused Gillette to order Senate investigators into five States—North Carolina, Florida, Pennsylvania, Illinois and South Carolina.

"And there may be others," he said.

The Federal Corrupt Practices Act places top limits of $25,000 on the spending of a Senate candidate and $5000 on a candidate for the House. This applies only to the final or general election, and not to primaries or nominating conventions.

Gillette said this results in a situation that "is ridiculous on the face of it." In some States, especially the Democratic solid South, a primary victory means certain election.

There has been a long dispute in Congress and the courts as to the right of Federal Government or Congress to regulate State primary elections or nomination conventions.

But Gillette said there was no doubt in the minds of the campaign policing committee as to its right and duty to investigate. Other Senators on the group are Stennis (D., Miss.) and Schoeppel (R., Kan.).

Gillette said data must be gathered for use in possible future election contests involving Senate seats, and recommendation of "remedial legislation" to the Senate.

In Harrisburg, Pa., Gov. James H. Duff declared Congress is without legal authority to investigate Republican primary campaign expenses in Pennsylvania. At the same time, however, Duff said "If the Democrats want an investigation, I welcome it."

of this sort, Mr. Truman said, had "strengthened and given new responsibility" to local government.

"Nothing is quite so misleading," he declared, "as the oft-repeated charge that the Federal Government today, by its various aid programs, is weakening or destroying State and local government. This is simply political oratory. I may say it is false political oratory.

"How false it is should be obvious to anyone who has followed the steps taken by the local authorities in the creation of this airport, for example—or in the construction of roads, or low-cost public housing—or any other projects financed in part from Federal funds.

"In all these programs, the initiative must come from local citizens; the planning must be done in the locality; State and local governments must adopt the necessary laws and ordinances, set up the necessary boards or commissions and, in many cases, raise most of the funds. By the time the project has been completed, the local governmenta has acquired new strength and new assurance in meeting the problems of the community.

The President's flight here in the presidential DC-6, the Independence, was the first leg of a weekend trip to Independence, Mo., for a visit with his family and friends. It was rendered notable by virtue of the fact that it introduced Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro of Baltimore to air travel. Before the Independence took off from Washington's National Airport, D'Alesandro received a generous helping of rhubarb from Mr. Truman and Maryland's Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., here he stepped down from the Independence grinning broadly, waving his big white Western hat. His verdict on flying was brief: "Delightful."

Speaking a little later at the dedication ceremonies, D'Alesandro quipped: "I feel like one of the Wright Brothers." After Mr. Truman left for Independence, the mayor was formally made an admiral of the American Airlines fleet.

When the President emerged onto the broiling hot taxiway where his airplane was parked he was greeted by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of Maryland, who saluted, shook hands and said: "Mr. President, may I welcome you to Maryland." The 327th Army Band from Edgewood Arsenal sounded honors and a battalion of the Eleventh Airborne Division stood at present arms while the presidential party walked to the speaker's stand.

Along the way Mr. Truman spied a formation of boys from the Maryland Boys State of the American Legion in yellow sweaters and blue trousers and stopped for a word with Joseph Hartman, 21, of Colmar Manor, Md.

On the way back to the Independence, the President reviewed a company of the Eleventh Airborne, asked Corpl. Shuler E. Harmon of Columbia, S. C., where he got all his medals.

Harmon said he got them in the Pacific.

"I'm proud of you, young man," said the President.

"We're proud of you, Mr. President," Harmon replied.

Mr. Truman then inspected Harmon's rifle, squinting down the barrel and handing the weapon back wrong end to, something Captain Harry of Battery D wouldn't have done 30 years ago.

As a matter of interest to those who go in for such things, Friendship Airport covers 3200 acres on a plateau 140 feet above sea level, is five times as large as National Airport at Washington and four times the size of LaGuardia Airport at New York. Its longest runway is 9450 feet and 200 feet wide. The State has contributed $400,000 to build high-speed access roads connecting the airport with Baltimore and Washington.

Truman's Foreign Policy Hit By Republicans as War Risk

Atlantic City, N. J., June 24 (U.P.)—Eastern States Republicans today attacked President Truman's foreign policy as a possible road to war and cheered Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) for his free-swinging campaign against the State Department.

National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson said two Democratic Administrators in this century had landed us in two world wars.

"We find the country now," he said, "under a Democratic President and Congress in what the President openly calls a cold war.

"One thing the people know—for a half century the Republican Party has been the party of peace."

Senator Owen Brewster (Me.), chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, said the election of a Republican Congress in 1950 would be the best guaranatee that the country would stay out of war.

"In my judgment," he said, "peace may be the one dominant issue of this campaign. It is not safe to trust our affairs to those who have had such conspicuous lack of success in their efforts to keep us out of war.

"In all our lifetime, we have had two Democratic administrations and two world-wide wars. Enough is enough."

Republicans from 17 states and the District of Columbia in the two-day campaign kickoff which ended tonight, apparently gave McCarthy a green light for his campaign to prove the State Department is infested with Communists.

"In the immortal words of Dean Acheson," Brewster said in a speech, " 'I will not turn my back on Joe McCarthy.' As an American I prefer a fighting Marine to a convicted traitor."

Brewster referred to Acheson's statement after Alger Hiss was convicted that he would not turn his back on his longtime State Department associate.

Gabrielson told the Republicans to stop squabbling among themselves. It was understood he aimed in part at Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) and the six Republican Senators who indorsed her recent attack on McCarthy.

Joining her in that repudiation of their Republican colleague were Senators George D. Aiken (Vt.), Robert C. Hendrickson (N. J.), Irving M. Ives (N. Y.), Wayne Morse (Oreg.), Edward J. Thye (Minn.) and Charles W. Tobey (N.H.). With Mrs. Smith, they accused McCarthy and his supporters of trying to ride the party to victory "thruogh the selfish political exploitation of fear, bigotry, ignorance, intolerance."

Gabrielson said the Republican Party was big and strong enough to embrace all shades of opinion and wants that opinion freely expressed.

"But there comes a time to close ranks," he said. "That time is here. We can settle our differences between campaigns. Republicans must prove now they can unite in a common objective, and, move shoulder to shoulder against a common foe."

Representative Leonard Hall (N. Y.) had a good word for McCarthy. Hall is chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee.

"McCarthy hit the Administration where it hurts," he told the Republicans, "and the brickbats and headlines have been flying ever since."

Rent Curbs End in North Va.; House Weighs Two D. C. Bills

The beginning of the end of rent control in Greater Washington starts today as northern Virginia controls are lifted.

Legislation pending in Congress for Washington and the remainder of the Nation indicates that if rent control is extended, its days are numbered.

Rent controls end today on Virginia's 175,000 rental units except for a few still under control of the Federal Housing Administrator.

About half the estimated 11,000 apartment renters in nearby Virginia have already received notice of increases starting July 1. These very from a dollar to $29 a month.

Two Propsals In House

Washington's rent control runs out Friday and District leaders at the Capitol yesterday planned a drive for final action before then. The House has two proposals before it for extending local control.

One is the Senate-passed measure continuing the present control through December 31 and from then to June 30, 1951, certain types of control deemed necessary by the Commissioners. The other bill, prepared by the House District Committee, automatically would continue control until January 31, 1951, with Congress deciding whether further extension is necessary. The odds yesterday were on the Senate-passed version.

The House Committee version leaves control on hotel accommodations for permanent residents, while the Senate-approved bill lifts controls on non-housekeeping, furnished hotel rooms.

National Bill Signed

A national control bill was signed into law by the President on Friday. It continues controls until December 31, 1950, and after then only by affirmative action by local communities for another six months.

This creates a problem in Montgomery County with its unincorporated communities of Silver Spring and Bethesda, but officials said the county could take advantage of a State enabling or standby law to invoke rent controls for the period from January 1, 1951 to June 30, 1951, expiration date of the State law.

Rent control for the area started in Washington January 1, 1942, and has continued since. Other nearby areas came under control through the Office of Price Administration orders on June 30, 1942, and a general blanketing of the country's homes began October 12, 1942. In postwar years, the Office of the Housing Expediter took over the responsibility for rent control from the dissolved OPA agency.

was able to save $76 last year contrasted with only $20 prewar.

The BAE report indicated that the cost of food which has been going down since it reached its peak of $690 in 1948, has turned around and is going back up.

The BAE Market Basket—the cost of feeding a family of three average consumers—in April was at the annual rate of $621, or $51.75 for that month. That's the highest so far this year, but was still $1 a year under the December figure, which was the lowest in 1949. Out of this $621 a year the farmer got $296. Others—grocers, wholesalers, handlers, truckers and railroads—accounted for $325. In other words, the farmer got 48 cents of every dollar spent at retail for his products. This is the highest proportion of the consumer's dollar since April a year ago.

	1935-39	April, 1950
Meat products	$88.57	$182.83
Dairy products	67.31	117.99
Poultry and eggs	26.47	44.91
Bakery and other cereal products	55.09	93.73
Fruits and vegetables	77.79	142.07
Miscellaneous	25.96	39.34

Between April 1949 and April 1950 the only items that went up were beef, 6 percent; flour, 1 percent; oranges, 4 percent; prunes, 4 percent.

The largest declines were noted in vegetable shortening, 15 percent; navy beans, 12 percent; canned corn, 13 percent; canned peaches, 18 percent; sweet potatoes, 21 percent; lettuce, 34 percent; cabbage, 15 percent; apples, 26 percent; rice, 12 percent; eggs, 20 percent, and pork, including lard, 12 percent.

This month's BAE report on transportation also pointed out that fewer Florida oranges were eaten in Washington and other cities this year than last. A total of 2000 fewer carloads were shipped to New York, Boston, Chicago, Washington, St. Louis, Atlanta, New Orleans, Los Angeles and San Francisco than in 1948. The report also stated that the railroads are handling a smaller proportion of Florida citrus fruits, while trucks are hauling more. In 1949 the railroads hauled 4800 fewer carloads of Florida oranges than in 1948, while trucks handled 2800 more.

prices were upped 40 percent, cabbage 12 and sweet potatoes 6½ percent.

Even the seasonal boosts were out of line, the economists reported, citing "more than seasonal increases" for onions—22 percent; apples, 20; potatoes, 12, and bananas, 2.

On the canned goods side, four of the five items priced by the bureau were higher than in mid-April with a 2 percent incline noted. To add to the grocery bill, fats and oils prices were up 1.3 percent.

Rents and miscellaneous goods and services rose 0.2 percent and 0.7 percent, respectively.

Hardly offsetting this string of upward items were fractional percentage declines in apparel, housefurnishings and fuel and refrigeration. The decline stemmed from cuts in anthracite and fuel oil prices.

The BLS found food prices advanced in 54 of the 56 cities surveyed with the big surge coming in meats. The meat level soared 5 percent above a year earlier.

Johnson, Bradley Return 'With Facts'

NYHT News Service

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, returned from Tokyo yesterday "with all the facts" affecting American security in the Communist-threatened Far East.

Although both withheld comment until they confer early this week with the Chiefs of Staff and then report to President Truman, authoritative sources in Tokyo said they were in accord with General MacArthur on these major conclusions:

1. That the United States must retain military bases in Japan after the peace settlement.

2. That the United States must take positive action to prevent the fall of Formosa to Chinese Communists.

But Johnson refused to talk until his findings were studied by the Armed Forces Policy Council and relayed to the President.

"We have seen all our important commands in the Far East and I think we've got the facts," he said.

Bradley said he had obtained "fresh information." Both emphasized that their examination of the Far Eastern situation was made "solely from the standpoint of American security."

Their Constellation made the flight from Tokyo to National Airport with only one stop, at Anchorage, Alaska, thus setting a record, Johnson said.

Col. J. Monroe Johnson, 72-year-old chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, who had fainted when he stepped off the plane at Anchorage, said he was feeeling fine on his arrival here. He said he had merely suffered a digestive upset. He explained that he had made the trip to inspect Japanese railroads and found them "one of the best foreign systems I've ever seen."

In California

Court Test Of Red Oath Ousters Seen

Berkeley, Calif., June 24 (U.P.).—The 157 staff members ousted from the University of California because of their refusal to sign non-Communist statements will go to court to challenge the school's "loyalty oath" their attorney predicted today.

Attorney Robert W. Kenny, representing the ousted employes, said he thought a test case will be made in court "even though they were not actually fired but only not rehired."

The university's board of regents voted unanimously not to reemploy the 157 employes who would not sign the oath.

"I am of the opinion that if the university would clearly state it was discharging a man because he refused to sign that you'd have a clear case of the constitutional rights involved," Kenny said. "I don't think the United States Supreme Court has settled it. It is open for determination . . . whether a university employe can be discharged for political reasons."

The regents at their meeting yesterday in Los Angeles sidestepped the issue of 62 higher-ranking professors and teachers who refused to sign the oath, but who had won favorable recommendations from an appeals board. The regents voted to postpone consideration of their cases until the next meeting here July 21.

Some of the 62 nonsigners are engaged in top-secret atomic energy research, and have been cleared by the Atomic Energy Commission, a University spokesman said. Both the university and faculty committees refused to reveal names of the 62, but it was understood some of the university's outstanding scientists are on the list.

None of the 157 who lose their jobs June 30 are professors or assistant professors. Most were classified as "miscellaneous employes" — clerks, librarians and laboratory assistants. They failed to reply to a written request sent by the university to all its 9929 employes to sign a statement of loyalty as a condition of future employment.

Besides the 157 who lost their jobs and the 62 whose cases will be heard next month, the regents postponed until July 21 action on six nonsigners who failed to get a favorable recommendation from the appeals committee; 11 nonacademic employes who refused to sign because of religious reasons; two nonsigners now on leave and 18 others whose jobs will be eliminated at the end of June.

4 Parties to Boycott Egyptian Parliament

Cairo, June 24 (AP).—Egypt's four opposition parties have served notice they will boycott future sessions of the Wafdist-controlled Parliament.

The manifesto was signed yesterday by leaders of the Saadist, Liberal-Constitutional, Kotla and Nationalist parties. They hold 60 seats in the 319-member Chamber of Deputies and 62 in the 147-seat Senate.

They branded as unconstitutional the so-called reshuffle in which the Wafdist Government, acting on King Farouk's advice, ousted 19 opposition Senators and replaced them with Wafdists. Egyptian law permits the King to appoint two fifths of the Senate's members.

Alexandria, Egypt, June 24 (AP).—Five strikers were killed last night in a clash between police and 7000 textile factory workers who walked out in a demand for higher pay. Two police were wounded.

Athens, Tito Relations at New Crisis

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 24 (U.P.).—The official announcement that Sherif Shehovich, Marshal Tito's new minister to Greece, has been recalled from Athens without presenting his credentials, heralded a new crisis tonight in Yugoslav-Greek relations.

Shehovich had been waiting in Athens nearly a month and was expected to present his credentials last Monday, reliable sources said. But the Greek government at the last moment decided not to invite him to do so.

At the same time, the Greek government indicated it did not intend to send its own minister to Belgrade just now because of differences arising between the two governments, it was said.

Sources here said the dispute was principally over the Macedonian minority in Greece, comprised of Slavs who remained in Greece after voluntary exchanges with Yugoslavia more than 20 years ago.

Greece contends they now are Greek citizens and regard themselves as such. The Greek Government does not recognize them as a minority. On the other hand, Yugoslavia has declared that improvement in Greek-Yugoslav relations is impossible unless the Greeks pledge minimum rights to them.

MacArthur Rejects Russian Protest on His Banning Reds

Tokyo (Sunday), June 25 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur today sharply rejected a Russian demand that he call off his crackdown on the Japanese Communist Party.

MacArthur said Friday's Soviet protest note was a "conglomeration of misstatement, misrepresentation and prevarication of the facts."

The Soviet note, sent by Col. S. Polyshenko, the acting Soviet member of the Allied Council for Japan, had formally protested against MacArthur's "police-club law" in Japan, and had demanded he call off his purge of Communist leaders.

The note called on MacArthur to withdraw the directives of June 6 and 7, purging from public life 24 members of the Communist Party's central committee and 17 editorial members of the Red party organ, Akahata.

Akahata, meanwhile, forecast "assassination attempts" on "important leaders" here, meaning MacArthur.

The Russian note demanded that the Japanese government abolish at once "the practice of police-club law" and halt "the suppression of trade unions and other democratic organizations."

'Kangaroo Courts' of Congress Must Be Revised, Morse Says

Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.) said yesterday that congressional investigations, including the current Communist inquiry, have degenerated into "kangaroo court procedure" where reputations are ruined without fair trial.

Morse, one of the seven Senate Republicans who recently repudiated the tactics of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.), told reporters constitutional guarantees of fair trial have gone by the boards and congressional investigation procedures must be "completely revised."

He spoke out as the chief counsel for the Senate's Communist investigating subcommittee expressed new confidence that the Justice Department "in one way or another" would assist in clearing up the question of whether Diplomat John S. Service leaked secret military information in the Amerasia document theft case.

McCarthy, meanwhile, released from Milwaukee, Wis., letters to Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, maintaining that Service's State Department loyalty file if complete would show that Service passed such information to Philip Jaffe, Amerasia editor who pleaded guilty and was fined in the case.

Peyton Ford, assistant to McGrath, last week informed Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), subcommittee chairman, that the 81 State Department loyalty files now under committee review were complete and that McCarthy was in error in charging that they had been "raped" of damaging material.

McCarthy wrote that this would mean either (1) the Justice Department sought to "deceive" the American people as to the completeness of the files, or, (2) the State Department was "grossly incompetent or worse" in keeping Service on the payroll.

The 81 files to which Ford referred are those covering only persons involved in McCarthy's original "81 cases" of alleged Communists and security risks. McCarthy in the past has maintained this batch of files did not include Service's. McCarthy launched his attack on the career diplomat at a later date.

However, today McCarthy wrote Acheson and McGrath that:

"It would seem that you are on the horns of a dilemma of either admitting that the Justice Department is lying about the completeness of the files or you admit that when you reinstated Service and promoted him and gave him important assignments where he helped shape our disastrous China policy you were fully aware of the above facts."

Morse said he was opposed to various proposals for establishing bipartisan investigating groups outside of Congress because it would be "ducking" congressional responsibility for investigations.

"The time has come," Morse said, "when the American people, at congressional hearings, should be guaranteed the rights of fair trial as provided under the Bill of Rights.

"This idea of ruining the reputation of people by making charges against them in congressional hearings and not guaranteeing them the right through counsel to cross-examine those who testify against them cannot be reconciled with the constitutional guarantee of fair trial in America."

News of Korean War Awaited

Officials waited anxiously last night for news of the Communist North Korean attack on South Korea.

A Communist drive to conquer the independent republic—long recognized here as a possibility—would herald intensified Russian efforts to bring Asians under the flag of communism and would raise grave new problems about the American position in the Far East.

The State and Defense Departments and the Korean Embassy had not received any official reports on the new attacks up to a late hour last night.

The North Korean attack is the first direct Communist military drive against a United Nations created government in the Far East and the first direct Communist attack on a government in the Far East sponsored by the United States. South Korea has received considerable military and economic support from the United States Government for several years.

The South Korean republic, headed by President Syngman Rhee, has about 120,000 armed men to resist attack, according to the best information available here.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chief of Staffs, told the United Press that only about 200 to 300 American officers and men remain in South Korea as a military mission that has been training the Koreans. Bradley and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson returned only yesterday from the Far East.

The State Department tried without success to telephone American Ambassador John J. Muccio at Seoul.

American military officials have always been somewhat uncertain as to the ability of South Korea to resist an onslaught. Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge, who commanded the American military forces there for more than three years after the war, is known to have reported to the War Department that South Korea would be in an "untenable position" in event of an all-out attack from the north if the Korean Communists were supported by Soviet advisers and material.

That was the reason why the United States was anxious to pull its forces out of Korea as early as possible. They were withdrawn about the middle of last year after the new republic had been set up under the guidance of a United Nations commission.

Since that time there has remained in South Korea only an American military advisory commission of 500 officers and men. In addition, there are quite a number of ECA technicians and other American civil advisers.

At one time American forces in Korea numbered as high as 50,000 men. This was just after the surrender of Japan, when the United States occupied the southern half of the country, with a population of more than 20 million, while Russia moved in north of the thirty-eighth parallel, where there are about 11 million inhabitants.

Estimates of the strength of the North Korean Communist army have varied from 150,000 to 200,000. They are equipped principally with military equipment and supplies that the Russians captured from the Japanese in Manchuria.

Ever since the war, South Korea has been dependent on American aid to maintain its economy. Last year it received 120 million dollars in ECA aid from Congress. This year it is slated to receive 100 million dollars in ECA assistance.

In addition, Korea this year shared in the $27,000,000 military aid earmarked for South Korea, the Philippines and Iran. The Korean share of this, while never made public officially, was about $10,000,000. They had been expected to get another $10,000,000 in military assistance in next year's budget.

American military officials insisted that the major part of the Korean military aid should be in light armaments and ammunition, despite the South Korean government's initial desire for warships and aircraft.

When the American forces pulled out of South Korea they turned over to the newly created army virtually all their light arms, ammunition, communications equipment and the motor transport.

American military experts have contended that in the hilly terrain of that area the South Koreans would have little use for heavy tanks or other large items of military equipment.

It was only last week that John Foster Dulles, Republican adviser to Secretary of State Dean Acheson, visited South Korea and assured the country that the United States did not intend to abandon them in the face of Communist menace in Asia. Dulles, sometimes known as the "father of South Korea" because of his active work in getting the United Nations to supervise the creation of the new government, is now in Tokyo.

There were numerous diplomatic and military interpretations last night of the significance of the North Korean move. It was no secret in Washington that military officials here have had their eyes more on the possibility of a Chinese Communist invasion of Formosa, where Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist government are making a last stand. Military experts realized that the Communists must invade Formosa before mid-August or put it off until late in the year after the rains end.

There was some speculation that the North Korean attack might be coordinated with a Communist drive on Formosa, both ordered from Moscow, which if successful, would give the Russians and their Far Eastern allies a solid flanking position with respect to Japan.

Pyo Wook Han, first secretary of the Korean Embassy here, said his country had not "exactly expected" an all-out northern Korean invasion.

to the possibility of new elections. The constitution provides that the country may be consulted during the regular five-year life span of parliament if two consecutive governments are overthrown by constitutional majorities.

The Socialist decision to vote against the government unleashed a wave of hostility in other parties, which also decided to protect their position with the hundreds of thousands of government employes. The Communists, Gaullists and right-wing parties climbed on the Socialist bandwagon and rolled over the Bidault regime.

In vain, Bidault asked for the Assembly to consider the country's improved economic situation and the risks it would run in having a long crisis. The Premier cited the fall of the price of gold, the hardening of the franc and the stabilization of most retail prices. These accomplishments might be lost, if the parliament voted for Government wage increases that the 1950 budget could not support, said Bidault.

Korean Attack Is Reported

Korean and south Korean forces, but none, apparently, as large as those reported today.

Threats have been made of an invasion of southern Korea. One officer said here, on the basis of early reports: "This looks like the real thing." But there had been no intelligence reports of troop movements or concentration of supplies—such as would be needed for a real campaign—on the North Korean side.

In addition, the rainy season is just starting, and the season is the worst of the year for troop operations. Military authorities emphasized that their reports were fragmentary and that the picture of the situation was vague.

North Korean forces were reported 3 to 4 kilometers (1¾ to 2½ miles) inside the frontier in the Ongjin Peninsula on the west coast. Dispatches said that the North Koreans were using tanks in the area of Chunchon, 60 miles northeast of Seoul.

Below Kangnuing, on the eastern coast, invaders were said to have landed in 20 small craft and to have cut off the coastal highway.

No Report Received Here On Attack, Bradley Says

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, last night said he had received no official information on reports of North Korean attacks into South Korea.

Bradley said there are only 200 or 300 American officers and men—part of a military mission—in South Korea.

Monnet today handed the heads of the five other delegations a working draft drawn up by French experts to facilitate agreement on a treaty. This document is written in the form of a draft treaty, but is referred to officially as a working paper. Since there is no French government, it would have been impossible to submit a government - approved draft treaty.

The contents of the document will be published on Monday. Monnet said it dealt with the organization, functions and powers of the proposed high authority that is to operate the coal-steel pool.

The main decision the various delegates will ask from their governments concerns a French suggestion that this high authority should be responsible to a joint parliament to which national parliaments would transfer their sovereignty in matters that fall within the competence of the high authority.

This is regarded here as a major step toward the unification of Europe, so it is apparent that the governments must make up their minds about a question of great importance.

Monnet said all the delegations, including his own, would also consult industrialists and labor leaders, who have so far been given no real opportunity to express themselves on a proposal that will affect them directly.

Air Crash Spells Myriad Tragedies

New York, June 24 (AP). — A pretty career girl flying to the man she was to marry—a businessman on his way home—a minister going to a new pulpit—a summer vacationer—a father en route to visit a son—a beautician headed back to Minnesota.

These were among the 55 passengers of a Northwest Airlines DC-4, missing and presumed lost today with its crew of three over Lake Michigan.

It was a mixed company that rode the vanished plane—wealthy executives, civic officials and laboring people, young and old, from small communities and big cities. Many were on vacation trips.

That was the case for Miss Ellen Ross, 21-year-old nurse of New Jersey's Passaic Hospital, on her way to visit an uncle in Livingston, Mont.

Richard W. Thomson, 35, research director of New York City's Budget Commission, was flying to Butte, Mont., to see his parents and sister. His father, Francis A. Thomson, is president of the Montana School of Mines.

Family of Four Lost

The dreams of a young couple flew with Mary Keating, 24, of New York City, an associate editor of the Ideal Publishing Company. She was on her way to see Allan Baron, of Pine City, Minn. They planned a future marriage.

For Leo Wohler, the flight was the end of a business trip to New York City. Wohler, 43, general manager and director of the Vaughn - Ragsdale department stores in Montana and Wyoming, and the father of six, was on his way home to Billings, Mont.

The trip was to reunite one family—the William Gorskis. Mrs. Gorski, 27, was flying from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to join her husband in Seattle where he had recently taken a new job.

One Dumont, N. J., family of four—John Hokanson, his wife, Kay, and their two young children—were on a vacation trip. Neighbors said they planned to visit in Minneapolis.

M. L. Barton, an Austin, Minn., beauty operator who had been attending a beauty school in New York, was on the way home.

The Rev. Augustine Walsh, of the Mission Band of Friars of the Atonement at Graymoor, N. Y., was en route to Deer River, Minn., to take over a new assignment.

Family Reunions Marred

Two mothers, Mrs. Eva Woolley, 62, of Minneapolis, and Mrs. Marie H. Rorabaugh, 66, of Philadelphia, were on visits to their daughters. Mrs. Rorabaugh was going to Richland, Wash., and Mrs. Woolley was en route home after a six-week visit on Long Island.

The flight was a business mission to Minneapolis for Kenneth Skoug, a sales manager of the Remington Rand Co.

Other names in the business world were on the list: Mrs. Whitney H. Eastman of Minneapolis, wife of the vice president of General Mills, Inc.; Joseph Sirbu, representative of a Los Angeles sportswear manufacturer; William Freng, vice president of International Telephone & Telegraph Co., Mrs. Freng and a daughter.

Leo F. Long, 57, a Worcester, Mass., businessman, was en route to visit his son in Seattle. Richard Goldsbury, a soldier, was headed to Milton, Oreg., to visit his brother.

over the lake, then veered southwest toward Milwaukee for an emergency landing.

This afternoon, the master of a Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad ferry plying between Ludington and Milwaukee reported picking up a mattress and some pillows in the water 21 miles southwest of Ludington. But Northwest Airlines said its missing plane did not carry a mattress.

Last night, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Skinner, jr., of Fenville, Mich., reported seeing a plane flying over Lake Michigan near Saugatuck. They said the plane's lights went out after a bolt of lightning flashed across the sky. They estimated the time of this observation at 10:30 p. m. (E. S. T.), nearly two hours before Captain Lind made his last report.

Today, shortly before the destroyer-escort found the oil and gasoline slick, K. R. Ferguson, vice president of Northwest Airlines, said that "it is presumed the plane is down. As search continues, Northwest Airlines is notifying relatives of the passengers and crew members."

The big airliner left LaGuardia Field, New York, at 8:35 p. m. (EST) and was to have flown nonstop to Minneapolis, arriving at 1:20 a. m. (CST) this morning.

The plane held 2500 gallons of gasoline at take-off, enough for 12 hours of flight—in mileage, sufficient to take the plane to Billings, Mont., under ideal conditions.

Toll in Air Crash Here 2d Worst in U. S. History

If all 58 persons aboard the missing Northwest Airlines plane were killed, it would be the deadliest crash in United States commercial aviation history.

Up to now the highest death toll recorded in a United States airliner crash was the 55 persons killed when a Bolivian-owned fighter sheared into the tail of an Eastern Airlines DC-4 at National Airport last November 1.

The worst air disaster of all occurred March 12 when a chartered Avro Tudor crashed near Cardiff, Wales, killing 80 persons.

Citizens Observe 'Inactive' Year on Postoffice Plan

The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report yesterday marked "an anniversary of inactivity" on the Hoover Commission proposals for reorganizing the Postofffiffice Department.

Dr. Robert L. Johnson, chairman of the committee, pointed out that it was a year ago yesterday President Truman sent to Congress a nine-point program for reorganizing the Postoffice Department.

"Yet for one full year these measures have been in the hands of the Senate Post Office and Civil Service Committee," Johnson said. "No action has been taken on these important measures."

Sesqui Officials Restudy Special Events Program for 1950 With Economy in Mind

Sesqui support of civic events scheduled for the fall and winter where formal commitments are still to be made. There has been no programming nor allocations beyond September 20.

After taking into account the "frozen" fund of $1,250,000 and the special events fund of $1,250,000, there still would be left a balance of $400,000. Sesqui officials believe that $100,000 of this amount will be needed to liquidate the agency at the end of the year. The remaining $300,000 is being held as a reserve against which Sesqui officials hope will not materialize.

Fiscal Features Noted

There are these features of Sesqui spending and budgeting:

Underwriting Civic Activities:

1. Central Housing Bureau: When it was believed Freedom Fair would be held, the Sesqui Executive Committee approved a $31,000 allocation for a housing bureau at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw. A similar bureau is normally financed by the Washington Board of Trade's Greater National Capitol Committee. It was opened May 1 with a fulltime staff of nine employes. When it became apparent Freedom Fair was dead, the executive committee voted to curtail drastically bureau operations. It was reduced on June 5 to two employes working part-time.

Month of May bureau expenses cost the Sesqui about $3000. But since June 5 the bureau's cost to the Sesqui is running at the rate of $600 a month, according to Sesqui budget officials. The bureau's telephone number still is listed as Republic 2600, which is the number of the Board of Trade's Housing Committee.

Sesqui officials say the bureau strictly an informational and ticket-selling booth with its phone routed through the Sesqui switchboard—Sterling 0700.

Bills Total Over $200

2. I am an American Day, May 22. The Sesqui Commission's joint participation in this event has brought in bills for program printing and amplification expenses amounting to over $200. Sesqui officials presently are taking the position they should not pay these two bills since the event normally is sponsored by some 50 civic organizations. It is understood the groups contributed about $900, most which has been deposited for next year's program.

3. National A.A.U. Track and Field Championships, at University of Maryland which ended last night: The Sesqui Commission agreed to undertake this event up to $15,800. The Sesqui track meet budget includes a $2500 fee for purchasing the franchise to sponsor it, $8000 for transporting the star athletes here and $5000 for incidental and preparations expenses.

A Sesqui staff member quickly added that all permanent equipment purchased for the meet "will become our property." It was not clear what use the Government might make of the material.

Although the Sesqui is slated to receive the track meet gate receipts, it does not expect to make a profit.

Friday's attendance was estimated at 500, with tickets selling for $1 and $1.50. Yesterday an estimated 2500 attended the field events, paying $2.50 for reserved seats and $1.50 for general admission.

Bastian's Stand Puzzling

Why Commission Counsel Walter M. Bastian did not object to Sesqui sponsorship of this event has puzzled some commission officials. Bastian has maintained that enabling legislation restricted the celebration to the Nation's Capital. He raised that point as an obstacle to accepting a Freedom Fair site in Virginia. Last night he explained that the track meet was in a different category in that it was a two-day affair, and did not involve constructing buildings.

Although the Sesqui may come out on the short end of the track meet, it plans to strike gold with its sponsorship of the annual Police and Firemen's baseball game, set for September 20 in Griffith Stadium. This is always a big attraction with gate receipts usually going to the police and firemen's associations.

But this year, at suggestion of Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett, Sesqui will sponsor the contest with $2000 backing. The Sesqui and the two associations will divide the take. Corcoran Art Gallery: Corcoran has been allocated $100,000 to assemble "The American Processional" exhibit of 350 works of historical art. It will run from July 8 through December 17. About half the sum will go to paying salaries of special employes. Herman W. Williams, gallery director, said.

Interior Renovated

But thanks to the Sesqui funds, the entire interior of the gallery has been renovated and two upstairs galleries plastered and painted, he said. This, he added, is budgeted to cost about $14,000. In addition, possibly $3000 will be spent on improved lighting.

The Fine Arts Commission which received a $35,000 allocation from the Sesqui Commission, has turned over $30,000 to Corcoran. Most of this sum also will go into interior renovations, Williams explained.

The Fine Arts Commission and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission will put on a joint exhibit of their plans of Washington, past, present and future, in Corcoran Gallery.

NCPPC was allotted $15,000 to put together its share of the planning exhibit, some of which will include maps from the long-awaited Comprehensive Plan for Washington.

Williams defended all renovation charges, contending the gallery was erected in 1897 and much of the interior has not been touched since then. And picture-hanging equipment also is expensive, he said. The gallery simply has to be in decent condition for such an important exhibition, he said.

The Sesqui budget officer has rejected two reimbursement requests submitted by the gallery. One was a $1500 legal fee for Corcoran's legal firm, Hamilton & Hamilton. It was turned down, he said, because it was meant to cover execution of the contract between the Sesqui Commission and the gallery. The contract actually was executed by Sesqui lawyers, he said. Williams said he did not plan to appeal the rejection.

The other Corcoran turn-down was a voucher to cover Williams' salary from February 16 to April 5, 1950, amounting to $1365.38.

Williams said the salary reimbursement was asked at the suggestion of Corcoran Thom, a gallery trustee. It was to cover the period while Williams was in Europe collecting art pieces for the Sesqui show.

He said, the Sesqui pay "did not make any difference to me since I was getting my regular director's salary anyway."

Public Relations Costs: Sesqui publicity costs have been considerable. Sesqui officials expect its public relations staff operation to cost about $70,000 for the 13-month period from October 20, 1949, to November 1, 1950. This includes a small portion of so-called special events expenditures. Salaries of the average seven-man staff will account for about $48,000 of the total figure.

Trying to Trim Costs

Massmann is now attempting to trim these expenses. Robert Fowler, chief public relations man, recently took a salary cut from $12,500 to $9,600.

Edward Boykin, former Sesqui director until last March and now "director of historical and cultural relations" also had his salary trimmed only a few days ago from $15,000 to $9,600.

Collapse of the historical booklet project is one big saving. Originally budgeted to cost $50,000, it now has cost the commission about $2000 for preliminary work. Because the author was unable to meet the April deadline, it was abandoned. Medallions: Officials do not know just how much revenue these $1-a-piece souvenir medals will produce. They will go on sale shortly. Several months ago Boykin reported to a Sesqui executive committee meeting that he had conferred with Board of Trade spokesmen. He reported they might take 200,000 medallions at 60 cents each and charge them to its members.

There has been no follow-up by either the Sesqui or the Trade group on the proposal, Massmann said last night. He said the commission would undertake to sell the medallions at coming events.

The biggest question mark in today's Sesqui budget picture is possible claims against the commission on Freedom Fair spadework.

These four organizations did preliminary work: The Byrne Organization, Inc., Gardner Displays, the Sesquicentennial Leasing Bureau and Leon Chatelain, local architect.

The Byrne Organization, which did architectural and engineering work, is the only firm to receive any payment for services actually rendered. It has been paid $28,116 to date.

No others filed claims.

Leaders Spur D. C. Bill as Deadline Nears

District leaders at the Capitol will drive for final congressional action before Friday on the city appropriations bill for the 1951 fiscal year and continuation of the day care program.

To avoid lapses or emergency measures, the two bills must be signed into law by midnight Friday to meet end-of-the-fiscal year deadlines.

The situation on each:

The Sente Appropriations Committee is expected to act early this week on the District's spending program for the year starting July 1.

According to committee sources, the supply bill, sheared of about six million dollars by the House, will go to the Senate floor boosted to almost a 119-billion-dollar total.

The appropriations bill will go to conference and then back to each house for approval before going to the White House.

The House is slated to act Monday on legislation to continue the day care centers for children of working mothers. It would extend the war-born program one more year. The measure limits appropriations to $100,000.

If the House okays the legislation, it also will go to conference since the Senate has passed a similar bill placing the program on a permanent basis.

Other bills up for House action Monday would:

1. Amend the architect's registration law.

2. Change the titles of District Health Officer and Assistant Health Officer to Director and Assistant of Public Health.

3. Allow banks to postpone for 24 hours the posting of checks.

4. Permit a doctor, other than the attending physician, to remove dead persons from a home.

5. Grant a $50,000 fund for completing the Eastern High School stadium.

Western Railroad Strike Starts Today

Deadline July 1

125 Farmers Ask District Milk Permits

Some 125 dairy farmers, trying to beat the July 1 ban on imported milk, applied for District permits yesterday, the Health Department reported, and farm inspections will start Monday morning.

Walter W. Burdette, director of the department's bureau of food inspection, said all applications came from near Queenstown on Maryland's Eastern Shore. They now supply Embassy Dairy, Washington's largest independent distributor, he said.

Burdette said he had been told 100 more applications from farmers in the Cumberland, Md., area, who now ship to Wakefield Dairy, will be filed Monday.

An inspector will be assigned to each area, Burdette said. "We'll do everything we can to inspect these farms before July 1."

The independent dairies have been working feverishly to qualify these farms for permits since Thursday when the Commissioners gave temporary approval to chemical sterilization of dairy farm equipment. This followed the Commissioners' decision Tuesday to let expire June 30 a wartime order under which milk is permitted to enter the District from farms not inspected by the Health Department.

Three independents — Embassy, Wakefield and Highland Farms — had asked that sterilization by chemicals instead of by the more costly steam process be permitted to include farmers who seek District permits.

They argued that many farmers would ship elsewhere after June 30 rather than invest in steam equipment. This, the independents argued, would force them to buy at higher prices from the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association which supplies about 80 percent of the District's milk.

Pittsburgh Milk Talks Break Off

Pittsburgh, June 24 (U.P.).—Negotiations to end Pittsburgh's 16-day-old milk strike broke off completely tonight and AFL milkmen threatened to cut off emergency deliveries.

The sessions broke up after a three-hour meeting during which tempers flared on both sides of the bargaining table.

Disgruntled milkmen who have been making emergency deliveries to homes where there are children and to hospitals, and other institutions threatened to cut off emergency deliveries unless the dealers "come across" with their demands. They said they would take matters "in our own hands."

The rank-and-file of the union rejected a "sure-fire" settlement offer last night and threw the wages and hours dispute into its tightest deadlock.

Union officials said the men were "sore" about retroactivity. Under the proposed settlement, they would have received retroactive pay to June 1. The rank-and-file demanded back pay to May 1, when the old contract expired.

Harry B. Parks, owner of a Vandergrift, Pa., dairy which serves most of the Kiski Valley area, announced his plant would close "for good." He said he was "fed up" and decided to close when pickets appeared at his plant this morning.

The dealers offered a 44-hour week at 48 hours pay; a $12.50 per day guarantee for driver-salesmen from their previous $10 and three weeks vacation to employes with 20 years service.

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—Four Western railroads ordered wholesale freight and passenger train cancellations today in preparation for a complete shut down before their switchmen strike at 6 a. m. local time Sunday.

The fifth railroad singled out for the strike—the Great Northern—said it will "do its best" to keep trains running.

The strike deadline neared with direct peace talks broken off and no sign the walkout would be averted. Strike instructions have been given to 4000 switchmen on the five lines.

President Arthur J. Glover of the Switchmen's Union of North America and members of his strike committee left the peace talks in Chicago late last night to return to the field and 'run our strike."

Chairman Francis A. O'Neill of the National (railway) Mediation Board said he was in telephone contact with Glover and would "keep working" for some break, but he gave no word of optimism. He reported that "nothing is cooking" in the board's attempts to bring about a postponement, compromise or settlement.

The strike would tie up vital segments of the Nation's passenger and freight transportation from Chicago to the Pacific Ocean.

It has been called against the 8000-mile Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific System, the 1195-mile Western Pacific; the 1500-mile Chicago Great Western; the 2413-mile Denver & Rio Grande Western and the 8000-mile Great Northern.

Generally the four railroads suspending operations have arranged their schedules so all runs will be completed by the strike deadline. They have declared embargoes on freight or warned that such goods will be "subject to delay."

The Rock Island canceled its Los Angeles-bound Imperial scheduled to leave Chicago at 8:30 p. m. (CST) today. The last Great Western passenger train out of Chicago left this morning for Oelwein, Iowa.

The union called the strike in protest against a June 15 recommendation of a presidential fact-finding board. The board rejected the union's demand for a 40-hour work week with the same take-home pay they now get for a 48-hour week. The board proposed instead a 40-hour week with an 18-cent hourly pay boost.

The Rock Island planned to lay off 21,000 of its 23,000 workers and thousands of other employes will be made idle on the other roads. The Great Northern, which serves 10 States, said it will "do the best it can to fulfill its obligations."

The switchmen's strike call comes almost on the heels of a six day strike of locomotive firemen and enginemen that disrupted service on five key rail systems in the East, South, Midwest and West May 10-15. That was the Nation's first multi-system rail strike in four years.

The walkout, if it is not averted, could be followed by a Nation-wide railroad tieup after July 15. The railroads say a coast-to-coast strike of 200,000 trainmen and conductors after that date is "imminent."

Cleaning Store Robbed of $20

A gunman made off with $20 from a dry cleaning establishment in a daylight holdup yesterday, police were told.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bryant, 56, of 1633 Irving st. nw., a store employe, said she was alone in the establishment, Vogue Cleaners, 1648 Columbia rd. nw. The gunman, she said, fled on foot.

Concert Slated Monday

A concert by the 100-piece Racine (Wis.) Boy Scout Band will be given Monday at 8 p. m. at Sylvan Theater on the Washington Monument Grounds, National Capital Parks announced yesterday.

An exhibit of items depicting the early history of Takoma Park, Md., is being displayed at the Takoma Park Library, 8 Sherman ave., through July 4.

Sponsored by the Takoma Historical Society, the exhibit includes rare photographs, papers, books and records of early settlers.

Counsellors' Luncheon

William E. Leahy, attorney, will address a 12:30 p. m. luncheon meeting of The Counsellors Tuesday at the Burlington Hotel.

Wife Lists 'Ten Rules' for Hubby

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. LOIS BACKER, 23, of Chicago, Ill., has made a list of "Ten Commandments" which she says her husband, Richard, 28, must agree to if they are to effect a reconciliation. The list will be sprung on her husband when they appear before a judge next week. Mrs. Backer has been granted a $20 a week temporary support for their 2-month-old son

Warrants Issued for Enka Union Leaders

They were freed under bonds totaling $22,750.

The rest of 100 men and women members of the striking CIO textile workers picked up for questioning in connection with the incident have been released.

State Safety Comissioner Sam K. Neal moved his investigation to Knoxville, 40 miles south. There he questioned two men he said were key figures in the roaring outbreak that shook Morristown this week and shed blood for the first time in the 13-week-old dispute.

Two of the four men questioned by Neal were seized today at Crossville, Tenn., on a bus bound for Nashville. Neal identified them as John P. Gregory, about 34, and Jasper Jones.

At Morristown, most of the 75 State highway patrolmen rushed in to put down the latest flareup had been sent back to their home stations. And at the Enka plant, 7 miles from town, plant guards said "everything is peaceful with no pickets in sight."

The nine charged in connection with the shooting were put under bond ranging from $500 to $6000 each. Sheriff Medlin said they were all union members and listed them as:

Ambrose Hash, accused of conspiracy with intent to incite a riot and carrying weapons, $3250 bond; John McClanahan, malicious mischief, obstructing highway, $3500; Woodrow Hawk, casting stones into automobiles, conspiracy, $3500; John Neal, Cumberland, Md., conspiracy, $3000; Ohis Ayres, conspiracy, shooting into cars; $6000; Emory Wells, Fred Jones, P. P. French, felonious assault with intent to commit murder, $3000 each, and W. F. Knight, carrying weapons, $500.

The original strike issue was a demand contract which included what the union called a package 23-cent hourly raise and the company termed a 70-cent increase. The company offered the equivalent of 10 cents over the $1.35 hour average wage.

Most of the 70 hourly paid production workers walked out.

2 Women Assaulted At Queen Mary House

In Canadian Brush

Suspect Held In Slayings, Bank Holdup

Langton, Ont., June 24 (AP).—Ontario police today locked up a gaunt, unshaven man for questioning in the four-day old slaying of two men who tried to halt a robber fleeing after a $23,000 bank robbery here. Police refused to identify him.

A 400-man posse beat the woods around Langton searching for the man. He abandoned the $23,000 when he shot the two men who forced his car into a ditch. Police figured he couldn't get far away.

The posse arrested the unidentified man at nearby Staffordville, about 10 miles from the scene of the double killing. He was taken to Provincial Police Headquarters at Simcve. No charge has been filed against him, police said.

London, June 24 (U.P.).—A puny Irish gardener broke into Queen Mary's heavily guarded mansion early today and assaulted two women servants while the 83-year-old dowager slept 150 feet away.

Queen Mary

The intruder was found in the basement of art treasure-filled Marlborough House after 30 Scotland Yard detectives and a number of dogs had searched the neighborhod for 5 hours. He was charged with intent to rob.

Police said Gerald O'Brien, 26, slipped past red-coated Grenadier Guards pacing up and down outside Marlborough House, shortly after midnight. He sneaked into the servants' quarters without setting off the mansion's burglar alarm system.

O'Brien accidentally awakened Housekeeper Mrs. Alice Knight, 66, when she challenged him, he stabbed her on the head and shoulders with a penknife. Assistant housekeeper, Mrs. Winifred Ralph, 49 rushed to Mrs. Knight's aid. O'Brien punched Mrs. Ralph, giving her a black eye, then fled.

Queen Mary knew nothing of the incident until a maid awakened her at 7:30 a. m.

Merrick Home Fire Destroys Valuable Items

Valuable family heirlooms, some more than 200 years old, were lost in a fire which destroyed the old Merrick home on Marlboro Pike near Upper Marlboro, Md.

Mrs. George B. Merrick, widow of the former trial magstrate for Prince Georges County, and her two chidren fere not at home when the fire was discovered about 9:30 p. m. Friday. Judge Merrck died last March.

Seven Prince Georges County fire departments vainly fought to save the house and its furnishings. The building was engulfed in flames when the firemen arrived.

Family silver, china and jewelry, family portraits upon which no definte value could be placed were destroyed. Mrs. Merrick had a large collection of China.

Stocks and Government bonds, and a collection of Turkish rugs and Venetian glass still in their wrappings which had been brought back by Dr. G. H. M. Rector, son of Mrs. Merrick by a former marriage, from a tour of duty with the Navy, also were burned.

Mrs. Montgomery Morrow, a sister of Mrs. Merrick, said it was impossible to estimate the value of the heirlooms and family properties destroyed in the fire. She fixed the value of the house at about $30,000.

Catholic Charities Group to Meet Here This Year

The National Conference of Catholic Charities said yesterday its annual convention will be held here this year instead of Miami Beach, Fla., because some members believe Miami Beach is inconvenient. The sessions will be held November 2 to 6.

A conference official told a reporter:

"At the business session in Atlantic City last November, the membership of the National Conference of Catholic Charities authorized its board of directors to select a meeting place for the annual meeting in 1950. This was announced, some members expressed dissatisfaction because of the inconvenience of location. The executive board therefore decided to recanvass the membership. The result of this recanvass of conference members was the decision to hold the 1950 meeting in Washington, D. C."

Campbell to Address Public Relations Group

N. Y. Mayor Seizes Youth In Bedroom

New York, June 24 (AP).—Mayor William O'Dwyer today seized an 18-year-old youth who invaded his bedroom in Gracie Mansion, his official residence, and held him until police arrived.

Police said the young man, identified as Michael McDermott, scaled a high iron fence surrounding the grounds, entered the rear of the mansion and made his way to the mayor's bedroom.

O'Dwyer, who will be 60 on July 11, is a former New York City policeman.

Police questioned McDermott for several hours, but no charge was made against him. He then was admitted to the psychiatric division at Bellevue Hospital.

Gracie Mansion is in Carl Schurz Park on Manhattan's upper East Side.

Blood Given to 'Wanted' Man Shot Down by 2 FBI Agents

Indianapolis, June 24 (AP).—Henry Harland Shelton, into whose body FBI agents pumped two bullets last night, received a transfusion of two pints of blood today.

Shelton

Dr. J. S. Bean, medical director at General Hospital, said Shelton, described by the FBI as one of its "most wanted" men, improved after the transfusion but his condition was still critical.

Shelton, a native of Indianapolis, was a fugitive from the Northern Michigan State Prison. He escaped last Labor Day.

Harvey G. Foster, FBI agent in charge of the office here, said two men captured with Shelton are Indianapolis men and have police records.

He identified them as Herbert Aiken, 37, and Vestal E. Ely, 42. They were held under $5000 bonds on charges of harboring a criminal.

The 41-year-old Shelton was shot in front of an East Side tavern. The Federal agents said he reached for a gun as they called on him to surrender.

Shelton will be kept under close guard in the hospital, Foster said.

Czechs Deny Death Appeal

Prague, June 24 (U.P.).—The official news agency reported today that the Supreme Court has denied the appeals of Mrs. Mlada Horakova, Zavis Kalandra, Jan Buchal, and Oldrich Pecl, sentenced to death for conspiring with Western diplomats and newspapermen to overthrow the Communist Government.

Secret Quiz of Key Crime Figures Nears

By the United Press

Key figures turned up by Senate investigators in checking on New York-New Jersey-Miami crime operations will be questioned behind closed doors by the crime investigating committee, it was learned yesterday.

Committee sources disclosed the Senators feel they have enough evidence from preliminary undercover investigation to call some of the underworld figures for questioning. But, for the time being, it will be in closed session.

This became known as the group prepared to resume public hearings Wednesday with testimony from investigating agencies under the Treasury Department.

May Bare Mafia Details

The hearing may bring out more details on what role the mysterious Sicilian "Mafia" organization, or "Black Hand," plays in directing big time rackets, including traffic in narcotics.

Federal Narcotics Commissioner Harry J. Anslinger earlier gave the Senate committee, headed by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) a list of 800 suspected criminals directed by a combine with centers in New York, Florida and California.

Later information reaching the committee ascribed a key role in operating the "combine" to the "Black Hand" and linked New York's Frankie Costello to the Mafia organization.

Anslinger to Testify

Costello promptly denied it. He said he detested the narcotics racket.

Anslinger will be among the Treasury officials who testify Wednesday.

In calling the top T-men for questioning, the committee hoped to get comprehensive information on narcotics and counterfeiting and perhaps other rackets.

Meantime, Kefauver revealed the committee already has requested income tax records on some of the persons "figured" in undercover work by the committee in the Miami area. Some of these may be among those to be called for closed-door questioning.

Neely's Bid For Wire-Tap Copy Refused

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), said yesterday he has no "present plans" for a new move to lay hands on the famous wire-tapping report.

The Senate District Committee chairman made the comment as he disclosed the Justice Department has turned down his request for a copy of the report submitted by Police Lieut. Joseph Shimon.

Last week Neely asked Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett for his copy. Barrett referred the request to the Justice Department on grounds Shimon had given the report to Justice several months ago.

The senator said high Justice officials advised him they would not instruct Barrett to release his copy since the FBI "was conducting or would conduct" its own investigation into wire-tapping.

Because the probe is not completed, Neely explained, the Justice Department "does not feel it proper for me to have the report at this time."

Neely said he was uncertain what his next move would be.

The secret report is alleged to contain a statement by one of Shimon's subordinates that he arranged to tap Howard Hughes' telephone during the Senate War Investigating Committee probe into the planemaker's wartime contracts.

Press, Police Accord Urged By Editors

The importance of cooperation between police and press was outlined yesterday to the 39 policemen attending the four-week Police Academy course.

Speakers were James Russell Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post; Edwin C. Tribble, city editor of The Evening Star; Howard L. Coppenbarger, city editor of The Daily News, and Sidney Epstein, assistant city editor of the Washington Times-Herald.

They discussed the role of a newspaper in the community and how the newspaper aids the Police Department in controlling crime. They pointed out to the student policemen the importance of the newspaper getting swift and accurate information.

Capt. Robert V. Murray, assistant chief of detectives, spoke about the cooperation needed between uniformed policemen and the Detective Bureau. Lieut. Jacob Wolfe outlined the activities of the auto squad which he heads.

Since beginning their course June 6, the student policemen have heard speakers from the FBI, Secret Service, United States Attorney's office and other offices or agencies which have a bearing on police work.

not appear, the court ordered $100 bonds for each forfeited and continued their cases until August 4.

Noncommital on Bond

Usually in the county when a bond is so forfeited and the bondsman later brings the defendant into court, the judge sets aside the forfeiture.

But Bowie would not say whether he would do that in the case of the seven who were absent Friday. He said when they appear he will act "in the light of the circumstances."

The seven whose bond was ordered forfeited by Magistrate Bowie were listed in police records as Wallace Beach, 38, of 419 H st. nw.; Edward H. Jarvins, 37, of Woodland Beach, Md.; Claude S. Outland, 26, of California; Edward Frye, 23, of 1316 6th st. sw.; Jesse M. Coffey, 27, of 745 10th st., se.; Martin Lasko, 34, of 1448 Park rd. nw., and Joseph Badanas, 25, of 428 Kenyon st. nw.

Magistrate Bowie convicted the three operators of the game. They were Joseph Fratantuono and Albert C. Gibson, who were fined $750 each, and Abe Mason, who was fined $1000.

Engineer Shot Dead in Office

HOWARD H. HARRIGAN

Child's Baby Declines

Omaha, June 24 (AP)—A baby born here Wednesday to a 10-year-old mother was "not in good condition" today. The baby had been reported doing fine yesterday.

time. Preliminary investigation disclosed no business or domestic difficulties.

Visit Not Unusual

Cannon, the watch engineer on duty at the waterfront plant, reported Harrigan was in his office at 3:30 p. m., when Cannon arrived for work.

Since he was the chief engineer, officials said there was nothing unusual in Harrigan's coming in on a Saturday afternoon.

At about 4:20, Cannon said, Miss Harrigan called and asked to speak to her father. Some 20 minutes later she called again, Cannon said, asking him to look after her father.

Detectives said the family became worried when they found Harrigan gone without his car. They decided to call his office. On the phone, police said, Miss Harrigan asked her father to come home but was told he "wasn't coming home any more."

After Miss Harrigan's second call, Cannon said he went to his boss's office, asked if everything was alright, and was told it was. He looked normal, just like he was working," Cannon said.

Single Shot Fired

A few minutes later Cannon told police, he was talking to a building guard, when they heard a single shot from Harrigan's office 20 feet away.

James H. Ferry, executive vice president of Pepco, said he had known Harrigan since the latter started working for the company in 1933 and had found him an excellent employe.

Besides his wife, Ruth, and his daughter, Nancy, a graduate nurse, Harrigan leaves a 15-year-old son, Howard, jr.

In his notes, police said, he gave his wife the power of attorney to handle his affairs, and requested a military funeral at Arlington Cemetery.

Boys' Club Camp Starts 26th Season on Monday

The twenty-sixth season of the Boys' Club of Washington's Camp Reeder will open Monday with Arthur Fyfe, director of camping for 20 years, again in charge.

Camp Reeder, open to members of the Boys' Club of Washington, is situated on West Hatton Farm, on the Wicomico River, in Charles County, Md. It accommodates 100 boys each two-week period.

Tools Furnished

Robbers Get $2000 From Raw Bar

Service is the watchword of this raw bar, Fred Howlin said.

"We even furnish the tools for the guys who break in and rob our safe," he added sarcastically.

"If I had followed my hunch and stayed here after hours, they'd really have had a welcome, Howlin said.

Safecrackers broke into the establishment, Fred and Harry's Raw Bar, 10110 Colesville Pike, Four Corners, Silver Spring, Md., between the closing hour of 2 a. m. and about 5:45 a. m. when the smashed back door was discovered by Montgomery County Police.

The robbers moved the safe from behind the bar into a back room, where they worked in leisurely fashion with tools left in the store when a new partition was built recently. Fred said about $2000 was lost.

He was bitter, first at the robbers for spoiling his safe, second at the police, whom he claimed to have told several times that a suspicious car was hanging around the back at night, and third, at his insurance company. He thought he was insured for $30,000 but found the small print cut his coverage down to about $1000, he said.

Police Charge Woman Killed Son-in-Law With Knife

Police have charged Mrs. Katie Howard, 38, 1142 23rd st. nw., with the murder of her son-in-law, John Mims, 21, of the same address. She is accused of stabbing him in the chest with a four-inch knife Friday night.

Mims died at 7:55 p. m. Friday at Emergency Hospital. Police said the stabbing occurred during an argument at the 23rd st. address. Mrs. Howard was said to have accused Mims of mistreating her daughter, Mrs. Dolores Mims.

Mrs. Howard will appear at a coroner's inquest scheduled for noon Monday.

Two other stabbing victims were in serious condition at Gallinger Hospital yesterday, with their assailants still unidentified, police reported.

John Bridgewater, 27, of 1845 12th st. nw., was stabbed in the left side by a fellow-passenger on a bus. Bridgewater, who was with his wife on a southbound bus on Kenilworth ave. early yesterday, had objected to some cursing by the other man's girl companion.

The unidentified couple ran out of the bus after the man had stabbed Bridgewater during the argument.

In the other case, Robert Shines, 49, of 813 25th st. nw., got into a fight with an unidentified man in the 1200 block of Half st. se., early yesterday and was stabbed in the abdomen.

Glen Arden Man Held In Fatal Stabbing

John Hughes, 47, of Glen Arden, Md., was held by a coroner's jury Friday for action of the grand jury in the death of John Brown, about 35, also of Glen Arden.

Brown died at Casualty Hospital Thursday evening, a short while after being stabbed during a fight in the 100 block of Massachusetts ave nw., according to testimony. Police said Hughes surrendered voluntarily at the Ninth Precinct station house on Friday morning.

8 Groups To Convene This Week

The following eight groups will hold conventions in Washington this week:

Armenian Youth Federation of America, today through next Sunday, Wardman Park Hotel.

American Newspaper Guild, Monday through Friday, Hotel Statler.

Catholic Theological Society of America, Monday through Wednesday, Washington Hotel.

Delta Sigma Fraternity, Tuesday through Friday, Wardman Park Hotel.

Reserve Officers Association of the United States, Wednesday through Saturday, Mayflower Hotel.

Ninth Army Association, Friday and Saturday, Willard Hotel.

Fourteenth Air Force Association, Saturday through July 3, Mayflower Hotel.

Pan-Macedonian Federation, Saturday through July 4, Hotel Statler.

More Than $1,700,000 Pledged Jewish Appeal

Pledges and cash totaling more than $1,700,000 for the United Jewish Appeal campaign in Greater Washington were reported yesterday by Rabbi Isadore Breslau, general campaign chairman. The goal is $2,500,000 in 1950.

The formal part of the drive will end Wednesday with a 7 p. m. supper at the Indian Spring Club, Silver Spring, Md., but plans are being made to continue an informal campaign the rest of the year, Rabbi Breslau said.

The American Newspaper Guild, a CIO union of 25,000 newspaper and periodical employes, is considering entering the newspaper publishing business.

The proposal is due to come before the Guild's international executive board meeting today at the Statler, and is likely to come up before the seventeenth annual convention of the Guild, which opens here Monday.

The Guild has been increasingly concerned with the consolidation of daily newspapers in American communities, and the resulting monopoly of daily newspaper publications in some cities. Several Guild leaders have in recent months urged that the Guild take the lead in encouraging community unions and business to establish competitive newspapers in monopoly towns. Some would have the Guild pioneer in such a move.

Convention delegates, representing 178 daily and Sunday newspapers, 11 wire and news services, and 44 news magazines and periodicals, began to stream into Washington yesterday—some to attend meetings of the Hearst chain, Scripps-Howard chain, and Wire Service Councils.

Strike Support Pledged

The Scripps-Howard Council pledged moral and financial support for the Guild strike at the New York World-Telegram and Sun, and expressed gratitude to AFL locals which have respected picket lines and thereby kept the New York daily shut down for the past several days.

A cocktail party this evening, given by the host Washington Newspaper Guild, will highlight today's preconvention activities at the Statler.

This is the first time the Guild has met here since it was organized here in December, 1933. The Washington local was formed one month later.

Senator Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), who as chairman of the Senate District Committee is regarded as "mayor" of Washington, will deliver the principal welcoming address Monday morning to the 500 delegates convening in the Statler's Presidential Room. Harry Martin, ANG president, and Elsie Carper, local Guild president, will speak at the opening session.

Tuesday's meetings will be featured by a banquet session, with Morris Ernst, noted attorney, as speaker.

Truman to Set Precedent

President Truman will set a precedent on Wednesday by addressing the Guild convention. It will be the first time since he became Chief Executive that he will have addressed a labor organization. The speech, set for 4:30 p. m., will be broadcast over the CBS network. Earlier on Wednesday the convention will hear Paul G. Hoffman, ECA administrator.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson will be the chief speaker on Thursday, at 4 p. m., and on Friday, Jack Kroll, director of the CIO Political Action Committee, will address the convention at 10 a. m.

The convention will close Friday evening with a farewell cocktail party sponsored by the publishers of the four Washington daily newspapers.

The American Newspaper Guild yesterday levied a $2 a month assessment on all members to support a strike against the New York World-Telegram and Sun.

The assessments are effective Saturday and continue for six months.

Reserve Officers to Hear Talks by Truman and Johnson

Addresses by President Truman and Defense Secretary Louis Johnson will mark the opening session Wednesday of the four-day convention of the Reserve Officers Association here.

More than 600 delegates, representing every State of the union, are expected to attend the twenty-fourth national convention at the Mayflower Hotel. The group is composed of reserve officers from all armed service branches.

At 2 p. m. Tuesday, representatives of the ROA will place a wreath on the Arlington Cemetery grave of James Forrestal, first Secretary of Defense.

Opening session at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday will feature the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps and massing of colors of all the armed forces. The addresses of Secretary Johnson and President Truman will follow.

At the Wednesday afternoon session, the Army, Navy and Air Force sections will hold separate meetings, quizzing representatives of those branches on service matters. The separate meetings will continue Thursday morning.

Thursday afternoon, all delegates will hear talks by the national heads of the ROA, the National Guard Association, the American Legion, the Air Reserve Association and the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association.

Friday will be devoted to a business session, with a Marine Corps Band concert at 7:30 p. m. in the main ballroom, and a banquet and address by Army Secretary Frank Pace, jr., at 8 p. m.

National officers will be elected and installed Saturday and the convention is scheduled to adjourn at noon.

Jaycees Finishing Hospital Mission

At Medical Center

Post Planning Board Named By Army

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

There's a mightly unusual bunch of laborers working on an Arlington Hospital project these days.

Some are lawyers; one is an Army major; three are builders, contractors, life insurance men, merchants.

They are all members of the Arlington Junior Chamber of Commerce, which last year "adopted" the Anderson Orthopedic Hospital as its project, and has donated time and labor to complete it.

The mission is virtually accomplished. Short of a major catastrophe, the hospital will be able to offer its 40 beds and orthopedic care by Christmas of this year.

The beds themselves are already assured. They are one of many donations. Carpenters, bricklayers, steel workers, contractors, architects and trade-union men have pitched in and donated their skills. Businessmen have donated supplies.

Still needed is equipment for the kitchen and the laundry and asphalt tile for the floors in the two-story brick building.

L. Lee Bean, Arlington attorney and director of the hospital board, said contributions in cash are now increasingly welcome.

The Jaycees feel that most of the job is done now. Earlier this month, at the annual convention of the U. S. Junior Chambers of Commerce in Chicago, the Arlington Jaycee won highest honors for the hospital project.

Bean pointed out the project started when Dr. and Mrs. Otto Anderson Engh donated land on Army-Navy Drive just below the Anderson Clinc at S. 25th st for the hospital site. Dr. Engh, Bean said, also donated equipment for the hospital.

That, he said, is why the hospital is to bear the Anderson name. He said the hospital will operate on a non-profit basis. Bean said that while Dr. Engh will benefit from proximity of the hospital, so will other orthopedic surgeons in northern Virginia.

Most recent spurt in the hospital program came on June 16 and 17, when a carnival jointly sponsored by the Jaycees and the Northern Virginia Builders Association netted more than $5000 for the project.

138 Residents Treated for Home Injuries

Hospitals last week treated 138 residents injured in accidents at home. Among those treated were a 3-year-old who became unconscious after drinking wine and a 2½-year-old who ate talcum powder.

The District Red Cross Accident Prevention Service lists 62 falls, 8 burns, 3 accidental poisonings, 13 foreign bodies, 24 cuts and 28 miscellaneous injuries.

A firecracker exploded in the hand of a 7-year-old boy and burned his fingers. A 5-year-old boy was admitted to Episcopal Hospital for removal of an eye, which was injured by a stick.

The Red Cross reported one fatality from burns, another from a fall, and an elderly woman drowned in a bathtub.

Three children under 3 fell off porches without serious injury. Two babies bounced down steps in their strollers, and a 4-year-old drove his tricycle down his front steps.

A little boy accidentally slammed a door on his grandmother's finger, resulting in a compound fracture.

Two children amputated the tips of their fingers, one in an electric fan, the other in a tricycle spoke.

One boy was shot in the eye with a B-B gun and a 2-year-old was poisoned by swallowing contents of a toy chemical set.

The Red Cross reports 3071 home injuries and 90 deaths so far this year. Injuries and deaths for the same period last year were 3041 and 120.

Special Call Issued for Blood Donors

Anticipating the usual increase in accidents over the Fourth of July weekend, the Red Cross yesterday issued an urgent appeal for blood donors for this week.

"It is imperative that blood reserves totaling 800 pints be ready for distribution as called for by hospitals during the long weekend," Thomas H. Evans, administrator of the Washington Regional Blood Center, said.

The Metropolitan Police Department, Emergency Hospital authorities and the American Automobile Association joined the Red Cross in the appeal.

Dr. Lester Neuman, chief pathologist for Emergency Hospital, said:

"Without adequate supplies, many lives may be lost, as there can be no waiting period for blood. There will be many major and minor accidents that weekend which will require blood for treatment, so advance supplies of blood must be ready to avoid delay."

The Red Cross Blood Center, 1730 E st. nw., will be open Monday from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m., and Tuesday through Friday from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. Appointments are not required.

In addition the Bloodmobile will make four visits during the week:

Martinsburg, W. Va., at the First Presbyterian Church, 11 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday.

Alexandria, at Gadsby's Tavern, Royal and Cameron sts., 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Tuesday.

Leesburg, Va., at Lesburg High School, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m., Wednesday.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., at the Science Building, 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., Thursday.

Gambrell Baby Dies; Born With Tumor

Barbara Elizabeth Gambrell, 3 months old, died in Arlington Hospital yesterday between 8 and 9 a. m.

The child, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Gambrell, 1008 Birch st., Falls Church, had not even a fighting chance when it was learned that she had a malignant tumor from the time of her birth.

Official diagnosis of her case was hydroma of the throat. She had been in critical condition since her admission to the hospital late last month.

The Gambrell child made the news last month when a Washington veterans organization stepped in to offer financal assistance for her hospital care during the crisis over Hospital Service Agency funds.

The American Legion paid the hospital costs when Mr. and Mrs. Gambrell said it was impossible for them. Later other organizations helped. The Gambrells attempted to place the child in Children's Hospital when their own physician first advised it.

Arrangements were completed later for placement at Arlington, as which is nearer the Gambrell's Falls Church home.

Funeral arrangemnts were not complete last night.

Stack Removal Affects Parking

The Washington Post

LOST SPACE—A crew yesterday began removal of an unused 110-foot smokestack in the rear of the Coast Guard building, 1300 D st. nw. The project ruined the free parking plans of motorists accustomed to moving in on official spots unoccupied on weekends. Last week workmen found the stack yielded to the mere touch of the hand. Work will be done by sections—unless the stack collapses first

Special VD School to Open Here For Benefit of Medical Students

A VD School, termed the only one of its kind in the nation, is scheduled to open here Monday to train medical students for special venereal disease control work.

Classes in the school's week-long term will be held daily at the Municipal Center, 9 a. m. to noon, and 1 to 4 p. m., through Friday. Schoolmaster is Dr. S. Ross Taggart, director of the Health Department's bureau of venereal diseases.

From the group trained, it was disclosed, a number of the students will be selected for special work in the city's 28 census tracts which show highest incidence and prevalence of syphilis.

The summertime job for selected graduates consists of conducting questionnaires, distributing educational material on venereal diseases and collecting drops of blood for testing for syphilis.

All students enrolled in the VD school are in their senior year at Howard University Medical School, and are attending the special course on their own time. The project for which they are being prepared is awaiting approval of the United States Public Health Service.

The "Revolution" Isn't Just in Revolutions!

For once, performance has outdone advertising claims! To read the national ads, you might think that the big news in record-playing is that some records now revolve 33 1/3 times per minute, some 45 times and some 78 times.

Actually, the news is much more important. There has been a complete revolution in the quality of all recordings! Today's records are never tinny, never squeaky, never scratchy. Measured by frequency cycles, the fidelity of today's recordings are superior, by as much as 30%, to the best of the so-called "high-fidelity" records of pre-war years.

On a really fine reproducing instrument, like the Fisher, any new recording will absolutely amaze you with its remarkable clarity and range of tone. This decided difference is almost equally apparent on any phonograph.

Why don't you bring in one of your old records? Hear it on one of our players and then listen to the modern recording of the identical selection on the same phonograph. I think you will then agree that "the revolution in revolutions" is really a revolution in the quality of music recording.

WHAT DO YOU SEE IN YOUR CHILDREN'S EYES?

To only a few parents is given the wisdom of seeing, in the eyes of his child, the soul that the poet tells us is mirrored there. We cannot detect, and children cannot tell us, what hopes and longings and dreams are stirring in them . . . what creative capacities are locked in their little beings!

But even the ordinarily wise parent can give a child the opportunity to express himself . . . to demonstrate whether or not the creative urge is part of his make-up.

You may have thought that a musical education for your child is "too expensive to consider at this time." If so, Campbell's would like to remind you that it costs only $9.50 a month to put a new piano in your home on Campbell's popular Rental-Purchase Plan. So there is really no excuse for you to delay any longer giving your child the opportunity of learning whether or not he or she has musical talent!

Come in and talk with Mr. Leonard, who has guided hundreds of parents in their search to find the means of giving their children life-long happiness and satisfaction. He will be happy to talk with you, and give you the benefit of his wide experience in determining whether or not your child has a latent musical talent. There is, of course, no charge for this advice.

Ask for Mr. Leonard, on the third floor of Campbell's building at 1108 G Street N.W.

Campbell's Invites You to Play This Beautiful

Williamsburg by Sohmer

We would like you to come in and sit at the keyboard of the beautiful Williamsburg by Sohmer. We think that you will be amazed to find a console-spinet with so rich and brilliant a tone . . . in every register. The fact is that the string distribution of this Sohmer is more than 85% that of a grand piano.

But, as you will see, this is not the only reason Sohmer is called "The Musician's Spinet." The action is flawlessly smooth and accurate as well. In every respect but size this IS a "grand."

And as for beauty . . . your own good taste will tell you that the Sohmer Williamsburg recreates faithfully and authentically the console design of the 18th century. Campbell's is proud to invite you to play the Williamsburg by Sohmer, and happy to welcome your comparison of this superb instrument with any console-spinet at any price.

If you cannot come in for a demonstration write or telephone for illustrated catalogue

THE FISHER Georgian

Radio-Phonograph . . . $685

You who live graciously will particularly appreciate the exceptional quality of the Fisher "Georgian" as a period piece of authentic design and faultless craftsmanship. It is in every sense an ornament to the beautifully appointed home.

And as a musical reproducing instrument, the Fisher "Georgian" has no peer. Musicians, especially, will appreciate the Fisher Dynamic Range Expander (optional) that literally "puts the thrill back into music." The soul-stirring fortissimos that are so "pinched" by ordinary reproducing instruments are brought to you with complete concert-hall fidelity by the Fisher . . . each individual note of each instrument clearly discernible through every magnificent crescendo!

The complete story of the Fisher's superiority can only be told you by your own ears. Come in tomorrow for a demonstration . . . bring your own favorite records (any speed) and see how much better they sound on the Fisher! No obligation, of course.

Without Previous Musical Training You Can Easily Learn To Play the Hammond Organ

Try It In Your Own Home

Only $25 a month

You do not have to be able to play any other musical instrument to learn to play the magnificent Hammond Organ! You do not have to study for years . . . or even months . . . to become proficient. Although this is in every sense a complete organ, with dual manual and pedal keyboards, the Hammond is actually easier to master than many organs with far less tone and resonance!

In fact, Campbell's is so sure that you can learn to play the Hammond Organ in record time that we are willing to put a new Hammond in your home for only $25 a month, while you and your family learn to play.

Later, if you want to own your Hammond, all the rentals you have paid will apply on its low, low purchase price (only $1300 delivered).

Come in tomorrow, for sure, and ask for details. Have the Hammond Organ demonstrated . . . and take a complimentary private lesson. There is no obligation involved, and you may find a new source of entertainment that will give you and your family pleasure and satisfaction for all your lives!

500,000 See Martyr Raised to Sainthood

Vatican City, June 24 (AP).—Maria Goretti, who died at 11 defending her virtue, was raised to sainthood today before a half million Roman Catholic faithful, including her mother.

The newest saint, already the "Martyr of Purity," was hailed by Pope Pius XII as an exemplar for Catholic youth all over the world.

The country youth who stabbed her to death in 1902 when she would not submit to him, now a penitent sinner of 68, was absent but was reported "in prayer more intense than ever."

The slayer, Alessandro Serenelli, served 27 years in prison. Now he remains in seclusion as handyman and pig-tender at a Capuchin monastery, haunted by visions of his victim. She forgave him while dying from 14 stab wounds.

The ceremony was without precedent in the nearly 2000 years of Catholic history. Never before had a mother seen her child canonized. Never before had there been an open-air sanctification ceremony in Rome.

The ancient rite was carried out in St. Peter's Square because the Basilica, the world's largest church, could not hold the great Holy Year throngs wanting to attend.

The Vatican radio put the attendance at 500,000 when Pope Pius, surrounded by cardinals and bishops, named the country girl to the honors of the altar, to be forever venerated.

The Pope, robed in scarlet in token of Maria's martyrdom, spoke out in a strong voice for all before him and over the world to take the little saint as an example.

He referred to her as "a lily . . . the little sweet Martyr of Purity . . . who displayed supreme heroism in the face of hard daily labor."

In a place of special honor near the Pope's throne sat the saint's 56-year-old mother, known as Mother Assunta. She wept and cried: "My daughter, my daughter—my little Marietta!"

With her were two sons and two daughters: 62-year-old Angelo, who came from his home in New Village, N. J., and Mariano, Ersilia and Sister May of St. Alfred, a nun, who live in Italy.

The wax-preserved body of the saint herself was brought to Rome secretly from Nettuno—near the Anzio Beach of World War II—where she died. The body was exposed in the Basilica of SS. John and Paul for Veneration. A three-day service will be held there.

The Pope set July 6, anniversary of Maria's death, as her feast day for annual commemoration.

With Parsonage

Church Sets $3000 Pastor Pay Floor

Collegeville, Pa., June 24 (AP).—The General Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church today adopted a program for its ministers of "a living minimum of $3000 and parsonage."

The delegates to the eighth triennial meeting of the synod also indorsed the work of the Rev. Jefferson P. Rogers of Cleveland, young Negro clergyman who is the denomination's associate secretary for race relations.

The synod expressed the hope that "our colleges and seminaries will be opened to all qualified students."

The synod also indorsed a proposed International Christian University of Japan. Congregations were urged to contribute to the ten-million-dollar United States campaign directed by Joseph Grew, former United States Ambassador to Japan.

Merger Friends, Foes Get Posts on Study Committee

Cleveland, June 24.—Pro and anti-merger forces will be represented on a special study committee authorized today by the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches.

The council's executive committee is expected to name the new group at its next meeting. The study committee is to make a report at the next council session two years from now.

The council's tenth biennial session today authorized the establishment of the new committee to study "the principles and polity (form of government) of congregationalism."

It will try to discover methods by which free, self-governing individual church congregations can join in a "movement for Christian unity."

Swedish Church Group Opposes Vatican Envoy

Worcester, Mass., June 24 (AP).—The Baptist General Conference of America, a Swedish group representing 320 churches in the United States, Canada and Alaska, went on record today as being opposed to the appointment of a new United States envoy of the Vatican.

A resolution passed by the 1200 delegates said many persons call on President Truman to appoint another envoy to the Vatican, but "we go on record as supporting the separation of church and state."

Artist Inspires Hobby Show

The Washington Post

OLDER TALENT—Joseph Batton, 86, of 2924 Argyle dr., Alexandria, shown with one of his prize-winning paintings, has been named a member of the committee planning a hobby show to display the talents of older residents. Batton originated the plan which has been approved by the District Recreation Board

Talents of Older People to Be Displayed in Hobby Show

Talents of older residents are going to be displayed for all the world to see in a Washington hobby show next November.

Plans approved this week by the District Recreation Board, call for a hobby show in cooperation with United Community Services that will be open to all persons 60 or more years of age.

It will be patterned after similar shows that have proved popular in New York, Cleveland, Philadelphia and other cities. The show is expected to become an annual affair.

Originator of the plan to bring hidden talents out into the open in a Washington hobby show is 86-year-old Joseph Batton of 2924 Argyle dr., Alexandria.

Batton, whose pastels have won ribbons in the New York show in other years, has been named a member of the planning committee for the Washington show, of which Mrs. Albert W. Atwood is chairman and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle is vice chairman.

Mrs. Atwood said yesterday that the hobby show will afford an opportunity for the skills and productive interests of older persons to be brought to public attention and receive deserved recognition. She pointed out that "Washington is a place where many retire and many older persons live."

Abilities and skills of many older persons languish, she said, "for lack of recognition, because they feel that nobody cares."

The hobby show will encourage appreciation of these abilities, Mrs. Atwood said.

A Recreation Department spokesman said, "Washington has long needed to increase its activities for older people, for the mature years of life often bring a loneliness which is further emphasized by retirement from work and family responsiblity and Washington's quota of people in this bracket is high.

"The first annual hobby show is being designed to emphasize to people over 60 that this is just the period when new and creative activities are possible."

The planning committee includes: Mrs. O. G. Hankins, Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, Miss Mary Judge, of the Soroptimist Club; Comdr. Florence T. Judge, Eugene Merritt, Philip W. Breux, Duane Paul, Robert G. Hailey, Civil Service Commission; Mrs. Geneva K. Valentine, Miss A. Eliza Bell, Miss Lydia Burklin, Mrs. Gladys M. Krause, Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld, Mrs. Ursula G. Danforth, Business and Professional Women's Clubs; Mrs. Esther Costa, Council of State Societies; and William Bartlett, United Community Services.

Miss Sibyl Baker and John L. Young of the Recreation Department will assist the committee.

Also assisting are the following organizations and agencies: District of Columbia Federation of Clubs, Federal Security Administration, Federation of Churches, District Public Library, Board of Public Welfare, Interdepartmental Conference on Counseling, and Federal Recreation Committee.

Children's Story Magazine Planned For December

Story-a-Day, a projected weekly magazine which will contain stories for parents to read to small children, is in the planning stage, with the first issue scheduled for December.

Designed to be read to children aged 3 to 7, the magazine will contain 32 pages, and will be illustrated in two colors, with a newsstand price of 15 cents and a yearly subscription rate of $7.50, the magazine's sponsors announced.

President of Story-a-Day, Inc. is Charles Manchester of Charlotte, N. C. James F. Willett, assistant vice president of the American Security and Trust Co. of Washington is treasurer, and Kenneth Carpenter, Chicago, is director of promotion. Lucile Gulliver, a Boston literary agent, will edit the magazine.

'Miss Washington' Deadline Saturday

Deadline for entries in the 1950 "Miss Washington" beauty-talent contest has been extended to Saturday, it was announced yesterday by Radio Station WWDC and the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce, co-sponsors of the event.

The contest final is set for August 14 at the Sesquicentennial ampitheater in Rock Creek Park, near 16th st. and Colorado ave. nw. Contestants must be single, between 18 and 28, either high school graduates or seniors. They must live, work or attend school in the District. Awards and a scholarship offered are valued at $5500.

Alexandria to Elect School Board Members

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

What Is Past Is Prologue?

You have to go back, farther back in American history than reliable statistical records go, to discover anything like the industrial boom we're now having. Not even during and after the Civil War did the United States expand so persistently. What's more, the current boom sweeps on as if unstoppable, as if to set records which will never be broken.

Livingston

Since the start of the war in Europe, when United States production first responded to the spur of munitions demand, business has been in a rising phase about 80 percent of the time. We've had 102 months of industrial uptrend as against only 24 months downtrend.

Beside that, the Civil War boom is pallid. Industrial volume started up in 1861, two months after General Beauregard fired on Fort Sumpter, and lasted, with interruptions, into 1873. The war and post-war expansion embraced 98 months, offset by 50 months of contraction.

The World War I expansion, which lasted into 1929, comprised 121 months. But there were several interruptions, notably 1920-21 and 1923-24, and 1926, covering in all 53 months.

During the Civil War and World War I up-cycles, there were roughly, two months of expansion to one month of contraction. This time, the proportion is four to one. But the increase in industrial production from the start of the war to the peak of the expansion from 1915 into 1929, 190 percent, as against about 50 percent in the Civil War period, and 70 percent to date during this boom.

The Civil and World War I booms disintegrated into soul-searing depressions. The post-Civil War collapse lasted 65 months, from October 1873 to March 1879. Production skidded about 20 percent. But since the American economy then was largely agrarian, the drop in wholesale prices, amounting to 40 percent, more truly measures the Nation's economic distress. The post-world War I great depression, symbolized by the stock market crash of 1929, lasted 45 months and production declined 53 percent.

The Test of Tobin's Words

The question, implicit in the foregoing, is: Will this boom inevitably lead to another major depression? Or, can the country, as Secretary of Labor Tobin declared to a meeting of the International Labor Organizations in Geneva, Switzerland, escape?

Declared Tobin: "I do not believe we will ever again experience a major depression such as we had during the 'thirties. Any persons or nations who make their plans on the basis of an expected collapse in the United States are doomed to disappointment."

Tobin argued that social and economic legislation enacted since 1933 would prevent economic disintegration. He referred to unemployment compensation, farm price supports, old-age pensions, and the Employment Act of 1946, under which Washington can be expected to act when and if an economic slump occurs.

The Power of the Boom

Yet, no real test of the Government's skill and agility in dealing with a slump has yet occured to justify all-out assurance. The readjustment of 1949 stopped almost as soon as it got started. The Government never had a chance, never needed, to intervene. That was primarily a soft-goods recession.

What, however, will happen, if a serious hard-goods recession occurs, if the country is bought up on housing, automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, and such? Will the Government manage to prevent any deep decline in production and employment?

Meanwhile, the power, the persistence, of the current boom is reemphasized by the latest reports from the capital goods industries. Machine tool orders have risen to a four-year high and shipments are at a year-and-a-half peak. This is in keeping with the renewed uptrend in capital expenditures by business. Affirming this, May sales of copper were also at a four-year high, and the demand for steel continues unabated.

Flaws in the Picture

Consumer expenditures, notably on new homes and automobiles, make the wheels turn. New homes require all kinds of durable equipment—plumbing, refrigeration, stoves. Besides that, new home-owners are apt to buy washing machines, vacuum cleaners, furniture, curtains, carpets, and so on. To meet this demand, manufacturers, wholesalers, and retailers have been impelled to improve facilities.

Yet, all is not rosy. The solf-goods industries are doing better, but not doing well. Apparel sales are off about 30 percent from last year. Nor can the farmer say 1950 is a good year. His prices are down more sharply than the prices of the goods he buys, though recent advances in meat and grains have helped (see chart). Farm income from marketings in the first six months of 1950 is estimated at $10,600,000,000, or 9 percent less than in '49. And last year's receipts were off about 10 percent from 1948.

Mortgage Lenders Urged to Accept Full Role in Credit

Spring Lake, N. J., June 24 (AP).—Mortgage lenders were told today they must decide whether to accept the full role in mortgage credit or "by default, go down an easy road to nationalized housing credit."

F. Raymond Peterson, president of the American Bankers Association posed the problem today in a speech to the annual convention of the Savings Banks Association of New Jersey.

"On one hand, they are compelled by the Government's liberal mortgage credit policies and the constant threat of direct, socialized home loans by the Government to make every mortgage loan they possibly can.

"On the other hand, their knowledge of real estate financing and their experience with booms and busts of earlier real estate cycles have compelled them to lean more heavily upon the very guaranties and loan insurance which damage the fabric of sound lending and a sound real estate market."

Ohio Bell Phone Names Goetz Vice President

Cleveland, June 24 (AP).—Arthur B. Goetze, vice president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. with headquarters in Washington, D. C., has been named operating vice president of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co.

The Ohio Bell board of directors also named Goetze a member of the board and the executive committee. His appointment is effective July 1.

He succeeds John A. Greene, recently named president of the Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

Auto Engine to Cut Fuel Cost 40%—Kettering

Cleveland, Ohio, Jun 24 (U.P.).—Charles F. Kettering, retire dresearch engineer for General Motors, said yesterday that a new high compression engine and a new high-octane gasoline will be marketed next year that will save the motorist about 40 percent on fuel bills.

Kettering said the two developments were "five years ahead of theoretical schedule."

He said the new motor will have a compression ratio of about 12½ to 1 and will use 95 octane gasoline, to get efficiency.

Nee Appeals For Furniture Price Stability

By S. Oliver Goodman

A continued high level of furniture sales volume for the next six months was predicted by Maury Nee of Washington if manufacturers "hold the line" on prices.

Nee

Nee, president of the 9000-store National Retail Furniture Association, spoke at the Summer Home Furnishings Market in Chicago last week. More than 5800 buyers from every section of the country were registered.

Stressing the importance of price stability, Nee pointed to a recent survey showing that furniture stores average 4.09 percent profit on a sales dollar while paying 3.869 percent taxes.

He saw an increase of "well-styled, moderately priced furniture in the current market with the most complete selection since the war." Nee is treasurer of the P. J. Nee Co. which operates four furniture stores in the Washington area.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reports that Washington furniture sales in April leaped 14 percent over the same 1949 month. For the first four months, local furniture sales were reported 8 percent higher that last year.

BUILDING: Washington building permits in the first five months this year soared 47 percent over the same 1949 period, Dun & Bradstreet reported. The local total was $29,041,183 against $19,743,092 last year. The Nation's Capital ranked thirteenth among 215 leading cities during the period.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Fred W. Paget, formerly with Standard Brands, Inc., has been elected vice president and director of marketing for Carr-Consolitated Biscuit Co. The Washington office of Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co. will open tomorrow in new and larger quarters in the Wire Building, 1000 Vermont ave. . . . E. W. Virgin has succeeded Alexander T. Burton as eastern representative of North American Aviation, Inc., in Washington. Burton has been elevated to assistant to the company's president . . . James M. Skinner, jr., has been named general sales manager of the refrigeration division of Philco Corp.

SLOGAN: "Remember, it's your money!" Those words will be the recurring slogan of the life insurance business in its new 1950-51 advertising campaign. The Institute of Life Insurance said the campaign, which will open this week, is designed to help protect the buying power of savings. Each advertisement will urge that everyone do his share to lessen pressure on Government for more spending.

PROTECTION: More than seven million workers have acquired the protection of group life insurance since the end of the war, the Institute of Life Insurance reported. Such insurance added by worker groups since 1945 is about 20 billion dollars, the institute said. At the start of 1950, the aggregate outstanding was $40,200,000,000. It is now estimated to be over 42 billion dollars. Holgar J. Johnson, president of the institute, described the advance made by group life insurance since the war as "evidence of the progress made by the American people in developing their security on a voluntary basis and, furthermore, that management and labor are working together effectively to achieve this end."

CHAIRMEN: New committee chairman for the D. C. Association of Insurance Agents were announced yesterday by President V. Manning Hoffman as follows: Victor O. Schinnerer, publicity and advertising; Robert Burns, educational; Henry King, legislative; Robert S. Campbell, membership; Henry C. Young, program; Herbert M. Pasewalk, attendance; George C. Howard, jr., grievance; W. Perry Early, agents advisory, and John H. Pumphrey, finance and auditing.

ECONOMY: Abandon the philosophy that increased expenses are "inevitable" in Government, J. Harold Stewart urged certified public accountants at a regional conference in Wilmington, Del. Stewart, president of the American Institute of Accountants, told the group to participate actively in programs to reduce costs. Henry P. Seidemann and Joseph G. Motika, both of Washington, were other speakers.

Maryland Tobacco

Upper Marlboro, Md., June 24 (AP).—Average prices were generally steady for most grades of tobacco auctioned on the southern Maryland leaf tobacco auction floors this week.

The Federal-State Market News Service reported net auction sales totaled 1,806,432 pounds and brought an average price of $47.75 per hundredweight.

The price average was the lowest for any week this season and was $1.90 under that of the previous week. Quality of offerings was lower.

Grade averages as a whole were relatively stable, although small fluctuations of $1 to $2 occured for several grades. Losses in tip grades were compensated for by gains in seconds.

Volume continued fairly light. However, sales increased by about 260,000 pounds over the previous week.

A small increase in the percentage of heavy drop and poorer grades lowered the general quality of marketings.

Deliveries to the Maryland Tobacco Cooperative under the Government loan program amounted to about 5 per cent of the net auction sales for the week. Receipts of the cooperative now stand at approximately 3 per cent for the season.

Net receipts of the Baltimore hogshead market for the season were reported as around 3,564,000 pounds. This, combined with net auction sales, totals about 25,200,000 pounds.

Auction bid averages per 100 pounds, with changes from last week, on a limited number of representative U. S. grades:

Heavy crop: Good cherry-red, 66, unchanged; fair cherry-red, 62, up 2; fair red, 38, up 1; fair green, 18.50, unchanged; low red, 25, unchanged.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 24 (AP).—Soybeans took another drop on the Board of Trade today. The July contract led the way, falling more than 5 cents and ending only a shade above the session's low.

Action of beans did not have much influence on the rest of the market. Feed grains showed flashes of strength, oats again being in demand on rather small cash receipts.

Wheat closed ⅜ lower to ⅛ higher, corn ⅛ lower to ¾ higher, oats ⅛-1 higher, rye unchanged to ⅛ lower, soybeans 1¼-3½ lower and lard 5 to 10 cents a hundred pounds lower.

The action of soybeans produced a new unconfirmed rumor—this one that Manchuria had offered 500,000 bushels of cash beans for sale to the United States. Recently Manchurian soybeans were sent to Japan in a barter deal, taking the place of American beans.

Rally in Stocks Seen Based on Trade Figures

New York, June 24 (AP).—The 1949-50 bull stock market let out a bellow of defiance this week after its worst licking in a year.

Some 10 days ago the market went into a slump that lasted until Tuesday morning.

Tuesday afternoon the turn came in a slow rally. In the next two days about half of the loss was regained and the bull market appeared to be on solid ground once more.

The financial prophets who had predicted a short downward adjustment appeared to be right. Some die-hards claimed that another shake-out was still to be faced, but there was not much enthusiasm in Wall Street for the viewpoint.

The market's evident toughness and ability to absorb liquidation was easy to understand after a glance at the day-to-day business news. Record-high production schedules were commonplace, corporate profits were piling up, dividends expanding.

Earlier this year, for instance, Chrysler production was halted by a costly 100-day strike. Thursday directors of the company decided they were able to raise the quarterly dividend.

Keyserling's Views

Dr. Leon Keyserling, top adviser to the President on economic affairs, said during the week that post-war "real" prosperity is at a peak. He defined "real" output as production after adjustment for changes in the dollar.

The market, in short, has not enjoyed—if that's the word—the high-priced prosperity of other businesses.

This sober approach won the market a touch of official approval later this week.

Harry A. McDonald, chairman of the Securities & Exchange Commission, said at a press conference in San Francisco that the stock market "can be considered as swinging in a safer area" than was the case in 1929 or 1946. Business is good, he stated, earnings are good, stocks are selling at fewer times earnings than in 1946 or 1929, and corporation reserves, surpluses, net quick assets, and working capital are infinitely better than in those years.

Common Knowledge

McDonald's summation is common knowledge in the financial district and a source of consolation to those brokers who fear speculative orgies worse than a declining market.

McDonald added, that his remarks should not be considered as advice to buy stocks.

The market's rally was notable on several points. For one thing, it was still a blue chip market. The same high grade stocks which were pushed down a week earlier led the comeback.

For another thing, merchandising shares finally attracted considerable buying support. For many months merchandise stocks have been shrugged off by brokers and their clients. This was chiefly because sales of hard goods—electric appliances, automobiles, and such—stole the retail show.

A revival in consumer interest in soft goods, such as wearing apparel, seems to be shaping up and stocks affected have responded accordingly.

Rising Housing Quality Predicted for Nation

New York, June 24 (AP).—Higher quality, housing will be the next great advance in the American standard of living, Thomas S. Holden, president of F. W. Dodge Corp., said today.

"The market for custom-built houses and the quality products that go into them is already definitely on the upswing," he said.

The statements by the president of the Dodge Corp., construction news and marketing specialists, were made in an article to be published in the Architectural Record.

3 Senators Are Reported Drafting Riders to Force Reductions in Budget Bill

These are the latest developments on the all-important general budget bill now before the Senate Appropriations Committee:

1. Three different Senators are reported to have drafted their own economy riders. They're threatening to introduce them from the Senate floor unless the Senate Appropriations Committee makes sharp cuts in the President's budget.

2. Several committee members have suggested that the House-approved Jensen rider be modified to exempt custodial and other low-graded employes from it and to prohibit agencies from filling 50 percent of their other vacated jobs. As voted by the House, the Jensen rider would force most agencies to abolish 90 percent of their vacated jobs.

3. The committee hasn't been able to agree on a substitute to the House-approved Taber-Thomas rider, which would force agencies to save 600 million dollars by reducing personnel, employe travel, and funds for equipment, supplies, rent, etc. Members are arguing over whether to make specific budget cuts or to make one single slash by an over-all rider.

4. Appropriation Subcommittees are traveling in different directions. For example:

The Military Subcommittee headed by Senator Thomas (D., Okla.) is reported to have cut more than 50 million from the budgets of Army, Navy and Air Force, or about the same amount that would be saved by Taber-Thomas;

Very few cuts were made in the Labor-Federal Security chapter by its subcommittee, whose chairman is Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.);

Cuts equaling those provided under the Taber-Thomas rider were recommended in the budgets of State, Commerce and Justice Departments by a subcommittee whose chairman is Senator McCarran (D., Nev.). The FBI is one of the few agencies that would be permitted to increase its staff;

Modest cuts, reported to average from 2 to 5 percent, have been recommended in the budgets of the Treasury and Post Office Departments by a subcommittee headed by Senator Maybank (D., S. C.), and,

Only scattered reductions, it is said, were recommended in the budgets of Agriculture, Interior, and the two-score independent offices. The Agriculture budget is managed by Senator Russell (D., Ga.); Interior's by Senator Hayden (D., Ariz.), and independent offices by Senator O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.).

The actions of the different subcommittees are only tentative. It's agreed that the subcommittees are to follow the instructions of the full committee, which takes final action. In other words, the full committee could order, for example, send the Labor-FSA budget back to its subcommittee with directions to make a certain amount of specific budget cuts. On the other hand, it could order cuts restored in the budgets for State, Commerce, Justice and the military agencies.

The objective is a workable overall rider that would make about the same percentage of cuts in most agencies, a modification of the Taber-Thomas rider. Since the committee hasn't been able to agree on one, a compromise Jensen rider to prohibit a certain percentage of vacant jobs from being filled has been put forward.

Committee insiders seem convinced that some sort of an overall rider will have to be adopted at some point. They make these convincing arguments: (1) that the House adopted Taber-Thomas by an unusually large vote; (2) that several Senators who aren't Appropriations Committee members are prepared to wage a floor fight for an "economy" rider that would go further than anything the committee would indorse, and (3) that each specific budget cut recommended by the Appropriations Committee will have to be voted on separately by the Senate. This procedure, they believe, would lead to endless debate and very few cuts.

Meantime, several Senate members of the farm bloc are prepared to fight any attempt to make any sizable cut in the Agriculture budget. A bloc of Western Senators will oppose reductions in reclamation, irrigation, and public power spending. The veterans' and welfare agencies have their Senate friends who will fight budget cuts for them. And so it goes. If the different blocs get together and vote as a unit the Senate will not make many cuts in the President's budget.

It will be another week or two before the big budget bill gets out of the Senate committee. The committee will begin hearings Monday on the military assistance program and funds for it as well as for the Economic Cooperation Administration will be added to the single budget bill. A separate bill for ECA and military assistance had been planned at one time.

Salvation Army Camp Drive Passes Halfway Mark

With more than $6000 received, the Salvation Army's summer camp fund appeal has passed the halfway mark, it was announced yesterday.

Achievement of the goal will enable the army to send 700 youngsters to its two camps this summer.

Both are currently open and operating at full capacity. Among the campers is a group of youngsters from the Industrial Home School. The camps are located at Patuxent, Md., and Triangle, Va.

$787,956 Estate Bequeathed in Will Of Hattie Strong

Education Project Son and Family Left Sums of Money

Mrs. Hattie M. Strong, who died June 6, left an estate valued at $787,956, according to District Court probate files yesterday.

Under the will, $250,000 was given to the Hattie M. Strong Foundation, which she founded in 1928 to make educational loans to students of all countries.

Mrs. Strong left $125,000 to her son, Col. L. Corrin Strong, 2712 32d st. nw., $50,000 to his wife, and $25,000 to each of their three children.

The remainder of the estate will be divided between the foundation and Colonel Strong.

Mrs. Strong, 85, was the widow of Henry Alvah Strong, president for many years of the Eastman Kodak Co. She made her bequests "in loving memory of my dear husband, whose generosity made them possible."

Mrs. Strong earmarked her $250,000 contribution to the foundation for "charitable, religious, and educational" institutions to be designated by her trustees. Before she died, Mrs. Strong donated the Hall of Government and the Strong Hall Dormitory to the George Washington University, and Strong residence to the YWCA here.

Her estate consisted of $81,000 in cash, $13,000 in jewelry, and $682,700 in securities.

Mrs. Strong died in Winston-Salem, N. C., but had lived at the 32d st., address for more than 25 years.

A. J. Horn Named Research Head By Trade Board

Selection of a staff and work schedule for its new Municipal Research and Tax Department was announced yesterday by the Washington Board of Trade.

Horn

Albert J. Horn, former executive secretary of the Toledo (Ohio) Chamber of Commerce, has been named manager. A special advisory committee to the fact-finding department will be headed by John A. Reily, former Board of Trade president.

The department was created in May to study the District government with an eye to reducing its cost. According to the board announcement it has been given these assignments for the coming months: prepare "effective presentations" of why the Federal payment to the District should be higher and property taxes lower; examine costs of local government; review sales and income tax laws; study the District Unemployment Compensation Law.

'Influence' Effort

Contempt Case Aired By Judge

Judge Charles W. Woodward clarified for the press yesterday his finding a 19-year-old youth in contempt of court for mailing a letter written to the judge by the youth's mother.

The contempt was in attempting to influence the court in a case still pending, the judge said.

"A maintenance case is a continuing case and one in which the judge may change the amount at any time. The letter clearly was an attempt to influence the judge to grant more money."

The letter was written by Mrs. Kathleen C. English, 49, of Burnt Hills, Silver Spring, Md., after Judge Woodward reduced the maintenance her husband was paying her from $530 a month to $250.

The husband, Beryl E. English, 57, operator of a Silver Spring filling station and former general manager of the county liquor dispensary system, had contended he was losing money in the filling station. The letter stated that he had told the boy, Alan R. English, 19, that he was making plenty of money.

The judge summoned the Englishes into Montgomery County Circuit Court to check on this statement and discovered that the youth had mailed the letter. The mother testified that she wrote it after the hearing but had decided not to send the letter after her attorney, F. Barnard Welsh, advised against such action.

The son found the letter on the table and mailed it without his mother's knowledge, it was testified. The mother offered a plea for her son and the judge decided to consider the case for a few days before imposing sentence.

Col. Brett, Wife Die in Auto Crash

General Hayes Learns Of Daughter's Death In California Accident

Col. William P. Brett, USAF, 35, who was stationed at the Pentagon from 1945 to 1947, and his wife, Mary Louise Brett, 32, sister of Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Hayes 3d, Assistant District Engineer Commissioner, were killed in an auto crash yesterday in California.

Mrs. Brett's father, Maj. Gen. Thomas J. Hayes of 704 Villa Ridge rd., Falls Church, Va., was notified of the tragedy at Walter Reed Hospital, where he is under treatment.

He was attempting last night to reach Mrs. Hayes and his other son, Theodore L. Hayes of Philadelphia, who were on a trip to Canada.

Commanded Bomb Wing

The accident occurred near North Sacramento, Calif., a short distance from the Fairfield-Suisun Air Force Base, where Colonel Brett was commander of the Ninth Bomb Wing of the Strategic Air Command, a B-36 unit.

Lieut. Col. Gove Cello, jr., who was driving the car in which Col. and Mrs. Brett were riding, and Mrs. Celio were injured critically. Colonel Celio is deputy commander of the Ninth Wing.

The Associated Press quoted a patrolman as saying that the car driven by Colonel Celio hit another automobile broadside. Three of five youths in the other car were hospitalized.

A native of San Antonio, Mrs. Brett was married to Colonel Brett in 1938 after his graduation from West Point. She and her husband lived at the Falls Church address when he was stationed here from June, 1945, through May, 1947.

Three Children Survive

She is survived by three young children, Thomas, Robert and Mary, besides her parents and her brothers.

A native of Statesboro, Ga., Col. Brett served more than a year in the Pacific and the China-Burma-India theater. As a B-29 pilot he received the Flying Cross and Oak Leaf Cluster for his daring in taking pictures over Luzon before the invasion of the Philippines by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces.

He was sent back to the United States after being injured in a vehicle accident in India in 1945.

Col. Brett is survived by two sisters, who live in Georgia.

D. C. Independence Day Fete Tickets Go on Sale Monday

Mary Jane Hayes, "Miss Washington of 1949," will officially open ticket sales for the Capital's Sesquicentennial Year celebration of Independence Day, Monday at 10 a.m.

Assisted by candidates for the "Miss Washington of 1950" title, Miss Hayes will dedicate the trailer ticket office in front of the District Building.

The trailer ticket office features a giant "scroll of freedom," which visitors may sign.

The fireworks display at the Washington Monument grounds is slated to be bigger than ever. The Army, Navy and Marine Corps Bands will supply music. The program also includes the Sesquicentennial Chorus, a historic pageant and speakers.

Tickets sell for half as much as last year: 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children.

Tickets are also on sale at the American Automobile Association, Willard Hotel, Keystone Auto Club, Greater National Capital Committee, Evening Star Building, Government Services Inc., Internal Revenue Building, Washington Monument police lodge, and the Information Center at 1400 Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Heat Hits 96 Degrees, Sets 20-Year Record for Date

nearly empty, people walked more slowly, women's costumes were briefer.

District Health Officer Dr. Daniel Seckinger issued this communique: "Worshipers of sun, be sensible . . ."

The Weather Bureau's map for Friday proved to be the weekend's hottest reading. Printed on the back of the map, in a cool and refreshing green, was a lengthy and technical missive entitled, originally enough: "It Isn't the Heat, It's the H-U-M-I-D-I-T-Y."

Evaporation is the key to the whole business. If there's too much humidity—moisture—in the air, perspiration doesn't evaporate too well. This makes for discomfort.

"Movement of the air helps evaporation," the Weather Bureau says. Keeping out the sun also helps, since "the direct rays of the sun tend to increase discomfort on hot, humid days."

This advice is seconded by Dr. Seckinger.

If you get a sunburn, he suggests, try wet tea bags applied to the afflicted area. But make it a continuing process: "Do not dry the parts of the body on which the tea was applied."

Above all, contain that "'inner urge' to get some sun."

"The big-muscled people who seek exercise in the sun . . . should be alert to prevent heat exhaustion or sunstroke," warned Dr. Seckinger.

"Unless a person is constantly without a hat to cover the head, it is foolhardy to engage in any strenuous activity bareheaded because of the 'inner urge' to get some sun." Any light cap or hat is recommended by the health officer.

From all indications yesterday, most Washingtonians were keeping out of the sun. The zoo reported a small attendance because of the heat.

Capitol, Monument Area Prove Popular Sites for Liberty Bell

The Washington Monument Grounds, Lincoln Memorial, Jefferson Memorial, in or about the Capitol, and the Mall, are popular choices for permanent location of the District's Liberty Bell replica.

That is indicated by entries in The Washington Post's Liberty Bell Contest—ending tonight—for suggestions as to the best site for the replica of the Liberty Bell that is now being carried around the city on a truck as part of the Treasury Department's Independence Savings Bond Drive.

Readers' suggestions are varied and stimulating, however. Here are some of them:

J. P. H., Brentwood, Md.—". . . the rotunda of the Capitol beside Patrick Henry's statue, for his famous saying, 'Give me liberty or give me death.'"

S. J. F., New Hampshire ave, nw.—". . . center of Union Station waiting room because millions of people come and go from all parts of the United States and foreign countries and it will be easily seen and remembered."

S. R., Newton st. ne.—". . . in large courtroom where citizenship oaths are administered. Competent speakers should explain flag, bell at ceremonies."

M. L. Z., 25th st. se.—". . . where George Washington spent his last night in the Federal City, 2618-20 K st. nw."

H. L. H., S. Nash st., Arlington, Va.—". . . at the entrance to Arlington Cemetery."

G. V. L., Hyattsville, Md.—". . . over Department of Justice Building."

S.J.F., Kansas ave. nw.—

Hang me here on the Sesqui grounds,
My joy to peal here knows no bounds."

F. J. H., Girard st. nw.—"Post Square is where the Liberty Bell should be."

S.J.F., New Hampshire ave nw.—

"Let light shine upon this replica of the Liberty Bell
Near a place that has housed the Declaration of Independence well.
(The Library of Congress.)"

R. R. C., Hyattsville, Md.—"suggest that the clapper be muffled, the bell swathed in crape, and hung in the office of the Chairman of the House District Committee, in recognition of his attitude toward the proposed restoration to the residents of the District of the basic right of suffrage."

D. F., 19th st. nw.—"I think the Liberty Bell should be put on the top steps of the Lincoln Memorial. Lincoln's ideals stood for 'peace to all men.'"

A. V. D., 20th st. nw.—". . . In front of the Capitol . . . Both represent the symbol of Americanism for all creeds, colors and religion."

Woman Among 10 Arrested as Police Break Up Dice Game

Undercover Man Had Tried Luck Prior to Foray

Police interrupted a dice game early yesterday and arrested 10 persons, including a woman said to have been operating the game.

Among those arrested was Miss Reedell Jones, 40, who, police said, was operating and cutting the dice game in her home at 113 I st. nw.

An undercover policeman had played in the game on several occasions. On the basis of his information, 11 men from the First Precinct descended on the session at 12:30 a. m., armed with a United States Commissioner's war ant.

Although the undercover man had reported Miss Jones usually took the house share out of the game, police said they found LeRoy Rivers, 30, also of the I st. address, performing that chore when they entered.

They searched the place and found numbers books and slips. Miss Jones was charged with setting up a gaming table and possession of numbers slips.

Rivers was charged with setting up a gaming table. A third man, Warren George Payne, 30, of 130 L st. nw., was charged with possession of numbers slips.

These three and seven alleged crapshooters were hauled to the First Precinct in a patrol wagon. The seven players were charged with disorderly conduct and forfeited $5 collateral each.

Miss Jones was released in $1500 bond and Rivers and Payne in $500 bond each when arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence. Their cases were continued until July 12.

City Vs. County

Annexation Court Battle To Continue

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Fairfax County and the City of Falls Church will resume their annexation dispute Tuesday at 10 a. m. in Fairfax Circuit Court after a three-day recess.

With a week of the trial completed, attorneys for Falls Church have barely passed the half-way mark in their efforts to convince the court the city is entitled to 10.75 square miles of county territory lying to the south, west and east of the present city. City Attorney Larue Van Meter said yesterday it may be the end of the week before the city's side of the case is completed.

Much of the testimony so far has been designed to acquaint the three-judge annexation court with the territory involved in the suit, the population growth and other pertinent factors. Although Judge Paul E. Brown of Fairfax, is familiar with the area, both Judges J. R. H. Alexander and Burnett Miller are relative strangers, coming from "neutral counties."

May Challenge Figures

Attorneys for the county have not tipped their hand as to the nature of their defense, but can be expected to challenge some of the Falls Church financial estimates affecting property in the disputed area. Last week, the city set a $1,446,000 value on county schools it would take over if it wins the suit, and came up with a $77,622.70 figure as its share of the cost of sewers.

"We'll have our own figures when the time is right," remarked Robert J. McCandlish, jr., engaged by the county to assist in the defense.

In a further effort to bolster its case, Falls Church last week contended it could save water consumers outside the city about $19,000 a year if they become part of the city. It cited its own water system which, it claimed, can adequately serve the entire area at lower rates.

Economist Aids City

One highlight of the city's case was a report by a Richmond economist on the county's tax resources. To counter an expected defense claim that the county will suffer the loss of valuable real estate holdings if the annexation is approved, William H. Stauffer expressed the belief the county could lose one-fifth of its taxable wealth and still be the second county in the State in taxable wealth.

Stauffer said the county also could lose one-seventh of its population without affecting its wealth rating with other Virginia counties.

The city can be expected to call up additional "experts" this week to support its claim that it can support the added territory financially if the annexation is successful. It also will attempt to prove that the "annexable zone," being urban in nature, will benefit more by a city government than by the existing agricultural-type of administration in the county.

County Government Talk Set Tuesday

Jerrold V. Powers, attorney to the Prince Georges County Commissioners, will discuss the administration of county government under the Sothoron Plan at a meeting of the 14th District Democratic Club Tuesday at 8 p. m. in Odd Fellows Hall, Bowie.

Voters Asked To Suggest Names For Primary Slate

Precinct officials and registered Democratic voters will be asked to suggest the names of likely candidates for the Montgomery County Democratic primary election September 11.

Letters were sent by the Victory Committee for the Democratic Party to 850 Montgomery precinct officials, civic groups and voters yesterday asking them for guidance and help in order that men and women of the highest type may be found for these offices and an outstanding slate may be formed.

G. LaMar Kelly, mayor of Rockville, chairman of the committee, said his group had agreed to recommend candidates for the primaries since the Democratic State Central Committee has voted to keep hands off in the primary elections.

"We believe that this is the first time that the people at the precinct have been asked to help select candidates," Mayor Kelly said. The suggestions should be sent before July 1, he said.

J. H. Richards, Jr. Gets GWU Post

James H. Richards, jr., for two years librarian at Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., has been named assistant librarian of George Washington University, it was announced yesterday by President Cloyd Heck Marvin.

Effective July 1, Richards will replace Mason Tolman, who has been appointed acting reference librarian of the New York State Library in Albany.

Richards received B. A. and M. A. degrees from Wesleyan University and a B. S. degree in library science from the School of Library Service, Columbia University, in 1947. He and his family will live at 362 Belleview dr., Falls Church, Va.

President to Lay Courthouse Stone

President Truman will take a silver trowel in hand shortly after 3 p. m. Tuesday and lay the cornerstone of the new United States Courthouse at Constitution ave. and John Marshall pl. nw.

The program includes music by the United States Marine Band and addresses by the President, Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court and Walter C. Clephane of the District Bar Association.

The invocation will be pronounced by the Rev. Joseph Moran, pastor of St. Thomas Apostle Church, and the benediction of the Rev. Ariel Nathaniel Warner of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Mass. ave. nw. Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens of the United States Court of Appeals will preside.

Placed in the cornerstone will be numerous documents, pictures of courts, judges and other dignitaries, lists of judges and members of bar groups and copies of each of the daily newspapers carrying accounts of the event.

To Be Completed by 1952

The rising 13 million-dollar tribunal will be completed by late 1951 or early 1952. It will house the District Court, the United States Court of Appeals and their adjuncts. At present, they are spread over 12 buildings.

The six-story building is being constructed of limestone and granite with a skeleton of reinforced concrete. Air-conditioned throughout the structure is designed for convenience of the layman.

Innovations include clubroom-type lounges for witnesses and jurors, conference rooms for laymen litigants and witnesses as well as lawyers, and a 10-room health unit.

On the top floor of the building will be a suite of rooms for jurors locked up for the night. Separate bedrooms and showers are provided.

'Biggest and Best'

When completed the new building will be the biggest and best Federal court house, according to court officials. Features have been borrowed from model tribunals, and other ideas have been contributed by local judges and building experts.

What disposition will be made of the old buildings is uncertain, but the Court of Claims or the Court of Patent and Customs Appeals may be moved into them. It has been suggested that the ancient District Court be turned into a city museum.

The new building is situated on the site of the home of John Marshall, first Chief Justice of the United States.

At Williamsburg

Glory Drama Set to Open On July 1

Williamsburg, Va., June 24 (AP).—The curtain will rise for the fourth season on "The Common Glory," Paul Green's symphonic drama of the birth of the American Nation in the heart of the Virginia peninsula, at 8:15 p. m. July 1 at Lake Matoaka Amphitheater.

With the beginning of the 1950 season, a quarter of a million Americans and many visitors from foreign countries will have seen Green's depiction of the struggle for independence.

The drama is termed a symphonic production because in it the playwright has utilized all of the arts of the theater, acting, singing, dancing, music, pantomime, lights and narration to achieve a sweeping symphony of history, romance and comedy.

The ensemble of "The Common Glory" is composed of 52 speaking characters, a 32-voice choir, a 22-dancer ballet, 25 technicians, a production staff of 12, and a 13-piece orchestra conducted by John Satterfield. The whole is staged under the personal supervision of Green.

Takoma Church Unit Cornerstone Laying Set Today

Ceremonies marking the laying of the cornerstone for the new $225,000 educational building of the Takoma Park (Md.) Presbyterian Church, Maple and Tulip aves., will be held today at noon following the service.

The new church school replaces the old Union Chapel erected in 1888 and the first building used for religious purposes in the city.

Participating in today's program will be the Rev. R. Paul Schearer, pastor since 1929; the Rev. Richard L. Smith, assistant pastor, the building committee headed by Dr. John R. Magness, and city officials.

The building will be completed by December. It will have three stories housing the nursery and kindergarten departments of the church school, a chapel, assembly rooms for primary and junior departments, an office, assembly and recreation rooms.

Safety Program Discussion Slated

Safety recommendations for tank truck operation in rural and city areas will be discussed by the board of directors of the National Tank Truck Carriers, Inc., at a meeting Monday and Tuesday at the Mayflower Hotel.

If approved, the recommendations will be made part of the group's safety program, inaugurated two years ago. Annual awards to companies with the best safety records are made at the NTTC annual meeting October 21 and 22 in New York.

Ex-Congressman to Talk To GOP Women's Group

Former Representative Calvin D. Johnson (R., Ill.) will speak at the annual summer meeting of the Federation of Republican Women of Montgomery County, to be held in Rockville, Md.

The event will be held at South Lawn Farm, the estate of Anders Lofstrand, jr., member of the Maryland House of Delegates, and Mrs. Lofstrand, Horner Lane.

Free Inspection Service Set Up To Prevent Boating Mishaps

Last July the 36-foot cabin cruiser Halcyon exploded with a blast that shook the Corinthian Yacht Club, demolished the pleasure boat, and killed two.

Officials blamed gasoline fumes in the bilge, touched off when the boat's engines started.

Two weeks later, a small fishing boat was blasted apart at Seneca, Md. A 6-year-old boy was severely burned. "Gas fumes," Montgomery County police said.

Free Inspection

To avoid such accidents, Coast Guard Auxiliary inspectors now are checking power boats up to 65 feet in length in the Washington area. It's free.

They do the job much as auto inspectors check over your family buggy—only auxiliary members are unpaid civilians and pleasure boat owners themselves.

This inspection is "optional." But if your Minnie Zilch doesn't cruise with its Coast Guard Auxiliary inspection sticker, the Coast Guard cutter is likely to stop you and find out why.

Just Trying to Help

"We're not acting as policemen—we're just trying to help boat owners," Allan A. Carney, the auxiliary's captain, explained.

Uniformed inspectors check the eight safety features required by the Coast Guard. They watch particularly for empty fire extinguishers, poor ventilation of bilges, leaky gas lines and lights blocked from another boat's view. They check life preservers. This job takes only 20 minutes.

If the boat owner wants it, he can get the elaborate, 30-point checkover which takes two hours—and covers many safety points not required by Coast Guard regulations.

Mrs. Braden Dies; Ex-Diplomat's Mother

New York, June 24 (AP).—Mrs. William Braden, 78, mother of Spruille Braden, former Ambassador to Argentina and one-time Assistant Secretary of State, died yesterday.

Mrs. Braden, a resident of New York City, was a native of Concord, N. H.

Her late husband, a mining engineer, founded the Braden Copper Co., of Chile and was director of operations for the Andes Exploration Co.

Maryland U. Seeks Building Approval

The University of Maryland is going to ask Governor Lane and the General Assembly to approve a new $13,735,890 building program.

The new program, calling for 57 separate projects in Baltimore, College Park, Princess Anne and elsewhere, was approved Friday by the University Board of Regents.

The board asked for $970,000 for a housing program at College Park. An agricultural program costing $1,765,000 was recommended. Other proposed College Park projects would cost $6,850,525, including two million dollars for a general library.

As drawn up by the board, $553,865 would be spent in Baltimore, including $400,000 for a new central library. Funds also were asked for improvement of the Garrett County camp, the Howard County Animal Research Farm, the Southern Maryland Tobacco Farm, and the Poultry Research Station in Salisbury.

Construction items for Princess Anne included $400,000 for two men's dormitories; $200,000 for a women's dormitory; $375,000 for a library building and books; $300,000 for a home economics building and equipment; $200,000 for an auditorium and equipment as part of the agriculture building; $450,000 for a chemistry and physics building and equipment; $250,000 for a student activities building and swimming pool; $300,000 for a men's field house and gymnasium.

The program as advanced by the Board of Regents is in addition to a 16-structure, $3,400,000 program to be constructed by the university building authority with funds from the sale of revenue bonds.

U. S. Officials Asked to Take Care in Firings

The criterion for firing Federal employes should be the discredit they reflect on the Government, rather than their personal morals, Dr. Robert Felix, head of the National Institute of Mental Health, told Federal personnel officers last week.

Employes should not be fired because they are homosexuals, or alcoholics, or gamblers, he said, but because they have discredited their Government.

Dr. Felix talked on the psychological problems of personnel administration at the request of the Health and Safety Committee of the Government. His informal talk was repeated to three groups of officials.

Dr. Felix described the psychological makeup of homosexuals primarily, but included as "personnel problems," promiscuous persons, gossips, thieves, alcoholics and horseplayers.

"None of these persons should be in sensitive positions," he told personnel officers. He emphasized he was speaking as a psychologist, not as a person familiar with the legal, administrative or policy aspects of firings.

Aviation Education Conference Will Open Wednesday at GW

An Aviation Education Conference will open Wednesday at George Washington University under sponsorship of the school of education and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Principals and teachers from elementary and secondary schools in the District, Maryland, Virginia and seven other States have been invited to the meeting, which runs through Friday.

Following the initial conference at the university, similar meetings will be held at various schools over the country.

Speakers at the opening session at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday include Dean Harold Fox of the school of education and Dr. Harold M. Wilson, conference director.

Illustrated lectures are scheduled on the implication of aviation for education and related topics.

Lectures include Dr. Harold E. Mehrens, supervisor of the CAA's Aviation Education division; Dr. Wilhemina Hill, United States Office of Education; Harry Zeritsky, supervisor of the audio-visual aids program in the CAA's Aviation Education division; Philip S. Hopkins, Aviation Education Service, Link Services, Inc., and Ray O. Mertes, director of the school and college services of United Airlines.

Dr. John H. Furbay, director of air world education of Trans-World Airline, will give an address at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Department of Interior auditorium. The meeting is open to the public.

The Report Card

Summer's Time to Get Child Ready for First School Days

By Elsie Carper

THE average child hasn't had time to wear out his first pair of sneakers since school closed but already teachers are thinking about next fall.

In particular they are interested in the child who will enter school for the first time in September.

The Arlington public schools have produced a booklet, "Six-Year-Olds at School," to help parents get their children ready for the big adventure.

During the summer months parents can prepare the new school child for a good start by giving him as many experiences as possible.

By experiences the teachers mean trips to the zoo, the airport or the circus—places where the child will find source material when he starts in Finger Painting I.

Stepping up the bedtime reading program of child classics also is recommended. Familiarity with such standard literary figures as "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Jack and the Beanstalk," will help the child adjust to his playmates.

PARENTS should let children grow up. Baby talk to children—even children with golden blond curls—is out unless, of course, the parent is a great admirer of the lisping Lorelei Lee of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

No matter how young the child looks, he should know how to cross streets safely if he is preparing to enter school.

He should know his full name, address and telephone number and he should be able to go on errands or make simple purchases at the store. Five is as good an age as any to learn the value of a nickle.

The teachers say rather wistfully that the child should be able to tie his own shoes and put on his own coat, rubbers or galoshes.

The child should receive praise from his parents as he advances out alone. As encouragement parents should assign definite, easy home tasks to children—but then make sure the jobs get done.

Children should be allowed to play with their contemporaries. It helps later when schoolroom building blocks are shared.

As a final request the teachers ask parents to "picture school as a friendly place and the teacher as a friend."

ANOTHER organization out this week with advice for parents with young children is the American Medical Association.

Getting away from the socialized medicine controversy, it plunges into television.

"Don't ban television," the AMA admonishes parents in its publication, "Today's Health."

The author, Dr. Elizabeth B. Hurlock, child development consultant, says in the understatement of the week that television is here to stay and that "children must learn to live with it."

"Instead of forbidding your child to watch television, apportion the time he spends before the screen," says Dr. Hurlock, who apparently hasn't heard of Hopalong Cassidy.

DR. HURLOCK recommends the direct let's talk it over, man to man approach to children.

"Help your child to select programs that are worth while and suitable for his age. Explain to him why you do not want him to see certain programs even if his friends watch them."

She says that parents should watch programs with their children and then discuss the merits and faults of the various TV shows.

"This will enable the children to appreciate good programs more fully and pass up the bad ones."

Television should be regarded as a form of education as well as amusement. It can be the starting point of discussions and reading and can foster interest in music, art, current events, history, travel, sport and literature.

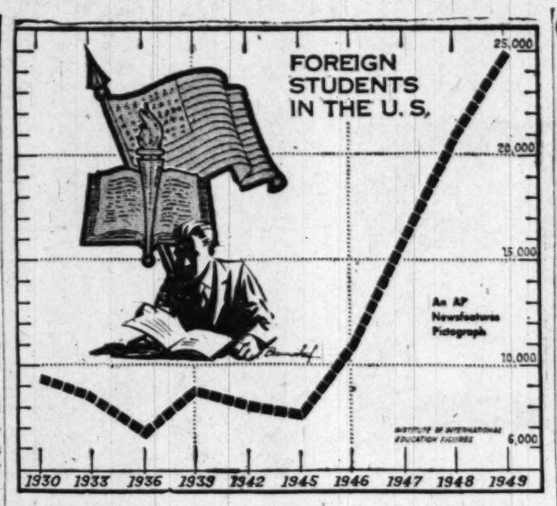
DR. HURLOCK has found that many parents unwittingly make the mistake of encouraging children to look at television because it keeps them quiet and out of mischief. Instead, the children should be encouraged in other forms of play, especially those that require outdoor exercise and demand teamwork with other children.

The specialist approves the use of television as a reward.

"You may forbid your child to watch his accustomed programs when his behavior falls below expected standards or when his school grades take a plunge."

She assures parents that television is a new toy and its novelty eventually will wear off. At present, owning a television set gives the child prestige in the eyes of his playmates.

"As more families acquire sets, the prestige value of ownership will wane. Likewise, as the novelty of watching the programs wears off, the child's preoccupation with it will lessen."



810 DPs Detained On Ship 4½ Hours For Anti-Red Oath

New York, June 24 (AP).—More than 800 displaced persons were detained aboard ship today until they had signed non-Communist affidavits required by the new DP law. The law requires them to sign upon reaching this country.

The last immigrant was cleared 4½ hours after the ship docked.

Besides swearing that they are not and never have been members of the Communist Party, the refugees had to swear that they never belonged to any of the more than 100 organizations cited by the United States Attorney General as subversive.

Under the old law, the affidavits were signed before the refugees got their visas in Europe. An official of the International Refugee Organization said the 810 arriving aboard the Navy transport General Blatchford today all had signed such affidavits in Europe.

German PWs Still Writing From Russia

Bonn, Germany, June 24 (U.P.).—Families still are receiving mail from German prisoners of war in the Soviet Union, although the Russians say all PW's have been sent home, West German officials said today.

Albert Maeten, head of the West German prisoner of war department, said he had been notified of "several cases" in which PW's had written to Germany since May 4—the date Russia announced that all prisoners except a few war criminals had been repatriated. Maeten estimated 60,000 German prisoners still are held in Russia.

Rep. Rogers Thanked For Home Rule Action

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.) got a thank you letter yesterday for signing the discharge petition in the House on the District home rule bill.

It was sent to her by Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Association, who said:

"Other Republican Representatives have stated to me that while they are adverse to signing discharge petitions, that if we were successful in obtaining nearly the required number of names they would sign this petition in order that the matter could be debated and voted upon by the House."

Pair Given Life In Mistake Killing

Albert Lea, Minn., June 24 (U.P.).—A 34-year-old mother of four children and her farmhand lover were sentenced to life imprisonment today for killing the wrong man in a plot to do away with the woman's husband.

Judge Martin Nelson imposed mandatory life sentences on Mrs. Viola Gavle and 44-year-old Lawrence Nobles, but delayed Mrs. Gavle's sentence until September 2 and Nobles' until July 11. Attorney's for both indicated they will seek new trials.

Mrs. Gavle and Nobles were convicted last week of murdering Oscar Rasmusson, 47, a farmer, by mistake after conspiring to do away with Mrs. Gavle's husband, Truman, so they could collect his insurance money and marry.

The State charged Mrs. Gavle poisoned whiskey intended for her husband after Nobles bought the poison.

Guided Missiles' Cost Seen 'Astronomical'

A Research and Development Board spokesman said yesterday that guided missile warfare and peacetime preparation for it would cost sums "astronomical" even by United States spending standards.

The Research and Development Board is the military establishment's scientific brain trust. Its job is to see that this country gets the best weapons that modern technology can produce.

But, the spokesman said, "guided missile warfare would be the most expensive warfare ever known and peacetime preparation for it would be the most expensive in history."

The Government, he said, in an interview, must make up its mind soon as to how far it wants to go with the missile program which already has cost many millions and is getting costlier.

Within five years, possibly three, the United States must "make a major decision on how far we are going to go on this upward curve of expenditure," the spokesman said.

He said costs of the guided missile program rose from virtually zero in 1940 to approximately 200 million dollars a years as of now.

"And if you start producing them in numbers you can add another zero to that figure," he said.

That would mean hiking the cost from 200 million dollars a year to 2 billion dollars (B).

Despite some statements to the contrary, this spokesman said, "there is no indication the Russians are ahead of us on development of guided missiles."

"Germany had some early types of guided missiles late in the war," he said. "If Russia got those and maintained the German's rate of development, they might be ahead of us on one or two items."

But the spokesman, who asked not to be quoted by name, indicated he doubted it.

Undersecretary of Navy Dan A. Kimball, who also is a member of the Research and Development Board, said that "if the Russians are ahead of us on this program, they're damn good."

"We're doing very well," Kimball told the United Press.

The other spokesman said there are no "true" guided missiles now in the hands of American troops. There are six or a dozen kinds of guided missiles that could be put into production, he said, "but we're seeking better development."

By "true" guided missile, he said he meant one whose path could be guided continuously toward its target.

Asked about Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's February order for an intensive review of the program because of its size and to see that there was no unnecessary duplication of effort, this spokesman said the program is under continuous review.

Big Philatelic Conventions Can Fit Into Your Vacation

By William M. Stuart

THE vacation season is at hand for many stamp collectors. Annual conventions of national philatelic organizations are held during the summer, giving the collector a fine opportunity to fit them into his vacation.

STUART

This year, meetings of the largest societies will be held in Washington and Philadelphia and, as usual, visitors from all parts of the country are expected to attend. Plans are in progress for exhibitions, business sessions and auctions, as well as sight-seeing. Many important phases of stamp collecting will be brought up at business sessions, especially the question of unsolicited approval sheets. This matter should again be thoroughly discussed and permanently settled.

The collector just beginning suffers most from this practice; he may not understand the method used in such mail transactions and may lose financially. Leading organizations should go on record against all dealings in stamps by the unsolicited approval method.

Bureau Tour Set

THE American Philatelic Society will sponsor a stamp exhibition during its convention September 6-9, in conjuntion with the District of Columbia Sesquicentennial celebration. The Shoreham Hotel will be convention headquarters. Through the courtesy of Alvin Hall, director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, a tour of the bureau will be one of the features.

John A. Fox of New York will conduct the stamp auction. Col. Otis K. Sadtler, 515 East Capitol st., is chairman of the bourse committee, and Svend Yort, 7201 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase 15, Md., is chairman of the exhibition committee. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., of the Washington Philatelic Society, is general chairman of the convention committee.

THE Capital Precancel Club will meet at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Weeks Stamp Shop, 1229 New York ave. nw. Secretary Fisher of the Precancel Club mailed his notification cards from the Pentagon postoffice, and the slogan cancellation reads: "Mailed in the Pentagon," within a panel of double bars.

AN auction sale was held at the meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., in Pythian Temple on Tuesday night. Ellery Denison officiated. Further nominations were made, the election to be held on Tuesday. The annual club competition of a single frame for the Gantz Cup will be held Tuesday evening. Through the courtesy of Joseph P. Griffin, of the Bureau of Accounts, Postoffice Department, an excellent collection of first day covers, the property of Heizo Kanazaun, chief of the international mail section postal bureau, Ministry of Postal Services, Japan, was exhibited.

Harvard, American U. To Swap Scholarships

Harvard University and American University will provide an exchange of scholarships in summer sessions as a result of an inter-institutional arrangement completed by Professor William Y. Elliott, director of the Harvard Summer School and President Paul F. Douglass of American University.

Through American University, scholarships will also be granted by Harvard to faculty members and students of the Washington Semester, an inter-institutional junior year honors program in which the following 12 colleges and universities participate: Allegheny College, Meadville, Pa.; Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Ala.; Denison University, Granville, Ohio; Dickinson College Carlisle, Pa.; Hamline University, St. Paul, Minn.; Hiram College, Hiram, Ohio; Lindenwood College, St. Charles, Mo.; Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio; Transylvania College, Lexington, Ky.; Westminster College, Fulton, Mo.; College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio; American University.

25,000 to Go Blind This Year, Says Priest

The startling prediction that 25,000 people will become blind in 1950 was made by the Rev. William F. Jenks, the New York Redemptorist priest who is directing the Institute for the Preparation of Sight Saving Classes and Braille Classes at Catholic University through August 5.

Father Jenks asserted that 1 out of every 573 Americans is blind. Fifty-two Americans go blind every day. There are now over 230,000 blind persons in the country, he said, adding that the need for preparing teachers in the art of sight conservation is very great.

Search Ended For Missing Mission Plane

Caracas, Venezuela, June 24 (AP).—Search for a United States DC-3 missionary plane, missing since June 9 with 15 Americans aboard, will be abandoned tonight, the United States Embassy announced today.

An embassy statement said planes of three countries—Venezuela, Colombia and the United States—had failed to find any trace of the aircraft. Small planes of the Maracaibo Aero Club flew out today for a last search, combing the mountains of western Venezuela and eastern Colombia.

The twin-engined DC-3, owned by the New Times Mission of Chico, Calif., left Miami, Fla., on June 9, refueled at Kingston, Jamaica, and was within 25 miles of the Venezuelan coast when it last reported its position.

(Mrs. Donna Wetherald, wife of the pilot, at Miami, gave this list of those on board:

Capt. William B. Wetherald, 29, the pilot, Portland, Oreg.; David Kimball, 27, copilot, of Chico; and Mrs. Kimball, 25, stewardess.

(John Greiner, 33, Altoona, Pa.; Clyde H. Snow, 38, Covena, Calif.; Mrs. Mildred Garber, 35, Chico; Harold Mills, 46, Greencastle, Pa.; William E. Hoffman, 35, Bloomfield, N. J.; Mrs. Margaret Hoffman and two children, Laura Elma, 11, and William E., jr., 7, and Mrs. Betty Hilker, 26, Brainerd, Minn., and three children, Nelda Ruth, 4; Daniel Ward, 2, and David William, 1.)

New York, June 24 (U.P.).—New York challenged London's right to the title of "biggest city in the world" today.

Incomplete Census returns for the Nation's largest city show New York is creeping up steadily on the British capital. When the final figures are tabulated, London may be second.

With the nose count in three of New York's five burroughs completed, the total as of today is 7,770,443. Greater London has 8,390,941 persons, the British Health ministry reported.

Los Angeles, with nearly half a million new residents, and Dallas, Tex., are the fastest growing cities thus far tabulated, but Dallas' rival "boom-town" of Houston still is unreported. Seattle, Wash., twenty-second in the 1940 count, moved up to eighteenth, replacing Newark, N. J.

Los Angeles passed Detroit for fourth place and Baltimore replaced Cleveland, according to preliminary figures.

The difference of 620,498 between London and New York may be made up when returns from Manhattan and heavily populated Brooklyn are taulated. Queens, the Bronx, and Richmond (Staten Island) have been completed. Queens has 1,546,316 persons, an increase of 19.1 percent over 1940; the Bronx, 1,444,903, an increase of 3.5 percent, and Richmond, 191,015, an increase of 9.5 percent.

The totals for Manhattan and Brooklyn were not completed, but were expected to exceed those for 1940, when Manhattan had a population of 1,889,924, and Brooklyn had 2,698,285.

Chicago remains in second place among American cities, with an increase from 3,396,808 in 1940 to 3,661,835 in 1950. Returns are not available yet for Philadelphia, No. 3 in the 1940 nose-count.

Detroit grew in the 10 years, but not enough to keep up with rapidly industrializing Los Angeles. The California city swelled from 1,504,277 to 1,954,036. Detroit increased about 214,000, to 1,837,617.

Movement to Cities Continued, Census Shows

Early census returns showed yesterday that Americans continued to move from farms to cities during the last decade.

The Census Bureau released provisional population figures for the first 162 counties. With few exceptions, the counties were in rural areas and the population of only 27 of the 162 had increased in 10 years since the last census. The count in 134 went down and one county remained unchanged.

Falls From Windows Critically Injure Two

Two persons suffered critical injuries in falling out of windows last night, and were taken to Casualty Hospital.

A woman identified as Mary E. Briscoe, 40, told police she fell from the second floor of her home at 460 Virginia ave. sw., when a man friend chased her with a knife. She suffered a possible skull fracture.

Police said a man identified as Washington Spell, 56, 603 New Jersey ave. nw., jumped or fell from his third story room, fracturing his skull.

Silver Spring Hospital Association to Meet

A meeting of the Silver Spring (Md). Hospital Association has been called for Wednesday at 8 p. m. in the Bank of Silver Spring, 8701 Georgia ave., to decide whether to continue campaigning for its own hospital.

Six thousand residents petitioned the county council to approve legislation for a one-million-dollar bond issue for construction of a hospital at Forest Glan rd. and Sligo Creek Parkway. The bill was recently defeated.

Woolsey Hall to Speak On Civic Associations

2d Carmen Tops First Performance

By Paul Hume

A repetition of Bizet's "Carmen" last night at the Watergate brought the San Carlo Company one of its largest audiences.

The popular opera was sung by the same cast that sang it last Monday night: Margery Mayer as Carmen, Leona Scheunemann as Micaela, Vasso Argyris in the role of Don Jose, and Anton Marco as Escamillo.

Marco, freed of the bold gnat that flew into his mouth Monday night just as he began the Toreador Song, sang it with big style and fine tone. The entire company gave a better integrated account of the score than on the previous occasion. Vasso Argyris did his most impressive singing.

Tonight: "Madame Butterfly," wth Hizi Koyke, in the company's final performance.

'Song of Scotland'

"Sing a Song of Scotland," a program of songs, stories and a film, will be presented Monday at 8 p. m. in the Guild Hall of St. Alban's Church, Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves. nw. Tickets may be obtained from William H. Young, 1025 Connecticut ave. nw., secretary of the sponsoring St. Andrew's Society of Washington.

Our Man 'Hume-anizes' Carmen at Watergate

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

The weather at the Watergate was as torrid as the librettto of last night's performance of "Carmen." But breezy mental refreshment at least was provided by Music Critic Paul Hume's bright, jazzy comments between the acts.

Hume

Turn about being fair play even for the music critic of The Washington Post. This report—the critique on a critic—must be that Hume was in fine form.

Ostensibly, Hume's job is merely to introduce the on-stage action. He goes a good bit further: he sells opera by bringing it down to earth, by making such characters as Carmen and her errant lover, Don Jose, talk as if they were Frankie and Johnnie.

Sample: In Act III, Carmen is miffed at Don Jose. The libretto has her say something like, "Go, Go! You shall fare better that way, for our life is not for you." ("Va-t'en! Va-t'en. Tu feras bien. Notre metier ne te vaut rien.")

Hume put it this way: "Why don't you go, big boy? Beat it!"

Such talk from a Milton Cross at the Metropolitan might be sacrilege, but it seems to pace the Watergate. Hume's comments are informal; so is the whole idea of opera on a barge.

The fact is that in his humanizing of opera, Hume puts his audience at ease.

The audience listens to him with a bemused expression. They laugh at just the right points—the places where Hume wants them to laugh.

Nor can Hume be accused of talking down to his audience. He adopts the mode of the opera-wise, opera-sophisticated good friend giving the low-down on a high-class subject. Such a friend naturally would wisecrack. Hume follows through.

He informs also. In introducing Act I of the Bizet work, Hume led off by saying that Friday night's offering—The Barber of Seville—and Carmen had the same locale.

"Difference is," Hume said, "that tonight there is more bull-fighting than shaving. But at the end you'll see that some people also had pretty close shaves."

With a few breezy words, Hume manages to sketch character.

Sample: In referring to Carmen's first flirtation with bull fighter Escamillo, "Carmen likes his looks, but being in love with Don Jose, she just gives Escamillo one eyebrow."

The wonder of this is that it's all impromptu. No rehearsal, no script. He knows his opera. He's been doing his act for three years—the last two with the current Watergate company, the San Carlo Opera.

Last sample: Referring to Carmen's death outside the arena, "Carmen meets Don Jose to clear all this up . . . They have a few unpleasant words.

"'You don't understand me,' says Jose. 'You can't go.'

"'Yes I can,' says Carmen."

"'No you can't!'"

"Yes . . . no. Yes . . . no. It goes on that way. Carmen starts to leave. Joe stabs her in the back . . . dead!

"Tomorrow night Madame Butterfly does her own death!"

VFW Gathering Votes to Support Ober Law in Md.

Cumberland, Md., June 24 (AP).—A resolution supporting the Maryland antisubversive Ober law was adopted here today at the thirtieth annual encampment of the Maryland Department, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The resolution called upon the State organization to use its influence in support of the law during a referendum next November. It was introduced by Cumberland and Silver Spring Posts.

The Ober law requires all public employes to sign loyalty oaths and provides penalties for activities determined to be subversive. Voters will pass on it in the November election.

Other resolutions adopted today includes one advocating a parkway along the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal route from Washington to Cumberland, and another advocating location of an Army Quartermaster Corps Laboratory in Cumberland.

Focus Shifts to GOP 'Elders'—Warren and Duff

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

IF LOGIC ruled, and certain popular notions were correct, younger men should be taking over from their elders in the Republican Party. The fact is, though, that the reverse is happening in the GOP.

At the Governors' Conference at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., last week, the two outstanding figures were Gov. Earl Warren of California, who is 59, and Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania, who is 67. Both had shown themselves to be stalwart vote-getters in primary elections. For this and other reasons they aroused extraordinary interest at the Greenbrier, where a flock of journalistic railbirds were looking over the field.

Governor Warren certainly is not old at 59. Neither is Governor Duff at 67, even if he is within three years of the Biblical threescore and ten. A powerfully built man, whose thick crop of hair still has a lot of red in it, Duff seems to be blessed with the same bounce and vitality that mark President Truman, who is just one year younger.

What evoked thoughts about the accent shifting from youth to age was something that happened on the day the Governors' Conference opened.

'Young' Driscoll Eclipsed

GOV. THOMAS E. DEWEY of New York, titular leader of the Republican Party, held a news conference in the Greenbrier. He didn't have much to say, having said it all the day before up in Albany, where he announced that he would not run for another term this fall. At the age of 48, he was dealing himself out of the rough-and-tumble game of politics.

Already in eclipse, it was generally agreed, was former Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota. He has tried twice for the Republican presidential nomination, and yet today is only 43.

There was one up-and-coming young Republican at White Sulphur Springs—Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll of New Jersey, who won a second term last year. He is 47.

However, he was pretty well overshadowed by the two lions already mentioned, Warren and Duff. It wouldn't annoy Driscoll to have this said, because he is a great admirer of the older men, given to praising them for their "forward-looking" views.

November Hurdles

IT IS rather early to be thinking of 1952 and the Republican presidential nomination. There is no law against it, however, and there was a good deal of speculation about Warren and Duff in this connection. If the two men clear their hurdles in November—Warren in his race against Jimmy Roosevelt for another term as Governor, and Duff in his contest for the seat of United States Senator Francis J. Meyers—there will be even more speculation.

A Warren-Duff ticket would certainly look good to California Republicans, and even better to Duff's admirers of the Keystone State if they could reverse the names.

In either case, it would be a coast-to-coast ticket, made up of men who style themselves "progressives" and who represent two of the biggest States of the Union.

Warren's rooters already are making capital of the fact that California is about to become a much greater prize in the Electoral College. The Golden State has increased its population by four million since the last census. This is expected to give it seven or eight additional House seats in the next reapportionment, so that its electoral vote will be increased accordingly by 1952. It may supplant Pennsylvania as the second largest State.

WARREN, according to those who know him, takes a philosophical view of the presidential talk, believing that whether a man lands in the White House is largely a matter of fate.

Duff is careful not to do or say anything that would make it seem that he has his eye on the Presidency. He won't, for example, accept invitations to speak outside of Pennsylvania. Nevertheless, his associates have started beating the drums and are prepared to go all out if their hero wins in November.

If Duff lands in the Senate, he will be regarded at the very least as a potential Penrose, a GOP kingmaker. Already there is much curiosity about his views concerning the 1952 nominee.

Duff admires Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and might support him for the nomination. However, he would expect Ike to abandon coyness, throw his hat in the ring and tell the country where he stands.

They Get Along

DUFF also admires Governor Warren. Not only that, but the two are good friends, and were much in each other's company at White Sulphur Springs.

In 1948, at Philadelphia, Duff wanted to throw his support to Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan. Vandenberg declined to get into the race, and Duff wound up by voting for Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio. This, as one of his biographers has said, did not indicate any great enthusiasm for Taft, but was rather an indication of just how much Duff "didn't want Dewey."

It is a curious fact, but both Duff and Warren have been singled out by President Truman as men who ought to be in the Democratic Party. While barnstorming through California in June, 1948, Mr. Truman made a rear-platform speech at Sacramento. He was in a mellow mood and paid a handsome tribute to Warren, saying:

"He is a man of good sense and a man

Western Europe Inches Toward Unity

By Fred M. Hechinger
NYHT News Service

THE colorful Knights' Hall at The Hague was crowded with Very Important Persons from all of free Europe. On the platform sat more than a dozen leading statesmen.

Even on the surface, the meeting was clearly different: absent were the many national flags, traditionally a ceremonial "must" at international meetings. Instead, the podium was dominated by one simple, white banner, inscribed with a huge letter "E."

The "E" stood for Europe.

More than one of the distinguished speakers, themselves limited to their national languages, referred to the symbol as "the flag of the future." But if, at first, some of the attending cynics shrugged this off as radical talk and visions of immature dreamers, they may have thought again when the president of this strange assembly called the meeting the signal for "the transformation of the western world." The president was no dreamer, no radical, no impetuous sophomore.

He was Winston Churchill, presiding over the European Movement. If Europe and the free world want to survive, he said in effect, then the western nations must unite under a new political structure and under a joint parliament of Europe.

Skeptics Cited History

THAT was May 8, 1948. One year later, on May 5, at London, the 10 leading European nations signed the statute of the Council of Europe. Strasbourg was to be the new "capital" for this new "Continental Parliament."

"Realists" hardly looked up from their history books of the past. "It cannot be done," was a typical comment. "Others have thought of it before; but it is impossible to overcome the national differences and hostilities."

Such doubts had much solid foundation in past facts. Yet the supporters of the revolutionary idea replied that while others had thought of it before, they had not tried it in Europe. And some added that in the days of the American Continental Congress, "realists" had shrugged off the idea of a Federal Government of the United States of America with similar pessimism.

A Federal Europe is still not in sight. It is obscured by formidable nationalistic and economic roadblocks. But there are many things in recent history that reveal the strength and direction of Europe's great urge to unity. There is a prevailing climate which makes even the cautious more hopeful.

A Faltering Step

THE Benelux agreement, though faltering, was a step toward union. Another was the recent dropping of currency restrictions for British and Scandinavian travelers in their mutual countries. Visas, too, are beginning to be abolished in more and more countries.

Then there is the European Payments Union. Last year Paul-Henri Spaak, president of the Council of Europe's Consultative Assembly, lectured to Britain that she could not remain outside the European community, trying to be "the beam of a balance of the scales (of power) which no longer exist"; that she must join as "a positive and active element." A few weeks ago Britain accepted the challenge when she decided to join her neighbors in the Payments Union.

Another good sign came last month when the West German government voted to join the Council of Europe. This support becomes the more significant because the disputed Saar region holds independent membership in the Council.

Again a real indication that European unity has developed into something more than a vague idea came recently when French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer announced their agreement to pool French and German coal and steel production, and extended an invitation to other European nations to join the pool. Whether motivated by desperate fear of annihilation in war or by the starry-eyed vision of European union, the Germans and the French admitted by practical action that the Council of Europe has a realistic basis in the cold need for a united "middle force" of Western Europe.

A Stormy Beginning

EVEN among sincere believers in European unity, however, few deluded themselves into regarding the new Council of Europe as a quick solution to current problems. If they had, the first session at Strasbourg, in August, 1949, would have taught them greater caution. For days the delegates haggled over agenda, wording and approach. British Laborites and Tories clashed openly on the floor and appeared headed in opposite directions.

But when the smoke of political battle had cleared, the Council of Europe was still there. It had survived the first skirmish of political disunity. One veteran observer of parliamentary debate commented: "Why expect less political dissent in this parliament than in the old national ones? The very fact that we're having fireworks proves that the Council of Europe takes itself seriously and is here to be used as a political institution."

In its broad concept, the Council of Europe is the political element in the governmental trinity of economics, defense and politics. The Marshall Plan and the Organization for European Economic Cooperation have laid the foundation for economic unification. The Atlantic Pact provides the skeleton for joint European defense. But in the long run these emergency measures would probably fall apart without an umbrella of political unity.

The machinery of the Council is simple. A Committee of Ministers, much like the upper house in most parliaments, is composed of one government member from each country. Each has one vote.

The equivalent to a lower house is the Consultative Assembly. Its members need not be government officials and, in fact, are frequently drawn from opposition parties. Their number is determined by the size of their countries, with France, Italy and Britain each having the present maximum of 18.

The optimists feel that these non-govern-

Nation's 'Most Available' President

By Carl Levin
NYHT News Service

FORMER Haberdasher Harry Truman is following one of the simplest rules of salesmanship in his effort to put over his Fair Deal program and effect a Democratic victory in next November's congressional elections. This is the explanation of the record-breaking 1000-visitor day which he chalked up a fortnight ago.

The rule to which he is adhering with much more success than he ever enjoyed in his post-World War I days behind a Kansas City haberdashery counter, is: See As Many Prospects As Possible Each Day. It is a rule on which he has been sold ever since it passed the test of the 1948 campaign.

Mr. Truman is proceeding on the theory that prospects for his present product are Americans from all walks of life, from all parts of the country. At his invitation, they are trooping into the White House executive offices in unprecedented numbers, and as often as possible he sallies forth to meet them in their own communities.

He is receiving groups never before received by an American President, and he is accepting invitations to speak before groups never before honored by the presence of a President of the United States. In this way he is making himself probably the most available President in the history of the Nation.

Moreover, in adhering to the basic rule of salesmanship, he wittingly or otherwise is following two corollaries of the rule: Make the Prospect Like You and Convince Him of Your Sincerity.

Evidence that the President has hit on a formula as efficacious in politics as in merchandising is found not only in the progress which his program is making in Congress (he saw his Social Security expansion bill win approval in the Senate last week), but also in the comments of some of his callers as they emerge from his private office.

Paul E. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the Democratic State Committee in New York, where some Democrats once thought that Mr. Truman's support of local candidates might do more harm than good, called on him last week to ask him to come into New York State twice to campaign for the Democratic candidates for Governor and for Congress.

This is not unusual. The President is being asked to lend his presence to campaigns in every State north of the Mason-Dixon Line and west of the Mississippi. Fitzpatrick, however, put the reason for this demand in these words:

"The President has a great appeal to people when they see him. The sincerity and integrity of the man is so apparent that it is a good thing for people to see."

Another recent caller at the White House was Freeman F. Gosden, "Amos" of the "Amos 'N' Andy" radio show, and his wife and daughter. Gosden, who had never before met the President, was sold.

"I don't know," he reported later, "whether the President turned on the charm or whether he is always that way, but he is one of the most charming men I have ever met."

Unlike his experience in his old days as a haberdasher, the President doesn't have to look for prospects. Particularly since his 1948 victory, he has been besieged by requests from persons who want to call on him and by groups inviting him to address them. And he is in greater demand today than ever before.

Matthew J. Connelly, the President's appointment secretary, receives 100 to 150 calls a day from persons requesting appointments. Some are for groups as large as 500 persons. Only about one in four requests can be granted because there just is no more time. By the middle of the week, every 15-minute period in the President's working day for the entire week is allotted. Only the President's stamina and his habit of putting in a 16-hour day permit him to get his detail work done.

Accepting as many speaking invitations as possible, the President already has made 24 major prepared speeches and 72 off-the-cuff addresses this year. He has made as many more to groups of callers at his office.

He has addressed Masons, Baptist missionaries, Augustana Lutherans, farmers, industrial safety engineers, editors, lawyers, businessmen, political science students, law enforcement officers, mayors, Governors, and—next week—Boy Scouts will be added at a Valley Forge, Pa., Jamboree.

The President's theme song, in fact, might well be the tune which the 40 members of the Schiller Male Chorus of Chicago sang on the White House lawn last week after being received by him. They sang: "Welcome to all who gather here."

Some Mexican Waifs Find a Haven

By Ruth Watt Mulvey

Miss Mulvey is a former Washington newspaper woman now working in Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY.—Four hundred and twenty-three miles is a long journey, even for a 12-year-old boy with a dream. And so, when he reached the tall gate that leads to the sprawling farmhouse in the shadow of the volcanoes near Mexico City, Agapito curled up and went to sleep. They found him there next morning: a small heap of rags and lice and filth.

"Si," he lied eagerly to the man who was the director of the farmhouse. "Yes, I am an orphan. I live in the streets."

Agapito was not an orphan. He did live in the streets, however, in the streets of Guadalajara. That was where he had heard about "La Granja," and he had dreamed the dream of food and clothing and people who cared, and with less than nothing he had set out.

You must travel, the one who knew had said, over the long road, past Patzcuaro and beyond the thousand hills, and still farther. And when you arrive, said the one who knew, you must tell them that you are without family and friends, for otherwise they will send you home.

But in spite of the eagerness with which he had lied about his mother, and the father who was usually to be found in "The Flower" drinking from a gourd bowl, and his seven brothers and sisters, the director knew. And Agapito was sent home.

"There are so many others," the director said sorrowfully, "so much worse."

He was right, too.

344 in 1000 Doomed

OF THE many unhappy fates in wait, one of the worst is to be born into poverty in Mexico.

In an austere sort of way, the International Bank acknowledged this recently when it established an emergency program to aid children.

"The infant mortality in Latin America is higher, in many cases, than in the countries devastated by war, but the situation is not new," statisticians said dryly. "What is new is that something can be done to remedy it."

With the money which has been granted, things will be done. Factories will be constructed to make anti-tubercular vaccine. Hygiene and dietary instruction will be given. This is no minor thing in a country where infant mortality is among the highest in the world, and where, in some regions like Nayarit, only 344 of every 1000 infants born will live to reach school age.

But what of the ones who do?

That is what Albert Blair wondered 28 years ago: a brisk British newcomer to Mexico who ignored the well-meant warnings. Better not, had been the advice. Better not open your eyes, or you will see that these bundles of humanity clustered against the buildings or lying on gratings to catch warm gusts of air from the sewer, are boys.

What the advisers had counseled was true—in a manner. Nothing could be done to help all of them. But for the few . . .

The Professor's Brood

AT FIRST, the young man interested his friends in a school in one of the poorer barrios, where a Mexican professor and his wife were not only instructing 700 youngsters in their ABCs but were giving them food and vocational classes to help them to earn a living.

One night in 1923, the dream toward which Agapito trudged long days was born.

The professor and his wife went to Blair's home. "They have dispossessed us," the professor said. Most of the children had gone home. "But these," he gestured to the 28 small boys behind him. "These children, and me, and my wife . . . We thought of you."

That night, Professor and Mrs. Oropeza and the 28 kids slept in the Blair home in the stable and even in the toolshed. In the morning they went to the Blair "country house" in the Lomas. Word of the place soon spread among the youngsters sleeping in the streets, and the trek to the country house began.

A few years ago the Granja was moved to more extensive quarters in Xochimilco. But distance has not discouraged the youngsters.

"The waiting list is long enough to break your heart," Blair says.

Food, Shelter—and Pride

SMALL wonder, for the Granja is every dream with which a cold and hungry boy ever comforted himself against nights in the street. It is food and shelter and companionship, and pride in one's own accomplishments and the accomplishments of the group. It is even, heavenly thought, someone who will scold if another pair of shoes is not put away.

In the morning, the boys attend a nearby public school. In the afternoon and early evening, there is play with real equipment—baseballs and footballs. There are chores in the field, with the knowledge that in a few weeks the vegetables tended will turn up on the dinner table.

There are classes in manual skills and in handicrafts, so that when graduation day comes it will be easier for the youngsters to adjust themselves.

A sixteenth birthday is a sad occasion. It means that it is time to leave. But ties are not broken. Every day, graduates turn up at an office in the center of Mexico City where Albert Blair may be found.

It may be a request for advice, or a request for a loan—"I treat them just like businessmen," Blair says firmly, "although there is no interest." Now and then it is an appeal to stand guardian to ask for the hand of a novia. Sometimes it is in search of a godparent for the newest child.

Whatever, there is no need for a "Remember me?" Albert Blair has forgotten none of them.

The boys of El Granja tend vegetables that they know will soon show up on the dinner table

Somewhat older than that day in 1921 when he disregarded well intentioned advice, he is no less enthusiastic about Mexico's boys. To be sure, there have been disappointments. But among the alumni there are also prosperous citizens like Auditor Gilberto Acensio, Corporation Manager Roberto Vittal, Merchant Enrique Ramirez, with a chain of shops, and Armando Galas, senior pilot of an aviation company.

Totaling results in a businesslike fashion, Blair considers it a worthwhile project. And, then . . . Suddenly he becomes quite different from the detached executive that he is and remembers with a frown that "there are still boys sleeping on the streets. We will have to take care of them."

Global View Comes Hard To Denmark

By Stephen White

COPENHAGEN (NYHT).—It is a little more than a year since Denmark braced itself for the shock and plunged into the North Atlantic Pact. In western Europe and the United States, it made only a ripple. Denmark is a small country, with nothing significant to offer in the way of striking power. But to Denmark, the decision was a major one, and was taken only after much soul-searching.

Denmark's tradition, like that of all the Scandinavian countries, is one of neutrality a outrance. For nearly a century and a half the Danes, the Norwegians and the Swedes have chosen to stand aloof from power politics. Invasions have altered their program but not their purposes.

Even faced by a Europe rapidly putting itself in a posture for war, Denmark would have preferred to reconstitute the Scandinavian unity rather than to associate itself with the Atlantic Pact. Through diplomatic channels, the Danes did all they could to gain that end. But the firm determination of Norway, after the events of the last war, to associate itself with a larger and more potent alliance, made the Scandinavian union an impossibility. In the end, each country went its own way: Norway into the pact enthusiastically, Denmark reluctantly, and Sweden alone outside it.

Blame the U. S.

TODAY, THE Danes still look wistfully at an opportunity they think was lost. They have played their part in the Atlantic Pact wholeheartedly, for they are a people who live up to their commitments. But it would be useless to deny that the government feels a little resentment toward the United States.

It was the United States, the government feels, which forced Norway into the pact, failing to consider that such action meant the loss of Sweden. Had the United States permitted the Scandinavian countries to make their own arrangement, the Danes believe, the entire bloc—whose sympathies beyond a doubt are with the West—might have been able to form a powerful coherent force in northern Europe. Instead, the Swedes have been permitted to go their way in isolation.

The existence of the pact is a major annoyance, politically, to Prime Minister Hans Hedtoft and his Social Democratic Party. Hedtoft administers a minority government, since his party holds only 57 of the 150 seats in parliament. To control domestic affairs, he needs the 10 votes of the Radical Party, since the other major parties—Conservatives and Liberals—are essentially parties of the right. But the Radicals are violently opposed to the North Atlantic Pact—the only sizable party in Denmark to take so determined a stand.

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

Mrs. Eugenie Anderson (left), United States Ambassador and the West's best hope in Denmark, greeted Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt at Copenhagen's Kastrup Airport when the former First Lady arrived there on a tour of Scandinavia

Hence, the government finds the rightist parties voting with it on foreign affairs and the Radicals with it on domestic policy. To date, this awkward arrangement has worked—primarily because no one can think of a better one. But it obviously carries within it the raw matter of trouble.

Has Popular Support

AS FOR THE voter himself, the average Dane seems to be reconciled to the fact that Denmark cannot stand alone in this troubled world, and that events have made it impossible for it to stand exclusively with its Scandinavian friends. Estimates of popular support of the pact range as high as 90 percent, and it is certainly substantially over 65 percent.

But Danish observers do not believe that the full meaning of the pact is appreciated by the Danes. To date, it has been largely a matter of conferences. Should more specific requests be made of the Danes—the granting of an air base to the western group, for example (and a glance at the map shows how likely such a request might some day be)—it is probable that a storm of protest would be aroused.

Making the Danes like the pact is likely to be a step-by-step process, in which first the concept is sold to them, as it has been, and then the itemized requirements that follow, naturally from adherence are sold one by one.

A Beloved Envoy

IN THIS respect, there is almost unanimous agreement that Mrs. Eugenie Anderson, American Ambassador in Copenhagen, will do the job if it can be done. The Danes have cast off their tendency to look to the Swedes and must now look to the United States. Mrs. Anderson, representing the United States, is rapidly becoming one of the best-loved persons in Denmark—something which could not have been said of many of her predecessors.

If the Danish people, in spite of their predilections, come out squarely on the side of the West, Mrs. Anderson must be given much of the credit. But it will not be an easy thing for the Danes to do.

The memory of the German invasion is fresh, and the Danes are determined it shall never happen again. But the memory of years of peace is a deep one, and it is only reluctantly that the Danes are becoming embroiled in the larger matters of the planet rather than the smaller matters of their islands and their neighbors to the north.

Duff Is For 'Guy in the Bleachers'

By Leonard A. Unger

HARRISBURG, Pa.—Pennsylvania's free-swinging Governor, James H. Duff, has some advice for the Republican Party. He feels it's needed to stop a succession of Democratic parades to the White House every four years.

The 67-year-old, red-haired executive espouses what he calls "average guy" Republicanism, and he won a major political victory that drew national attention in May.

Duff opposed the "Old Guard" Republican organization and walked off with a half-million majority for the GOP nomination for the Senate in a primary election turnout that broke all Keystone State records. With the nomination, he wrested control of the party leadership from veteran former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, 87-year-old founder of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association.

Grundy had backed Duff for the Governorship four years ago, describing him as a "tough cookie."

Nationally, Duff believes the GOP needs an infusion of new spirit akin to the "average guy" appeal he made to Pennsylvanians. The Governor says a moss-backed policy of negation and criticism is what beat Grundy in Pennsylvania. He implies that it's the same policy in top-bracket GOP circles that has gripped the party nationally.

Duff says that more has been done under his administration for Pennsylvanians than in any other since William Penn. His administration's accomplishments range from a clean-up of Pennsylvania's long-polluted streams to improvement of conditions in the State's overcrowded mental hospitals.

"Pennsylvania's voters aren't alone in this Nation in the idea that they want people in office who are going somewhere," says Duff. "They don't want someone who's going backwards."

What about the 1952 presidential campaign? Duff is silent about possible candidates, particularly about his own aspirations, if he has any. He's concentrating all his efforts on the fall campaign against Senator Francis J. Myers, one of President Truman's Democratic stalwarts in Congress.

He also wants to make sure that Pennsylvania stays in the Republican column in voting for a Governor. That's why he chose former Judge John S. Fine as his gubernatorial running mate. Fine has pledged continuance of all the Duff program.

The son of a Presbyterian minister, Duff learned about politics in an academic way as a Princeton student under Woodrow Wilson in the early 1900s. The practical side came as a precinct worker in his home town of Carnegie, a Pittsburgh suburb. In 1912 he was in the camp of Teddy Roosevelt's Bull Moosers.

He was in and out of active politics as a Republican Presidential elector. He read his favorite classics at home, practiced law in Pittsburgh and took a flyer in oil wildcatting, was wiped out in the 1929 crash.

The Governorship was his first elective office, although he won a State-wide reputation as Attorney General in the cabinet of his predecessor, former Governor Edward Martin, now United States Senator.

As attorney general, he saw that teeth were put into the clean streams law despite massed opposition by coal interests. It was a labor of love, because he is an ardent conservationist and an amateur botanist and geologist. He prides himself on being able to name virtually every tree and rock formation in the State.

In 1916, when Grundy and other Republican leaders sought a candidate for Governor, they picked Duff as a compromise. One of his first warnings to party leaders was given at a platform committee meeting in Pittsburgh:

"Don't put anything in that platform you don't mean. I intend to see everything in there carried out."

Gradually a rift developed between Duff and the old-time party leaders.

Grundy did score one triumph in the battle between two personalities. The retired Bristol, Pa., textile manufacturer, leader of the State GOP since 1923, swung Pennsylvania's support to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York in 1948 in the face of Duff's protests. But in both the 1947 and 1949 Legislatures, Duff came out on top.

In one instance, the Governor ran into trouble with the Grundy faction on its demands for corporation tax cuts while he was boosting cigarette and gasoline taxes. All available money was needed, Duff insisted, for a vast program of public improvements.

When a Grundy emissary insisted that manufacturers be exempted from one of the corporation taxes, the Governor blazed:

"If you think I'm going to give you a free seat in the grandstand at the same time I'm raising the price in the bleachers, you're crazy!"

That's what Duff calls his "average guy" philosophy that he hopes will spread throughout the Republican Party.

of ability. The facts in the case are he is really a Democrat and doesn't know it."

More recently Mr. Truman "invited" Governor Duff to join the Democratic Party. He extended the invitation after a reporter told him at a news conference that Duff wanted his own Republican Party to be "broad," "hard-hitting," "progressive" and "not petty." Mr. Truman, grinning, said that the Democratic Party was just the kind of party Duff had described.

"He won't say that after November," Duff told reporters at White Sulphur Springs.

Disqualification

"BIG RED," as they call him, points to one thing which he says would disqualify him as a New Dealer or a Fair Dealer: At the end of his first two years as Governor of Pennsylvania, the State had a surplus of 63 million dollars.

Duff likes to refer to himself as having "kept faith with the average guy." Here is his political philosophy:

"I believe that government should not do for people those things which they can, which they should and which they have always done for themselves. But, by the same token, I am in favor of government doing for the people those things which they cannot do for themselves.

"It is the function of government to be an instrument of service for the people and to try and do what is best for the most people. And, in the final analysis, what is best for the most people is good for all the people.

"This is the kind of Republicanism that can revitalize the party, and, instead of successive defeats such as we have suffered in the last five national elections, it can be the means of revitalizing the Republican Party, both in Pennsylvania and elsewhere."

Thus speaks a man who never held office until he was 59 and who did not become Governor until he was 64. The voters of Pennsylvania will decide whether or not he is to take his place on the national stage as 48-year-old Tom Dewey heads for the wings and a law office.

Bevin Has A Definition for Unity

mental delegates will in time fulfill Churchill's hope for a group which will act "not as the representatives of our own countries or of the various political parties to which we may belong, but as Europeans . . ."

The Consultative Assembly has been called "original, bold and truly European" because its individual members are burdened with little "national responsibility." In contrast to other such bodies, the representatives are not grouped into national delegates but are seated alphabetically as individuals.

Member nations themselves can decide the method of filling their seats in the Assembly. For the time, delegates are appointed by their home governments. Some day, however, they may be chosen by popular elections.

Although the approach is new and revolutionary, the idea has been smouldering for a long time. Hopeful Europeans have been pointing out the the American Federal system had to be nursed along painfully against obstacles and objections, and defended in a furious Civil War. When the Council voted for a political authority "with limited functions but real powers," these observers hailed it as a parallel to the successful American idea of States' rights and the seed of federation.

Churchill added the economic spark to this smouldering idea. "We can see," he said, "why even before the latest World War, the average income of every American was three times that of the average European."

But despite these westward glances, the revolution at Strasbourg remains fundamentally European. When an actual federation of states after the American pattern was suggested, the idea seemed too radical to delegates whose minds had been shaped in the atmosphere of traditional European nationaliism. The chairman, perhaps with tongue in cheek, substituted a palatable compromise—a call to set up an organization which could act as a "political authority." This proposal was quickly accepted by 90 votes against two.

29 Separate Ways

REAL federation may grow out of this limited "political authority," for the driving force behind the Council of Europe is a real need for unity. This has been expressed in simplest terms by Churchill.

The present state of Europe, he said, was "a crazy system." "Where there had been 15 sovereign states in 1870, there are 29 now. With most of them pursuing their own selfish ways, they were sure to lead the western community to self-destruction and invited potential aggressors to divide and conquer.

What potential aggressors thought of the plan was apparent. As 20,000 Strasbourgers cheered Churchill's proclamation that "old feuds must die . . . national rivalries must be confined to proving who can render the truest service to the common cause," the Communists tried to rally a counter demonstration just around the corner. But the people stuck with the new parliament.

To those who decried the Council as an attempt to break up the United Nations or to provoke the Soviets, the facts clearly gave the lie. The preliminary meeting at The Hague had plainly pictured the new organization merely as one of many steps toward the long-range hope of peaceful world order. The delegates, led by Churchill, had included in their vision of that order three dominant spheres: 1. the Council of Europe, including Britain and the British Commonwealth; 2. the Western hemisphere; 3. the Russian orbit. The Council would work within the U. N., not against it.

This concept is the closest Europeans have come to the union of which they have been dreaming and talking—sometimes unwittingly—for many years. If you feel it still isn't all that it should be, remember that there are differences to be resolved, that unity means different things to different men.

Ernest Bevin, a delegate to the Council, once gave it a low-brow definition as the right to take a train at London's Victoria Station and, without a passport, to travel "wherever I damn please" in Europe.

Count Carlo Sforza, another Council delegate, defined it at the big-power level with equal bluntness: "Italy is ready to limit her sovereign power. . . . Either you come to an agreement and abolish your stupid frontiers—or else. . . ."

At this point, the most optimistic estimate of the Council of Europe must still be that it is one of history's great experiments, blessed with unexpected success in its first two sessions.

A hopeful American reaction was that of Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton (R., Ohio), who was an observer at the first Strasbourg session.

The "first step toward a union of the free countries," she said, "has been more positive, more far-reaching than anyone thought possible. That it cannot be done overnight is self-evident, especially if one looks back upon the years it required Americans with an easier problem to solve. But it can and will be done, for it is the one road to peace."

Underlining Discord

SKEPTICS, however, will underline every discord and every failure on the floor of the Council, just as is done in the case of the U. N. and was done in the case of the late League of Nations.

In anticipation of such emphasis on the negative, a seasoned diplomat observed of the Council: "If things were going much easier, I'd be suspicious. Remember how bitterly the old national parliaments had to fight to establish themselves over the sovereignty of kings.

"But in the end, the people won, and I believe that the people of Europe are behind the battle of Strasbourg."

His was more than a hopeful guess. A public opinion poll throughout Norway, the Netherlands, France, Italy and Western Germany has shown a majority favoring the Council of Europe.

There are 153 million people living in these countries. It is their vote of confidence that really makes the "E for Europe" more than a crackpot dream and the Strasbourg Council of Europe more than a shadow parliament.

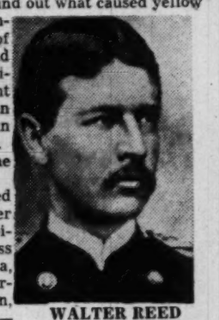
Walter Reed 'Yellow Jack' Epic Was 50 Years Ago

By Frank Carey

FIFTY years ago—on June 25, 1900—Maj. Walter Reed of the United States Army Medical Corps arrived in Havana, Cuba. He had gone there to find out what caused yellow fever—most villainous of a brigade of diseases that had killed more Americans in the recent Spanish-American War than were slain by Spanish bullets.



WALTER REED

"Yellow jack," the soldiers called it.

In the United States, yellow fever had struck with epidemic frightfulness in Philadelphia, Boston, New Orleans, Charleston, Norfolk, Memphis—killing thousands. Victims would fall suddenly, wracked with pain. Later their eyes and faces would turn yellow with jaundice and their stomachs would retch forth the dread "black vomit."

Sometimes corpses lay unburied for days. Drivers of death carts patrolled silent streets, crying, "Bring out your dead!"

No one knew the cause of the sickness, but many believed it was some mysterious "poison" in the air. Men fired cannon or burned tar pots to try to dispel it.

Reed and his associates demonstrated that the disease was transmitted by a mosquito. Years after Reed's death in 1902, scientists discovered that the actual cause was a virus. This and other finds have resulted in development of a protective vaccine.

But the work of Reed and his associates made it possible to control yellow fever by ridding stricken areas of the mosquito.

An Old Friend Stricken

WHEN Reed arrived in Havana, he had never seen a case of yellow fever. He saw his first that very day. His old friend, Maj. Jefferson Randolph Kean, chief surgeon of the Army's Department of Havana, had been stricken.

"My recollection of his visit is very dim—I was pretty sick," Kean related in an interview.

Now 89, and a retired brigadier general, Kean gave a vivid picture, however, of the situation at the time of Reed's arrival in the town of Quemados, near Havana, where the Army's Columbia Barracks was located.

"We had a very wholesome terror of yellow fever," he said. "We didn't know what to do about it."

Soldiers and officers were coming down right and left. Elegantly dressed Army wives wore smelly bags of asafetida and spit constantly out of their carriage windows in the belief they were offsetting infection. The Army burned tents and bedding used by fever victims. And at sundown in the officers' mess, veterans of the Indian and Spanish Wars drank "to those who have already gone—and here's to the next to go!"

There was no specific treatment. Patients were denied food while their fever was high.

"The first thing we gave them was champagne, because it was nourishing without requiring digestion," Kean recalled.

Mosquitoes?

"They were considered just a nuisance," said Kean, with an ironic smile. "Dr. Carlos Finlay, a Havana physician, had been claiming for 19 years that mosquitoes were involved, but it remained for Reed and his associates to demonstrate—emphasize that word 'demonstrate'—that old Dr. Finlay had been right."

One Associate Died

REED had three associates on the "yellow fever board"—Drs. Jesse Lazear, James Carroll and Aristides Agramonte, the last a Cuban by birth. After some fruitless tests from another slant, the board decided to test the Finlay theory. That was in August.

Dr. Carroll was the first hero of the research. He contracted an almost-fatal case of fever after twice allowing himself to be bitten by mosquitoes which had fed on yellow fever victims. Dr. Lazear also got sick—and died.

Official records say Lazear was accidentally bitten, but General Kean says Reed and the others always believed he purposely exposed himself.

Reed had been recalled to Washington on other work and missed these first tests, but on his return he made a brilliant deduction based on notes left by Dr. Lazear.

The deduction was that a mosquito can become infected only if it bites a yellow fever victim in the first three days of his illness, and that it requires at least 12 days for the disease to develop in the insect's body.

Reed and his colleagues rushed together a report and presented it to a medical meeting back in the States. Skepticism greeted the report, so in the late fall they set up an experiment designed to show that the mosquito—and the mosquito alone—was the villain.

They established an isolated camp where there was no chance of infection from patients already sick with fever. Volunteers were called for. ("They were to get $200 if they contracted fever, $100 if they didn't," recalls General Kean.)

Just Doing Some Good

ALMOST a score of American volunteers came forward, and some Spaniards. One of the Americans, John J. Moran, has never accepted a penny for his part in the research. Now living in Havana, he told the Associated Press recently:

"I felt it was a chance to do some good in this life. Also, I didn't want them writing on my tombstone: 'Here lies John Moran, who died for $200.'"

Moran and his roommate, John J. Kissinger, a Medical Corps man, were the first to volunteer. Kissinger was the first to become ill. He let infected mosquitoes bite him on the arm. Reed said later of Kissinger, "In my opinion, this exhibition of moral courage has never been surpassed in the annals of the Army of the United States."

Some other volunteers were also infected thus. But the doctors wanted to try two other things.

They built two special buildings. One was designed to test the common theory that yellow fever could be contracted from "fomites"—the soiled bedding and clothing of yellow fever victims.

On Filthy Bedding

THE small, one-room, poorly ventilated building was heated with a coal stove to temperatures up to 100 degrees, but it was completely screened. Into that chamber went a number of volunteers. For 21 nights they slept on filthy and blood-stained sheets. They covered their pillows with towels soiled with the blood and vomit of fever victims. At times the stench was enough to drive them out, but always they returned.

Not one contracted yellow fever.

The second building was immaculate, well ventilated but divided into two parts, one screened, the other open to mosquitoes.

First to be exposed in the "mosquito" side of the room was Moran. Fresh from a bath and clad only in a night shirt, he went into the room on three different days, got bitten by 15 mosquitoes each time. The first two days, nothing happened.

"Major Reed was such a hero in my eyes that I was really disappointed with myself, and so was he," declared Moran.

But a few days after the third trip, on Christmas Day, Moran developed yellow fever!

Meanwhile, volunteers who had stayed long periods in the mosquito-protected part of the same building remained free of fever.

Moran says Reed told him on that memorable Christmas: "'Mr. Moran, this is one of the happiest days of my life.'"

Three Known Survivors

DR. ROBERT P. COOKE, a "contract doctor" with the Army, was one of the volunteers for the "infected bedding" test. Now living in retirement on a farm at Whistle Creek, Va., Cooke told the Associated Press:

"We figured to be dead or well within six or eight days after we started the tests. No, I wasn't particularly scared . . ."

Moran, Cooke and James L. Hanberry of Orangeburg, S. C., are the only three known survivors among the original American volunteers. Hanberry participated in the "infected bedding" test and later volunteered to be bitten. He contracted a severe case of yellow fever.

Of the 25 or more volunteers, 14 got fever either from mosquito bites or from infected blood or serum injected into their bodies. None died.

Dr. Philip Hency of the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., who has contributed much to the clarification of the Walter Reed epic, said at a memorial meeting in honor of Reed and the others:

"In these days, when man's inhumanity to man is still so pathetically apparent, it is well for us to note the example of these men who banded together for high adventure, not to kill or even die for one country but to die if need be for their fellow men of all countries . . ."

French Design 'Cold Steam' Power Plant

By Roscoe Fleming

Mr. Fleming is a Denver newspaperman and magazine contributor.

DENVER—If you were a kid of an inquiring turn of mind when they still had the old light-bulbs with pointed ends, you sometimes held one under water, filed off the point to make a tiny opening, let in a little water and then sealed the hole with your thumb. The water inside the semi-vacuum boiled violently, until the bulb was filled with steam.

The principal thus illustrated—that water will boil at ordinary room temperatures in a semivacuum—will be used by the French to build a power plant that would make Jules Verne's eyes pop. It is planned to produce 3500 kilowatts of power plus enough sweet water from sea water to supply a town of 10,000 people, all simply by turning tropical sea water into "cold steam."

Andrew Nizery, head of hydraulic studies of Electricite de France and chief hydraulic engineer of Ponts et Chaussees, both French governmental bureaus, described the proposed plant to United States Bureau of Reclamation engineers at the bureau's big engineering laboratories here. They are particularly interested in the sweetening of sea water, a subject which they are studying for possible use on our water-short Southwest coast.

46 Degrees Difference

THE experimental plant will be on the coast of French West Africa near Abidiau, under the "bulge" of the continent and just north of the Equator. There sea water in the shallows reaches 86 degress, while in the depths just off the nearby shelf it is 40 degrees. This temperature difference enters into the scheme.

The plant itself will consist of a thick concrete shell some 75 feet in diameter, built like a flattened pumpkin for the greatest resistance to pressure. It must be airproofed with the greatest care.

It will be divided into two rooms by a thick diaphragm across the middle. This diaphragm will be pierced by an opening in which will be mounted a turbine.

One of the two rooms will be exhausted of air until it contains only about one twentieth the usual amount. (Note: 40 mm of mercury.) The other will be still further exhausted until it will have only about one fifty-fifth the outside pressure. (Note: 14 mm of mercury; sea level outside pressure, 760 mm.)

The warm sea water from the shallows will be pumped into the first room. At the low pressure, it will instantly explode into steam which will rush for the lower pressure in the other room. But the only way it can get there will be through the turbine. It will turn the vanes of the latter, and so generate power.

Into the second room will be led the cold sea water from more than 1000 feet down, through a tube four miles long. This water will rush through coils contained in the second room. It will condense the incoming steam, which will drip as water into collecting vessels. This water will be sweet, since it will have dropped its salt and other impurities when it became steam in the first room. In effect, it is distilled.

The cold sea water, now warmed somewhat, will be discharged back into the sea.

Uses Own Power

NIZERY figures it will take 2000 kilowatts of the power generated to do the pumping, clear the impurities, maintain the vacuums and pump the cold water back. But the plant will be designed to produce 5500, so there should be a net of about 3500.

Such a plant could supply all the electrical needs of a small seacoast city, and a battery of them could supply power for a big one, or for a big industrial installation.

In a desert climate, the water might represent even more profit. For the plant could sweeten two million gallons a day, or 6 acre-feet, Nizery told the American engineers. This would be 200 gallons a person (about the average American city use for domestic purposes) for a town of 10,000.

Naturally, should the plant be a success, its principles would spread far beyond Africa. The Israeli, who are now sweetening sea water by a relatively expensive process of ion-exchange, are looking eagerly for just such a source of cheap power and water.

American engineers visualize a time when, according to Interior Secretary Oscar Chapman, methods of sweetening sea water will be several hundred times more efficient and cheaper and can be used to serve such areas as southern California and lessen the bitter battle for water between Colorado River States.

Negro Educator Wins a Crusade at 55

By Saul Feldman

OKLAHOMA CITY.—Crusading is usually left to the young, but George Washington McLaurin is 55.

Victor in the toughest kind of battle in the South, the Negro educator has just opened the doors of Oklahoma's colleges to his people without any type of segregation.

He was the first Negro admitted to the State University—one among 12,000 whites—and had to spend 4½ months sitting in an anteroom to a classroom. This month, the United States Supreme Court decided that rules under which he entered the university in 1948 made him "handicapped in his pursuit of effective graduation instructions."

McLaurin, who speaks in hushed tones and weighs each word before giving an opinion, recalled his first semester.

"Naturally, I was under a handicap and the pressure was terrific," he said. "But I feel it is an accomplishment. Where there is any good work, someone has to suffer."

George Washington McLaurin and his wife, who is also an educator, in their Oklahoma City home

A Special Table

McLAURIN, who retired after 33 years of teaching, was first permitted to enter the university "on a segregated basis" after a three-judge Federal court ruled he must be given equal educational opportunities.

During his first semester, besides sitting apart, he also was required to eat at a special table in the cafeteria and was assigned a small table on the fourth floor of the library amid stacks of newspapers. Later, he was permitted to sit in the main classroom but in a special section.

He quietly continued his studies and appealed to the Supreme Court for relief.

McLaurin didn't enroll just to make an issue of segregation. He and his wife are both educators. With their children grown and with an independent income from rental property, they wanted to help raise the educational standards of the Negro in the South.

The McLaurins have two sons and a daughter. All three gained their master's degrees before they were 21. Dunbar S. McLaurin, the youngest son, also had his doctors' degree before he was 21. He is now an economist in New York.

Degrees to Spare

McLAURIN, who has his dissertation to complete before getting his doctor's degree, has as much enthusiasm for college work as a freshman. Mrs. McLaurin has over 300 college hours and two degrees, in economics and English. "I could have had three or four more degrees if I had wanted to get them," she said. Now she also is attending the University of Oklahoma, seeking her master's in home economics.

She clearly states the case for the Negroes.

"When our children were around 13, we had a talk with them and decided to send them out of Oklahoma to complete their education. It was painful to send our children away from us, but we knew it was the only way they could get a complete education."

It was in Mississippi that the McLaurins decided that education must be their goal. They moved to Oklahoma in 1910, and Mrs. McLaurin actually began the segregation fight in 1923.

"I wrote the University of Oklahoma asking if I could enroll," she said. "They wrote back and said my credits were acceptable but that State law prohibited my attending the white school. I wrote back and asked if I could take extension courses. They gave me the same answer."

The Fisher Case

THE SUCCESSFUL campaign to break down Oklahoma's segregation laws began in 1946 when Ada Sipuel Fisher applied for law studies at the university.

Mrs. Fisher, denied admittance because of her color, went to court. The State made a belated effort in 1948 to avoid admitting her by establishing a separate law school for Negroes. Mrs. Fisher declined to enroll there, however, and her case was still pending when the McLaurin ruling opened the way for her to begin studying at the University of Oklahoma. The separate school was abandoned.

Mrs. McLaurin told how, when Mrs. Fisher's case first came up, the McLaurins decided to do something about the situation and help if they could.

"I told Mr. McLaurin he was the right person," she said, "but it wasn't until the last day of enrollment that he decided to go ahead."

McLaurin, tall and lean, with more gray than black in his hair, is called the "brake" by members of his family. The name was given him by his children. When they were full of enthusiasm, he would tell them, "Wait and see."

Mrs. McLaurin is the opposite. She bubbles with enthusiasm.

One Son a Major

THE McLAURINS live in a little frame house in the Negro section of Oklahoma City. The living room has four magnificent teakwood carvings sent back by their son Dunbar when he was stationed in Japan.

The other son, Joffre Carranza McLaurin, now is at Camp Lee as a major in the Reserves. He is studying for a doctor's degree at Minnesota.

Phylis Cardenza McLaurin, the daughter, is doing social work with children in New York and working for a doctor's degree at Columbia.

McLaurin wants to continue in the educational field as an administrator, or as an adviser to Negro youths. Right now, work on his doctor's dissertation is before him. It will be on "Growth of the Separate Schools Since 1910 in Oklahoma."

Will the McLaurin case be included?

"I think so. After all, it is part of segregation," McLaurin smiled.

GI Insurance Changes in the Works

By Rowland Evans, Jr.

CONGRESS is cocking a critical eye at GI insurance, the biggest single life insurance operation in the world.

Changes in the National Service Life Insurance Act, some of them possibly drastic, seem assured. It has not been proposed, however, to change policies now in effect.

Three congressional inquiries are under way or projected:

1. A House Expenditures Subcommittee has spent two months in intensive hearings on the act and the way the Veterans' Administration has handled it. Chairman Hardy (D., Va.) plans to report findings to Congress by July 15.

2. The House Armed Services Committee has been looking into a bill introduced by Representative Kilday (D., Tex.). It is really an enormous group insurance plan, to establish a brand new system of gratuities for all survivors of men in the armed forces.

3. The House Committee on Veterans' Affairs will put its staff to work this summer to recommend "a new law providing insurance protection to members and veterans of the armed forces."

Davis Favors Full Study

TESTIMONY taken by the Hardy committee probably will give the Veterans' Committee staff most of the information it needs.

Administrative cost of the act and payment of the $2,800,000,000 first special dividend are the two main reasons for the flurry in Congress, says Representative Davis (R., Wisc.), member of a special insurance subcommittee of the House Veterans' Committee.

"We feel the time has come for a complete study of the act," he told a reporter.

At its peak, insurance under the act totaled 126 billion dollars. Today about five million veterans have 36 billion dollars' insurance.

The act was passed in 1940 as an amendment to a revenue bill. No hearings were held. Yet the Hardy committee staff estimates its total cost to date is well over five billion dollars.

The staff spent several months establishing that cost estimate. It decided that between July 1, 1949, and June 30, 1950, the administrative cost alone was 80 million dollars, which includes no benefit payments.

Breakdown of Costs

THE staff attributes the rest of the total five-billion-dollar cost to:

1. A special 3 percent interest rate on money in the NSLI fund, which is invested in special Government securities. Last December 31, the fund contained $7,200,000,000.

2. The Government's responsibility under the act to pay premiums for totally disabled veterans and to underwrite free insurance for aviation cadets.

3. Use of a life expectancy table based on the period 1843 to 1857. Expectancy is much higher today.

4. Several other items, not the least of which is Uncle Sam's obligation to underwrite all extra-hazard deaths. Insurance on service-connected deaths is paid, not from the NSLI fund, but from the Treasury.

Harold W. Breining, VA insurance boss, told the Hardy committee "the cost (of NSLI) is conjectural."

Asked what the 1949 administrative cost was, he said, "I am not prepared to give it because I do not think it is obtainable."

'Gratuities' Persist

BREINING said flatly he does not think service insurance is the answer to the Government's responsibility.

He said the original idea of GI insurance "was to avoid what some persons characterized as the evils of the pension system . . . I would say it had not to any great degree altered the cost of gratuities" (compensation and pension for veterans and their survivors).

Breining was referring to the idea behind passage of the Government Life Insurance Act (for World War I) on which NSLI is patterned.

Federal Judge Julian Mack headed a special committee to work out that insurance law in 1917. It was written by the House Interstate Commerce Committee. Judge Mack argued that service insurance was needed because men going off to war "would lose their insurability."

Samuel Gompers, then president of the American Federation of Labor, who was a member of the Mack study group, said, "You will hear very little about claims for pensions" after enactment of the insurance law.

But Breining told the Hardy committee:

"You really have three, what I call, gratuities today."

He referred to (1) death gratuity (a flat sum paid to survivors equal to six months' pay of the deceased), (2) national service life insurance and (3) pensions and compensation.

"Legislation should be introduced and passed to take care of these conditions."

Hardy will not hint what his committee's report will recommend. But questions and answers during the long hearing indicate:

1. Recommendation for a complete study of the whole idea behind low-cost service insurance.

2. No more extension of term insurance. Breining said it would be "a very desirable thing" if Congress refuses to extend term insurance for another five-year period. Should Congress not extend it, more than three million veterans would have to convert their term insurance to a permanent form or drop it.

World War I term insurance has been extended up to the present. Each extension costs the veteran more premium because of his advancing age.

3. Suggestions for some kind of substitute system. This could include the Kilday bill for active armed forces personnel, with a flat $10,000 gratuity for those not covered by the Kilday bill (such as West Point cadets).

The March of Science

A NEW test to find a person's allergy, and to study new anti-allergy drugs, has been developed by Drs. J. M. Rose and C. M. Pomerate at the University Medical Branch, University of Texas.

Tiny bits of tissue are clipped from the patient's nose. The pieces contain cilia, the waving, hair-like structures that push away foreign matter entering the nose.

The samples of tissue are kept alive in a special solution. With a microscope, physicians can see the waving cilia and moving granules of matter containing fat.

When something that causes an allergy is put into the solution, the cilia stop moving, and the fatty granules break. The protoplasm in the living cells hardens or jells. The tissue swells, and stops feeding on the culture solution.

The cause of an allergy can be found by putting various suspected pollens or other things into the solution, and seeing what happens. New drugs that might stop the allergic reaction can be tested in the same way.

THE human heart is a complicated source of electricity, and isn't comparable to a simple storage battery, four Yale physiologists report. The comparison with a storage battery has been made for many years, and has been the basis for interpreting electrocardiograms. The Yale scientists found that the heart doesn't have one positive pole and one negative pole, and that more electrical activity takes place than just interaction between a positive and a negative pole. The Yale researchers are Dr. Louis H. Nahum, Dr. Hyman M. Chernoff, Alexander Mauro and Dr. Rajinder Singh Sikand.

The Draft Assured

Although it looked for a while as if the draft extension might be hung up on technicalities, the Senate finally brought order out of chaos. The three-year extension passed by the Senate is a good bill which will keep registration machinery operating as a sort of insurance protection. Although the bill would not permit the automatic resumption of inductions if they became necessary, Congress could authorize them by simple resolution, and the President could order them in the national interest if Congress were not in session.

The Senate showed particularly good sense in quashing Senator Russell's attempts to tie on amendments requiring "voluntary" racial segregation. These, it may be assumed, were intended more as a protest against FEPC legislation than as serious measures; nonetheless, one such amendment was approved by the Armed Services Committee, and if it had gone through the Senate it would have caused great confusion. The same may be said of the antisegregation amendment offered by Senator Humphrey. The armed forces are making good racial progress, and it is time to let well enough alone. In any event, a draft bill is not a proper vehicle for social legislation.

Considerable effort will be necessary, during the temporary 15-day draft extension, to reconcile the Senate bill with the more restrictive measure passed by the House. The House bill would require that Congress declare a national emergency before inductions could be started. Such a declaration would activate much unnecessary machinery—and it also might cause a war scare even though the only emergency might be that the armed forces were under strength. We hope, therefore, that the Senate version will prevail. Senate conferees could afford to compromise on a two-year instead of three-year extension in return for acceptance of the simpler Senate provisions on inductions.

Contra Marcantonio

The Republican, Democratic and Liberal organizations of New York City have cemented their coalition in the Eighteenth Congressional District by accepting James G. Donovan as their common candidate for the seat in the House of Representatives held since 1935 by Vito Marcantonio. Thus in seeking another term Mr. Marcantonio will be solely the candidate of the American Labor Party, the machinery and organization of which were captured some years ago by his Communist allies.

The coalition has notably raised the hopes of the vast majority of New Yorkers of defeating Mr. Marcantonio next November; but it would be a great mistake to suppose that his defeat is assured. Two years ago, when he chose to identify his cause with that of Henry A. Wallace, Mr. Marcantonio demonstrated his ability to carry his district without benefit of any regular party label. What is certain is that, if he perseveres, the bitterest fight of his career awaits him.

The issue on which the election will be fought is, of course, Mr. Marcantonio's 15-year record of undeviating fidelity to the Communist Party line which he has followed through each of its intricate twists and turns. This has also been an issue in previous elections; but never have passions been so highly aroused upon the question as now. Mr. Marcantonio, whose congressional speeches upon any subject touching the party or Soviet Russia have read like so many editorials from the New York Daily Worker, has steadily denied that he is or ever has been an enrolled Communist. Just why he has worked for so long in such close collaboration with the party is something of a mystery; for as a congressional parrot of the party cliches, he seems to have been of greater value to the party than the party to him.

Until about a half dozen years ago Mr. Marcantonio carried his district, as the phrase goes, in his pocket. No possible combination of his enemies could defeat him. However, he was separated from some of his Harlem following by the reapportionment of 1944, and certain predominantly hostile areas were added to his district.

His opponent, Mr. Donovan, is, politically speaking, a relatively obscure man, although he served for a time in the State Senate. It was no doubt obscurity, as well as his reputation as an intelligent moderate, that made him acceptable to all three parties. It may or may not prove a handicap in the campaign. But at any rate his nomination shows that under certain circumstances the rigidities of the party system are capable of being relaxed in the public interest.

Proletarian Plutocracy

The current (June) issue of Soviet Russia Today contains a highly instructive analysis of the operations of high finance in a Communist economy. The author is Mr. Corliss Lamont, who should know about these things; for, as you are doubtless aware, he is the son of the late Thomas Lamont, who was chairman of the board of J. P. Morgan & Co. In the last 15 years or so Mr. Corliss Lamont has been in and out of the newspapers a good deal, usually in connection with various front organizations or as the author of books in praise of Soviet life. Some say that Mr. Lamont is a Communist, others that he is only an infatuated fellow traveler; but it is pretty clear that underneath everything, he is just another old Wall Street reactionary at heart. Incidentally, his article may help to explain the hitherto mysterious attraction of Communist doctrine for so many members of the gilded bourgeoisie.

It appears that the business of banking and credit plays just as big a part in the economic life and exerts just as much control of Russian industry as Wall Street in the days of its glory did in these United States; indeed more, for not only can the Russian State Bank make or break any Russian industry by the granting or withholding of credits; it seems to hold the fate of both management and workers in the hollow of its proletarian hands. Here's what Mr. Lamont says:

> Every producing and distributing unit in the country has an account in the central State Bank or one of its branches. It is the duty of each bank to check up frequently on the use of the credits which it issues . . . If the credit is being wasted or used inefficiently, the bank will stop further credits until the matter is cleared up, even instituting a special investigation if necessary . . . Soviet socialist planning makes the banks the watchdogs of the whole economy. They act as the vital link between the various plans drawn up on paper and the fulfillment of those plans in terms of concrete goods and services. Their vigilance means that there can be no letdown on the part of either management or workers . . . without those responsible being called to task.

We doubt that even in their best days the Guaranty Trust Co., the Bankers' Trust Co., the Chase National Bank, and the National City Bank put together ever exercised such a stranglehold power as that. What astonishes us even more is to learn that the profit system is going full blast in Russia. Most of the profits, or as Mr. Lamont prefers to call them, surpluses, go right back into the credit pool controlled by the bankers. Some industries, it seems > run up handsome surpluses, part of which can be invested in other less developed fields of industrial activity or in the sphere of culture and education. A considerable portion of such surpluses, however, are retained locally by the unit earning them, and are used collectively for expansion, improvements or social benefits connected with the same enterprise.

That word "enterprise" strikes us as interesting and possibly significant. Anyway, Mr. Lamont makes it all sound like an exaggeration of the monopoly finance capitalism against which our radicals used to inveigh so lustily in the earlier days of the century. It seems clear that Professor Burnham's theories of the Managerial Revolution, that made such a stir about a decade ago, are in need of rather drastic revision.

"A King's Story"

The memoirs of the Duke of Windsor, which for some weeks have been appearing in Life magazine, have concluded with his own account of the events leading up to his abdication as King Edward VIII in December, 1936. This account is more restrained than might have been expected in view of his manifest bitterness against those who forced his abdication, and especially against the Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin. There is no reason to doubt the accuracy of his narrative, which places a considerable emphasis upon the self-sacrificing spirit manifested throughout by both Mrs. Simpson and himself. Mrs. Simpson, it appears, was resolved to efface herself from his life rather than permit the abdication; the King was equally resolved not to part with her.

After fourteen years the duke's unfitness for the role of constitutional monarch is even more apparent than it was at the time of the crisis. How very sorely his spirit was galled by his constitutional status is shown in his reflections upon his final interview with the Prime Minister.

> I noted how heavily the scales were weighted in his favor. Clear to the end Mr. Baldwin in his exchanges with me followed with scrupulous exactitude the constitutional rhetoric which preserves the fiction of kingly authority. It was always my ministers who would not let me do what I wished. It was always with his humble duty that he did what he wished. The Prime Minister controlled all the levers of power. He could bargain with the Opposition. He could canvass Members of Parliament. He could solicit the support of the newspapers. He could consult the Dominion premiers in his own terms. He could do all this and more . . . I had to stand silent. How lonely is a monarch in a struggle with a shrewd Prime Minister backed by all the apparatus of the modern state. (Author's italics.)

Yet how could it have been otherwise without reversing the whole course of British political development since the overthrow of the Stuart Dynasty, one of the historical circumstances to which Edward VIII owed the possession of his throne? The implicit notion that the King should not obey but be obeyed by the responsible ministers of government is enough to show how imperfectly Edward VIII understood the nature of his office. Hardly less bizarre and romantic in the twentieth century was the short-lived effort of his sympathizers to organize a "King's party" on something like the model of seventeenth century Royalists. In this age there is no longer a choice between royal absolutism and constitutional government; it is wholly a choice between constitutionalism and dictatorship. Nothing is clearer than if the constitutional principle had been defeated in 1936, the British crown would have eventually perished with it.

A correspondent has reminded us of the editorial called Ithuriel's Hour, published on this page December 11, 1936. As the analysis does stand up in the light of the new material, we quote from its concluding paragraphs:

> When the hysteria has subsided, when the romantic issues involved are subjected to coldly realistic light, it will be realized that the abdication of Edward VIII represents a great triumph for the democratic principle. . . . It is now three centuries since Charles I had Eliot executed in the Tower of London, but the torch which he handed on has never been wholly extinguished. In keeping with that tradition, Stanley Baldwin has followed the clearly indicated course, and it is not far-fetched to say that thereby he, too, has contributed greatly to the cause of human liberty.
> For these are days when the foundations of the democratic system are gravely threatened, not merely by dictators from without but also by popular ignorance and sentimentality from within. Only at first glance does it seem unreasonable that the King should be forced to abdicate rather than wed the woman of his choice. The underlying lesson . . . is that in the democratic state the most exalted, even as the humblest, must bow their will to what considered majority opinion holds to be the national welfare. And the enforcement of this lesson, at this hour, is of the greatest moment to democracy and all that democracy has meant for the liberation of the human mind.

Plan No. 27

With approval by the House Committee on Executive Expenditures, President Truman's proposal to establish a new Department of Health, Education and Security has gotten over its first congressional hurdle. The proposal, officially designated Reorganization Plan No. 27, would have the effect of elevating the present Federal Security Administration to departmental status and of giving the administrator formal membership in the President's Cabinet. The importance of the Federal Government's activities in the public welfare field make this change logical and wise.

The projected department is "at variance" with Hoover Commission recommendations which this newspaper has, in general, supported. The Hoover Commission urged granting of departmental status to the social and educational functions of the present Federal Security Agency; and to this extent the reorganization plan is in conformity with its report. But the Hoover Commission favored joining the Public Health Service with the medical activities of the armed forces and the Veterans' Administration in a United Medical Administration. Spokesmen for the organized medical profession favor an independent health department.

In our view, the Government's health services should be associated with its activities in the field of education and social security. The three are intimately related and interact on one another. We have long urged their integration and still think, though the point is of minor importance, that they should be joined under the simple title, Department of Welfare. In any case, headed by a Cabinet officer, they can make a more effective contribution to the country's well-being. We hope that Congress will allow Plan No. 27 to go into effect.

Home Rule Hope

The addition of Representative Edith Nourse Rogers' name to the Washington home rule discharge petition brings that document tantalizingly close to its goal. It contains now 193 of the 218 signatures required to bring the home rule measure to the House floor. An additional 25 should by no means be impossible of attainment, especially in view of the nature of the cause. And there can be virtually no doubt now that, with so many willing to take the bill away from the dilatory District Committee, it would pass the House easily if it could be brought to a vote.

From the point of view of the legislators no less than from the point of view of the people of Washington, it is important to bend every effort toward enactment of the bill before the close of the present session. To let it die by default would mean a long, tedious rehash in the Eighty-second Congress of all the now familiar arguments. The Senate long ago acted favorably on home rule. The House manifestly would like to do so. There must be many others who, like Mrs. Rogers, believe that taxation without representation is un-American. Now is the time for them to come forward. They will be acting at once to liberate the Congress and the people of Washington.

ADVENTURE

At dawn I heard
A strange bird's song,
Neither lark nor thrush;
As the leaves stirred
In tree and bush,
I followed along.

Rounded and clear,
The magical trill
Now far, now near,
Beckoned me on Through the dusk, until—
It was suddenly gone.

And there was no sign
From bush or tree,
No flick of feather,
But only the whine
Of wind in the heather
Wet with sea.

Waging Peace

The term "cold war" at the time it was used by me in 1947 was very descriptive. A columnist attempted to give it parentage, or shall I say, he adopted it, claiming very shortly thereafter that the "cold war" had been won. For some time I have been suggesting that we wage peace, and have suggested the method of doing it. Call it what you will, the United States will have to do some self-disciplining in order to continue to occupy the position to which it has obligated itself.

"Postal Subsidies"

In your June 19 editorial, "Postal Subsidies," it appears likely a simple inadvertence that you overlooked the obvious indirect subsidy which obtains to many publications entered as mail-matter of the second-class, which use the postal service to handle their single copy high-cost distribution but send their bulk shipments to newsstands by express.

Common fairness suggests that all publications using the mails should pay the postage rate.

Only by the assertion of the constitutional and legislatively intended full monopoly of the carriage of all mail matter over post routes can the postal service and the public know whether proposed increased rates are justified, or whether the service should be restricted.

President John Quincy Adams in his first message to Congress succinctly expressed the public concept of the postal service:

The comfort of friendly correspondence, the exchange of internal traffic, and the lights of the periodical press should be distributed to the remotest corners of the Union, at a charge scarcely perceptible to any individual and without the cost of a dollar to the Public Treasury.

Big Brothers

A story in The Washington Post of June 17 concerning the Big Brothers of D. C. contains the following paragraph:

"The D. C. chapter was organized this year as part of the national movement of helping boys with a tendency toward delinquency."

This is an incorrect statement, inasmuch as it is not necessary for a boy to have "delinquent tendencies" in order to receive help from our agency. Our Little Brothers are often times referred to us by parents, boys clubs, churches, schools and civic organizations wherever we can be of help in supplying the missing companionship or influence of a mature and well-adjusted Big Brother for the Little Brothers.

Honoring Ozaki

Some of my relatives died at Pearl Harbor and I spent time in the fetid mosquito-plagued CBI theater. Now I spend all my time earning a living so I can support my three boys through school and spend nights helping them with their homework. I never used to give a hoot about what Washington did about foreign visitors or foreign countries, but after discussing with "natives" in various countries, I feel it is important that we back people who are our friends.

What is the record of Yukio Ozaki, the former mayor of Tokyo who recently visited Washington? He was the first to cry out against the Japanese invasion of Manchuria, he was the target of assassins in the young officers' uprising in 1936 and Tojo threw him in the jug in 1942. The record indicates he has been a consistent advocate in good times and bad of constitutional liberalism.

If we don't back up pro-Americans, what are we going to do—save the medals for the likes of Tojo, Hitler and Stalin?

My hat's off to Vice President Barkley and the members of Congress who honored Ozaki. The least we can do is to get behind men who have courage enough to battle the totalitarians.

Rain For Sahara

Western Europe is feeling the pressure of expanding populations. Already demands are being made for land areas—mostly in distant continents—suitable for settlement by these people.

Simultaneously, we learn that rain-making has passed the purely experimental stage, and that "They are really making rain." (See July Reader's Digest). Now, if rain-making can be successful in Arizona and New Mexico, why can it not be made to work in similar arid regions in North Africa? If, for example, the Sahara Desert could ever be made adaptable to agriculture, what an ideal solution that might prove to be to western Europe's problem of surplus population! A little experimentation right now, might be well worth-while. What are we waiting for? A. C. N.

Speeding Buses

The traffic accident at 20th and K sts. again focuses attention on the reckless and excessive speed of buses, and less frequently of streetcars, which is apparently being ignored by our local police.

Our laws should not allow such ponderous vehicles as buses to be driven through our streets by "fledgling" operators, who seem to lack both the judgment and self-control which are indispensable to safe driving. Some one has aptly called the prevalent recklessness "slam-bang" driving, and it is a fitting term. Probably the fault lies partly with the company's system, which puts the schedule above everything else in the mind of the operator, causes him to indulge in excessive speed, and encourages him to take hair-breadth chances.

In this particular accident, the distance traveled by the bus from the intersection is mute evidence to excessive speed in such a residence area. This is corroborated by the testimony of an eyewitness. The point to be considered is that circumstances in this case contributed to a fatal collision, and that the same sort of driving which induced these circumstances is being indulged in constantly by drivers, apparently unnoticed by the police.

To a great many riders on the vehicles of the Capital Transit Co. it seems only common sense that the law should require a more controlled and temperate speed. The lives of the patrons of the company are more important than a schedule, and should be so recognized. In all my years of riding local buses and streetcars, only once have I witnessed the halting of a vehicle by a policeman on account of excessive speed, although there is a constant need of such a checkup.

"Indirect Lobbying"

My attention has been called to your June 13 editorial, "Indirect Lobbying." Therein you support the idea that those millions of American citizens who earn their livelihood and work, produce, conduct industry, commerce and trade associations or through a common enterprise known as a corporation, should be restricted and limited in their constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press.

This astounding proposition is advanced under the guise of an argument that the exercise of these basic freedoms by associations and "big corporations" may be called "indirect lobbying." Just what your editorial writer means by "indirect lobbying" is not at all clear, but the obvious inference is that it is a sinister practice which ought to be strictly regulated, licensed and perhaps prohibited.

The principal threats to the continued existence of enterprise in the United States, as elsewhere in the world, come from government. The now unlimited powers of government to tax, to dilute the medium of exchange and to control commerce can be curbed, if at all, only by a free press and free speech. If it should once be established that those in control of government can, through the use of the power of investigation, or otherwise, regulate and license the citizen in his right to protest, to criticize, or to support legislation, or to communicate to others his views as to the ability or performance of his public servants, despotism will have leaped its last barrier in the United States.

Do you really mean what you say? Do you mean that you favor empowering Congress to regulate, license and to demand an accounting of expenditures by all citizens doing business in corporate form, who endeavor to oppose or support legislation? Since you indicate that you would also include "associations," where would you draw this line? Do you not mean to say simply that you believe anyone who tries by whatever means of communication to influence public opinion upon any subject that might affect legislation, should be regulated, licensed and called to account? If this is not what you mean, would you be so good as to explain what it is that you advocate under the guise of regulating "indirect lobbying"?

W. C. MULLENDORE,
President, Southern California Edison Co.
Los Angeles.

Editor's Note: Nothing in the editorial suggests any restriction on the right to free speech or freedom of the press. It makes no reference whatever to "licensing" or "prohibiting" lobbying. As to the regulation of lobbying, Congress has already passed a law for that purpose. The act requires lobbyists to identify themselves and the sources of their funds. The question with which the editorial was concerned was whether or not all associations and corporations engaged in the dissemination of propaganda to influence legislation should be required to state the facts about their expenditures for this purpose. We believe the public is entitled to know the source of funds used to influence public opinion on public issues. Of course, everyone has the right to speak his mind, but no one has a right to sail under false colors. The editorial was limited solely to this issue.

Bulls In The Coffee Shop

By Andre Visson

Latin Complaint

THE REPORT published by the Senate Agriculture Subcommittee on the coffee situation in Latin America has intensified anti-American feeling in all coffee-producing countries, but especially in Brazil and Colombia. If the subcommittee had deliberately set out to hurt the sensitive pride of the Latin American nations and to stir up resentment against the United States, it could not have done a better job.

Edward G. Miller, jr., the able Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, has, as politely as possible, called the attention of the Senate to the very serious harm done by the Senate Subcommittee's unfortunate report. He pointed out that no accusations of manipulating markets should have been made without evidence to substantiate them. That price support for agricultural commodities is not a strictly Latin American device. It is also practiced—and largely—in the United States. And passing in review the 19 recommendations made by the Senate's subcommittee, he described some of them as "unwise," and others as ground for harmful misunderstanding.

THE REPORT did more than stir up a storm of protest in the Latin American press and parliaments. It brought a joint protest, lodged with Secretary Acheson, by 14 Latin American envoys in Washington. These envoys said that the publication of the report has produced a "growing alarm" in their respective countries.

They refuted the charges made by the Senate's subcommittee. They branded certain portions of the report as a "direct reflection on their governments." They described the entire report and its recommendations as "contrary to the existence of a friendly policy in this hemisphere." And they ended their protest by urging the United States Government to reassure the 14 coffee-producing nations that "there will be no adverse change in the foreign policy of the United States as it relates to Latin America."

Appearing before the Senate Committee on Agriculture on June 20, Assistant Secretary Miller expressed the belief that the report had created "real doubt" as to the intentions of the United States Government.

Even before Assistant Secretary Miller appeared before the Senate, Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas from Illinois, a member of the subcommittee responsible for the report, declared that he had never attended any meetings of the subcommittee, knew nothing about the report, and had not subscribed to its conclusions.

Senator Lucas' statement may help to convince the irritated Latin Americans that the Administration was not responsible for the report—directly or indirectly. But it is more likely that they will hold out for stronger reassurances.

SINCE the end of the war the Latin Americans have been harboring the unfortunate suspicion that Uncle Sam was interested in their friendship only in times of crisis. This is an entirely wrong impression, because the good neighbor policy and the policy of hemispheric defense are twin pillars in American foreign policy. But in international life—as in private life—the impression created by a given fact is at least as important as the fact itself.

During the last few years the United States Government has had to concentrate its attention on the major fronts of the cold war, but has not for a minute forgotten the importance of maintaining friendly relations with the countries south of the border. Nevertheless, many, if not most, of these countries feel that they have been neglected. They have complained that American economic aid to Europe has operated to their disadvantage. It has delayed their obtaining the new equipment they needed to face the new competition.

But of all Latin American countries, the feelings of Brazil are the most hurt and her resentment is perhaps the most disturbing, because anti-American sentiment in Brazil is a new phenomenon. Few Latin American countries were more pro-American during the war than Brazil. Brazil's wartime dictator-President, Getulio Vargas, emphasized that the pressure of public opinion in the country brought Brazil into the war—her army chiefs having been in favor of a benevolent neutrality.

The man in the street in Brazil has not forgotten this. Neither has he forgotten Argentina's attitude during the war. So he was quite perplexed when Argentina recently obtained a much larger loan from the United States than Brazil—and in less time.

True, the Brazil and Argentina loans are not comparable. And the Brazilian government did not ask for a larger loan. But the man in the street, ignorant of the facts in the case, is indignant. He wonders whether Uncle Sam is not now more interested in winning the favor of his one-time opponent than in keeping that of his old friend. And he wonders whether the United States is not inclined to treat dictator regimes in Latin America with more consideration than democracies.

These unhappy simmerings were brought to the boiling point by the Senate's unfortunately-worded report on coffee.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Ching Blocks a Steelman Coup

By Drew Pearson

A NEAT SCHEME to put a John L. Lewis man in charge of mediating strikes for the Government has just been spiked.

With strikes having such widespread effect on the economy of the nation, the job of Federal conciliator is extremely important. And the plot was to force out Cyrus Ching, the towering, good-natured head of the Federal Conciliation Service, who resigned from United States Rubber to work for the Government. In his place was to go Paul Fuller, a former United Mine Worker and a crack Government conciliator at Akron.

Behind this move was charming, soft-soaping John Steelman, a White House assistant. Steelman made his Washington start as a labor mediator, has sometimes appeared to feel that popular Cy Ching is too independent, fails to consult enough with the White House. Also, Steelman is a backstage friend of the bushy-browed Lewis and pulled strings for him at the White House during the 1946 coal strike.

Furthering this plot, Fuller was quietly brought to Washington by Steelman, promised the plum of director of the Conciliation Service on July 1. But, Steelman warned, the arrangement must be kept very hush-hush. So Fuller set up shop in a Washington hotel, and quietly began selecting his staff.

Naturally, the deal leaked out, whereupon Ching walked in on a meeting of regional directors of the Conciliation Service in Washington and announced:

"I understand Drew Pearson says I am resigning. I am in good health. I like my work. I am not resigning."

Soon after that, Fuller returned to Akron, refused to answer telephone calls from pals who wanted to know the score. At the White House, John Steelman is blaming it all on the press.

A VISITOR was complaining to President Truman about all the war talk emanating from Washington, especially from the armed services.

The President shrugged his shoulders.

"It's about like Jim Forrestal used to say," he observed. "If you tell Congress everything about the world situation, they get hysterical, and if you tell them nothing, they go fishing."

Bevin Disappoints Lie

TRYGVE LIE has given out no details of his conversation with European chiefs, but privately he has told colleagues at Lake Success that his conversation with British Foreign Minister Bevin was a great disappointment.

As Secretary General of the United Nations, Lie was expecting to get some encouragement from the British Foreign Secretary, whose public statements have always been strong and warm in favor of the United Nations.

But Bevin said just the opposite. He said the British government had lost confidence in the U. N.'s ability to meet the world crisis, felt the only sure defense was the Atlantic Pact.

Bevin added that Britain's postwar position, having lost large areas of the empire, was such that security must be had by a grouping of friendly states.

Bevin gave Lie the impression of a man who had lost hope in world-wide international cooperation.

Two Irishmen

SENATOR McCARTHY recently got into an argument with an Irish taxi driver in Washington—with unexpected results.

The Wisconsin Senator and a companion hopped in the cab of jovial Fred O'Brien, promptly got into an argument about McCarthy's tactics against the State Department. Finally the Senator said, "We'll leave it up to the driver whether I'm right or not."

"Driver," he asked, "I'm Joe McCarthy. You think I'm doing the right thing, don't you?"

Without blinking an eyelash, O'Brien replied: "No, you oughta keep still unless you can prove what you've been saying. You've done yourself and Congress and the Government a lot of harm."

There was a shocked pause. Then the Senator asked: "What college did you go to?"

The cabbie replied that he didn't go to college, but was still able to have his opinion of McCarthy's tactics.

Behind the Curtain

A GRAY-HAIRED, enthusiastic American who made a fortune in a land his parents adopted as their own, has offered the State Department a million leaflets to send behind the iron curtain.

Fred Danner, a printer from Akron, Ohio, recently told Assistant Secretary of State Ed Barrett: "No other country on earth could give me so much as the United States. I want to repay it a little bit."

Danner has a cartoon leaflet describing life in America that he will print in any colors or languages and donate one million copies for distribution in satellite nations.

"What a terrific story we have to tell," he explodes, "of paved streets, automobiles, plumbing and electric refrigerators. We live like kings. This leaflet could make the reader in Eastern Europe think—'perhaps this could be me?'"

Danner's parents came from Germany, a country he visited on a 12-nation Europen tour last year. As a jobless printer, he walked into Akron in 1912 with $3.85 in his pocket. Today, he owns one of the largest printing establishments in the nation.

Tax Forgiveness

CONGRESSMAN Stephen Young, Ohio Democrat, delivered the final agrument in getting the Ways and Means Committee to reverse itself on granting forgiveness to income-tax evaders.

"It is a travesty of justice for Uncle Sam to say to racketeers and other tax evaders, 'You are forgiven. Go and sin no more,'" argued Young behind closed doors.

"It seems to me utterly fantastic that we should even contemplate something like this when the Senate is using the money of honest taxpayers to investigate these very same criminals and gangsters who have been most remiss in their income tax obligations," continued the Ohioan.

The committee, with Congressman Forand of Rhode Island, author of the amendment, absent, agreed with Young.

Terror-Striking Senators

DALE DOTY, new Assistant Secretary of Interior, had a big letdown when he came before a Senate committee for confirmation.

For one week preceding his ordeal, Doty tried to think of every possible question the Senators might ask. He turned the department upside down getting exact answers, and the night before his appearance he couldn't sleep.

Next day, Doty sat for two hours outside the committee doors. He could imagine the Senators wrangling angrily and preparing stinging questions to ask him. Finally, with shaking knees and forehead perspiring, he walked in.

Doty's heart sank when ranking Republican Hugh Butler started speaking. But all Butler asked was, "Do I understand that both California Senators have recommended Mr. Doty?"

"Yes," replied Chairman O'Mahoney.

"I move his confirmation then," said the Senator.

Fulton Oursler's Modern Parables

Interrupted Funeral

DEAR Friends and Gentle Hearts:

Some of the best stories I know were told to me by missionaries, like the tale of the dead man of Pithra and the queer thing that befell at his funeral, only a year or so ago.

More than all else, it is the story of the stubborn faith of Jean de Jonghe. The remote village of Pithra in India was part of Pere Jean's vast parish. The people there clung to ancient idols, and after months of effort the missionary had made only one convert, an old man named Sunda Singh. His relatives scolded the old man; they were a hundred against one, but for a long time Sunda Singh stubbornly remained the only Christian in Pithra.

One day when Pere Jean was hundreds of miles from the town, a letter was brought to him by caravan. It was from Sunda Singh and read:

"Soon I shall face the one true God. My relatives have disturbed my faith with their doubts. Please come and explain before I die."

Pere Jean mounted his horse and started off for Pithra. His route lay through rough mountains, and, near the end of his journey, he was overtaken by high winds and floods. More than once he risked his horse and his life swimming across a swollen river. He barely slept, and his body ached with fatigue as he struggled on.

BACK in Pithra, old Sunda Singh realized he was breathing his last. Around his deathbed stood his wife and sons and daughters and grandchildren, all weeping and sorrowing because he would not come back to the religion of his ancestors. The bonze, or priest of the village temple, clad in copper-colored robe, chanted a heathen prayer.

Finally the local doctor raised his hand in a sign that all was over. The old man's son closed the eyes. The body was packed with spices and wrapped in long rolls of linen. The bonze forced open the rigid jaws and inserted between the upper and lower teeth a copper coin. That was traveling money—the "dahar Karcha"—to pay for the soul's passage into another world.

Next morning the funeral procession began to move from the house down a long and winding street. Mourners from the temple shook their bronze rattles and sang ancient music. The sons and daughters moaned and wept. The litter carriers were nearing a sharp turn in the street, when suddenly there appeared before them a haggard rider on a sweating horse. It was Pere Jean de Jonghe, barely conscious after his heartbreaking strain—and too late.

At sight of the missionary, the pallbearers and the mourners stopped in their tracks, all frightened. So suddenly did they halt that they violently shook the body which they were carrying.

At that moment, there came from the mouth of the dead man in that winding sheet a resounding cough.

THE mourners screamed with fear. One cried out that a devil had entered the body. They dropped the litter and fled, leaving only Pere Jean de Jongh beside the body of his convert.

The missionary knew a live cough when he heard one. He also knew the local funeral customs. One glance at the pale face of his friend told him what had happened. They had so jolted the body that the coin—the travel money—had been knocked loose from between the teeth and dropped down into the throat.

That cough meant that the old man still had life in him.

Pere Jean knelt and thrust two fingers down the old man's throat. He pulled the travel money out of the windpipe. A deep groan escaped Sunda Singh as he opened his eyes and looked up at Pere Jean.

The man who had been snatched back from the grave lived only a few days more, but long enough to make it possible for him to close his eyes at peace in his adopted faith.

What is a miracle? One of our popular dictionaries says that it is "any wonderful or amazing thing, fact or event." Surely, then, this was a miracle—of coincidence, perhaps, but certainly of one good man's faith and persistence and his love of God and his fellow men.

Anyway, since that apparent rising from the dead, Pere Jean has made many, many converts in Pithra.

Matter of Fact

GM's Wilson Has Reds Frothing

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

THE United States is now enjoying the biggest boom that this country—or any other country—has ever seen. This great wave of prosperity is one of the basic facts of these times. It helps to explain all sorts of phenomena, from President Truman's permanent grin to the suddenness of the British post-devaluation recovery. Thus it is worth having a look at the boom through the eyes of the Council of Economic Advisers, whose duty it is to probe the national economy suspiciously from all sides.

As for the bigness of the boom, the figures prepared by the Council of Economic Advisers speak for themselves. Economists are fond of talking about the "gross national product"—which means, quite simply, the sum total of the goods and services produced in the country in a given year. It is the most reliable fever chart of national prosperity.

The Economic Advisers use the purchasing power of the 1949 dollar as a measuring yard. By this measurement, the gross national product, in billions of 1949 dollars, for the great boom year of 1929 stood at 152; for 1939, at 160, and for 1948, at a collossal 260. This was when many economic seers began prophesying doom.

But doom did not arrive. There was a dip in 1949, but there has been an outstanding comeback this year. For, using the 1949-dollar yardstick, the American economy is now operating at a rate of 270 billion dollars. And, according to the Economic Advisers, if the current rate of industrial expansion continues, by the end of this year the gross national product should be close to 280 billion dollars.

A Cautious Optimist

THIS is boom indeed, prosperity beyond the wildest dreams of the past. Behind the dull figures there is a simple, startling fact. The American people are carrying a heavy load of defense and foreign spending, and at the same time they are making and using more stuff—which means living better—than ever before in history.

Can this agreeable state of affairs last? After all, the word "boom" has an unpleasant twin, the word "bust." Asked for his views of the future, Leon Keyserling, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, reacts with the instinctive caution of all economists, carefully pointing to certain hidden rocks and shoals in the American economy.

Yet Keyserling does exude a certain ill-concealed optimisum. This optimism derives from various sources, but especially from a recent speech delivered in Washington by Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors. In this speech, Wilson discussed his new contract with the United Automobile Workers. And when Keyserling talks about Wilson's speech, he becomes (rather surprisingly, in view of his reputation as a baiter of big business) almost lyrical.

In this speech, Wilson enunciated what he called "the principle of annual improvement in real wages based on technology." This does not sound very exciting. Yet it is hardly too much to say that this Wilsonian principle is downright revolutionary. For one thing, it knocks into a cocked hat a basic Marxist assumption, which leads the Kremlin and the Communists confidently to predict the economic collapse of the United States.

'Not Enough Money'

IN ITS simplest form, this Marxist theory is that as the worker's tools improve, the amount he produces increases—in the United States this increase is about two and a half percent a year. But, because of the nature of the capitalist system, the workers' wages are not increased, according to the Marxists, and the national income thus remains static. Thus fewer and fewer people produce more and more things; there is not enough money to buy these things; demand collapses; mass unemployment and deep depression inevitably ensue.

Yet the Wilsonian principle, embodied in the new contract, which promises an annual real wage increase of 2½ percent over a five-year period, "makes a monkey out of Karl Marx," to quote one observer. It is thus perhaps not surprising that the Communist Daily Worker has been fairly frothing at the mouth over the GM-UAW "slave contract." Nor is it surprising, to be sure, that a good many businessmen have been equally horrified, taking, as Wilson says, "the classical reactionary position that has loaded the guns for the Communists and Socialists regularly." Yet it is surely significant that Wilson, one of the country's half dozen most powerful industrialists, has expressed the hope that his principle will be generally accepted in industry.

This may be too much to expect. It may also be too much to expect (as Wilson also clearly expects, since otherwise his contract makes no sense at all) that the country can look forward to at least five more years of very great properity. Big businessmen like Wilson have been wrong before. So have economists like Keyserling.

Yet neither man is a fool. And neither man now anticipates the collapse for which the men in the Kremlin pray daily to their Marxist-Leninist gods and godlings. That at any rate is something to be thankful for.

$83,626 in Bonds Uncashed

We Still Owe a 1776 'War Debt'

By Robert E. Geiger

THE United States Treasury doesn't want this to touch off any treasure hunts but—

About $83,626.77 worth of Government obligations are left over from Revolutionary War times that nobody has ever bothered to collect.

Now don't puff too hard on that dream pipe for just a moment, please. And don't tear the attack trunk apart hunting hidden certificates.

Meet Edwin L. Kilby, commissioner of the public debt.

Kilby has done so much research on old debts that parts of some American history books may have to be corrected.

HIS digging among the ancient documents that record the birth of a nation convinced him that the founding fathers were very sharp people. They wanted to pay the young republic's just debts, but also were aware that some people are always out to make a fast buck.

The 13 colonies incurred a stiff debt fighting off the British. Charles Beard, the historian, estimated the Continental Congress issued around 210 million dollars in obligations before the end of the Revolution. This was only a fraction of money and loan certificates put out by the individual colonies and the Confederation of States that preceded the United States.

The young nation's obligations became so numerous, and there was so little hard money to pay them, that the situation gave rise to that well known expression "not worth a Continental." This referred to currency put out by the Continental Congress.

George Washington was inaugurated as the First President of the United States April 30, 1789. One of the first acts of the first United States (Rather than Continental) Congress was to fund the debts of the States and of the Confederation.

An act of 1790 gave citizens the opportunity to turn in loan certificates of the States and of the Confederation for the new United States of America obligations, if they wished to. Many apparently chose to keep the old obligations.

Also, Congress passed a law barring payment of the old Confederation obligations after 1799. Later, other Congresses reopened the books for payment of these old debts. The last opportunity was more than 100 years ago, in 1838, but Congress could pass an act to make any or all of them good.

Kilby says his research indicates $55,757 worth of the original obligations—those issued before Congress passed the funding law in 1790—are outstanding. These are the ones that had to be turned in before 1836.

But there are obligations worth about $27,869.77 of the funded United States of America obligations of 1790, uncashed.

In 1939, E. E. Foster of Cedar Rapids, Ia., presented a $200 Confederation loan certificate of 1780.

Kilby says Treasury experts told Foster the old congressional laws barred payment of this certificate. They said it would take an act of Congress to get payment.

There was a bill in Congress to do this, but it died in the War Claims Committee.

As for the $27,869.77 of funded of 1790 still outstanding:

Kilby says the United States Government stands behind its debts. If any citizen could show a legal claim for one of these bonds, his case would receive consideration.

Our Political Economy

Russians Twist U. S. Job Figures

By Ysabel Rennie

HOW does the United States economy look to the Russians? Two articles in Pravda by Soviet Economist Eugene Varga let us see ourselves as our enemies wish us to be seen.

Varga has been in the ideological doghouse since 1947 when he published "Changes in the Economy of Capitalism as a Result of the Second World War," a book alleged to be lukewarm in its attack on United States capitalism. He has now seen the error of his ways.

His articles in Pravda show us the American economy reflected through the distorting glass of Soviet propaganda. Varga finds the United States deep in depression, with 18 million full- or part-time unemployed. To arrive at this figure he takes the Census Bureau studies of the labor force, and adds together all those working less than 35 hours as well as those listed as "with a job but not at work" because of vacation, illness, strike, bad weather or temporary layoff.

This explains his reasoning, but not his addition. Assuming him to be using the figures for February, when unemployment was at its worst, these rubrics would have added up to slightly over 11 million persons.

Varga asserts that thousands of American plants are idle, others are on part time. The automobile industry is running at half capacity. He does not explain this last assertion, but it may be that he considers one shift a day as part-time operation. Because of a scarcity of plants and machines, many Soviet industries operate two shifts.

"The plight of the unemployed is terrible. In the United States . . . there is no Government insurance against unemployment."

Does He Believe It?

HOW MUCH of this does Varga himself believe? However orthodox his Marxism, he has in the past shown himself to be well informed. It is safe to say that he does not believe very much of it.

It is well to remember that Eugene Varga has been through the purifying experience of "Marxian self-criticism." When he fell from favor in 1947 he lost his post as director of the Institute of World Economics and World Politics, as well as the editorship of its journal.

Varga has never been either pro-American or an economist of Western orientation. But he had the misfortune to publish a book on the capitalist countries at a time when the party line was changing. He was too tepid in his criticism: specifically, he foretold a postwar recession in the United States when he should have forecast the overthrow of capitalism.

For two years Varga stood up to his critics and refused to take back a single important point. His courage was surprising, but it did him no good. In the words of K. V. Ostrovityanov, who replaced him in his job, Varga "should know from the history of our party to what sad consequences the stubborn insistence on one's errors leads."

Insecurity Rules

THIS comedy has been played before. It shows the insecurity which dominates Soviet thought as well as action.

Born in Hungary, Varga has been a leading Soviet economist since 1920. He has never wavered in his loyalty. Yet the men who direct the Kremlin's policy feared what he had to say because they did not want to believe it.

In theory, the Politburo may have an exact appraisal of events abroad, whatever it broadcasts for home consumption. Yet in the last analysis, the truth is not divisible.

Varga's story proves this point. The men in the Kremlin are the victims of their own lies. The time comes when nobody dares tell them the truth. It is Hans Christian Andersen's fable of the king's wonderful new clothes. Everyone but the king knew he was parading about in his underwear, but nobody dared say so.

In this case, fear has bred insecurity and the insecurity has bred delusion. But the Russians' wishful thinking also carries a warning.

They are telling themselves we are in a depression because this would be our greatest calamity and their greatest gain. They expect capitalism to commit suicide, and they can hardly wait to come to the funeral.

The Gallup Poll

GOP 'Standing Still'

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

REPUBLICAN Party prospects for capturing control of the House this November appear to be getting no brighter as the campaign progresses.

The over-all voting strength of the party has shown no change since spring in the American Institute of Public Opinion's periodic tests of political sentiment throughout the country.

The proportion of persons who say they prefer Republican Party candidates today is no larger now than it was in 1948 and far below 1946. While it is certainly possible that the campaigning this summer and the trend of world events may increase Republican strength, there would have to be a very substantial change in sentiment to give the Republicans a shooting chance for control of the House in the fall elections.

Here is what the latest Institute survey, based on a carefully constructed cross-section of United States voters from coast-to-coast, shows:

1—A total of 49½ percent of voters outside the South with opinions say they would favor the Republican candidate if congressional elections were being held in their districts at the present time, while 50½ percent say they would favor the Democratic candidate.

This compares with a percentage division of 50-50 in the 1948 congressional elections, and 57-43 in favor of the Republicans in 1946, when the GOP won control of both houses of Congress.

2—While the anti-Truman revolt brewing in the South may be of help to the Republicans in the next presidential race, the situation rarely changes in the South so far as congressional voting is concerned.

Even in the big Republican year of 1946, the best year the GOP has had in the last 20—only 2 of the 122 congressional districts in the South shifted from Democratic to Republican.

Even if the Republicans this year were able to sweep the North, the Southern situation would show little change from the division in 1948 when the Democrats won 118 seats; the Republicans only 4.

The Republican problem nationally, then, is this: the party is running a slightly less than even race outside the South and far behind in the South.

In conducting its survey the Institute questioned a cross-section of voters in all walks of life—farmers, white-collar workers, factory workers, housewives, business and professional men and women, etc. asking this question:

"If the elections for Congress were being held today, which party would you like to see win in this State—the Republican Party or the Democratic Party?"

The following tables give the vote outside the South. The first shows the vote including those who express themselves as undecided at this time; the second gives the division excluding the undecided.

(Including Undecided)
Republican	41%
Democratic	42
Other and undecided	17
	100%

(Excluding Undecided)
Republican	49½%
Democratic	50½%

When these results are stacked up alongside the vote in the 1946 and 1948 congressional elections, and in an earlier Institute survey in April, the trend looks like this:

	Rep.	Dem.
1946 election	57%	43%
1948 election	50	50
April, 1950 survey	49½	50½
Today	49½	50½

It must be emphasized that the latest survey figures are a reflection of sentiment nearly six months in advance of election and should not in any sense be construed as a forecast of what will happen November 7.

If historical patterns repeat themselves, the Republicans can look forward to gaining strength in this off-year or midterm election. With only one exception in the last four midterm elections, the party out of power gained seats in the house. The exception was in 1934.

What's in a Street Name? Plenty!

By Harry N. Stull

THERE appears to have been no opposition at the recent hearing to the proposal to change the names of B st. ne. to Constitution ave. and B st. se. to Independence ave. While the matter would appear on the surface to be of little importance, the mere changing of the name of a street to an avenue does not make it such, since avenues in the District are uniformly wider roadways than streets. The change may eliminate confusion, as was stated, and may be in the interest of certain businesses situated along these thoroughfares.

STULL

Another reason assigned for the change is that it would fit into the long-range plan for developing the area east of the Capitol into an extension of the Mall. The plan referred to has been on the agenda of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for many years.

First, it appeared as a plan to line East Capitol st. with buildings of the respective States, but this scheme appears to have died. It then appeared as a plan by which the Federal Government could obtain much needed office space and at the same time carry out Major L'Enfant's original plan of balancing the Mall on the west with a similar one to the east of the Capitol.

When this plan was pushed several years ago the residents of the area proposed to be taken (from B st. se. to B st. ne., and from the Capitol to the Anacostia River) protested violently against the idea, which would eliminate 13 churches, several schools, many long-established businesses, and eject thousands of residents who would then be compelled to seek homes elsewhere.

This grandiose plan did not succeed then, and unless the people of the District are more docile than heretofore, it will not succeed in the future.

This plan envisions the taking of more than 80 blocks of the City of Washington, with a consequent loss to the city of taxes, which at this time is an important matter. It is not contended that the protests of citizens will check the operation of eminent domain if the Government needs office space.

If, however, the property was not obtained during the war, it can hardly be justified at a time when Federal personnel is being drastically reduced. The plan would require the expenditure of many millions of dollars, and if Congress is in the same mood it was at the time the plan was first pressed, there is little likelihood that it will succeed.

Milk Strike Is Over

THE residents of this community will certainly heave a sigh of relief at the ending of the eight-day milk strike. The settlement seems to have been a compromise, but the public is still a sufferer, either through curtailed service or higher prices. Already it is hinted that a half cent a quart increase is a possibility.

It would seem to be high time that this whole milk situation had a complete going over. The public is entitled to know whether the law which restricts the milk supply constitutes a monopoly, or whether this arrangement assures the District a more germ-free supply of milk, said to be the finest grade of milk in the country.

The bill introduced in the House by Representative Miller of Nebraska would permit the sale here of Grade A milk from any part of the country that met the requirements of the United States Public Health Service. While District residents will insist upon the purity of the milk delivered for consumption here, they also would like to be relieved of a recurrence of conditions which endangered the lives of children.

Double Parking Troubles

IT'S gratifying to learn that the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council has given consideration to the important matter of double parking by merchant trucks, even though the approach seems to be a voluntary one.

It is proposed that all organizations operating trucks be requested to cooperate to eliminate this evil and that pertinent parts of traffic regulations be furnished them. It may be that more drastic action will be found necessary, even though the difficulties of enforcement are great.

It would seem more important from a safety standpoint to designate certain personnel to eliminate this hazard than to have the same men engaged in ticketing cars parked overtime.

A Self-Portrait of Byrd Machine

By Benjamin Muse

MARTIN A. HUTCHINSON, the 1946 primary opponent of Senator Harry F. Byrd, whom President Truman named to the Federal Trade Commission, is a man of considerable ability and of unquestioned integrity, but both the nomination and the opposition to it were blatant political horseplay—and President Truman started it.

MUSE

Nevertheless, at the tail end of the lengthy statement in which Senator Byrd and Senator A. Willis Robertson presented their objections to the appointment of Hutchinson to the Senate Commerce Committee, there is a remark which merits reexamination apart from the incident itself.

The 3000-word document was taken up mainly with a history of the Federal Trade Commission and a discussion of the joint responsibility of the President and the Senate in making certain appointments. Only in the last three paragraphs was reference made to the fitness or unfitness of Hutchison for the job in question.

The two Byrd machine leaders found Hutchinson lacking in "judicial temperament," "training," "experience" and "competency," and declared that he "exhibits a blind support of public policies merely because such are advocated by certain party leaders."

They were talking about the antimachine leader; but, with all respect to two statesmen of whom Virginia has much reason to be proud, they described, with an aptness which Francis Pickens Miller could not have excelled, the greatest weakness in their own famous political organization. Without a great number of politicians who "exhibit blind support of public policies merely because such are advocated by certain party leaders," there would be no Byrd machine.

Discipline Very Rigid

DISCIPLINE in the Virginia Democratic organization, which Byrd has directed for nearly a quarter of a century, is most rigid at the State level. Although enthusiasm for the New Deal or the Fair Deal have been generally frowned upon by the machine, considerable latitude is permitted to those who wish to support the party's candidate during a presidential campaign.

But, in State politics, support for the policies and men approved by the organization is rigorously required. Anguish awaits the stalwart who cannot meet that requirement. In practice the recalcitrant generally retires and may or may not come back after a period of penance, or else—as Hutchinson and others have done—he goes into the antimachine camp.

"I like your bill all right, but I can't vote for it until you sell it to the Big Boys." . . . The writer, a one-time member of the State Senate, has heard those exact words from a colleague. It is not often expressed as bluntly as that, but the sense of it is familiar to many Virginia legislators. Machine pressure was used with exceptional restraint in the last session of the General Assembly—doubtless as a result of Miller's reverberating antimachine campaign last year. But in many sessions it has been exerted with a crudeness of which Senator Byrd himself may not be fully aware.

Efficiency Is Noted

IT IS NOT DENIED that the system—directed as it is in Virginia by able and honest men—results in much efficiency of administration and that it keeps screwball agitation well under control. But make no mistake about it: that is the system. It is the machine principle, discernible to some extent in politics everywhere, but to an extraordinary degree in Virginia. For the Byrd organization is no ordinary machine. Probably a greater proportion of the politicians in Virginia than in any other State, habitually over a period of years, "exhibit blind support of public policies merely because such are advocated by certain party leaders."

The "certain party leaders," however, are Senator Byrd and his friends.

THIS column last Sunday reflected the general concusion in Richmond that the defeat of Oliver W. Hill, Negro councilman, in his campaign for reelection, was due to resentment at the recent antisegregation decisions of the Supreme Court. The Richmond Times-Dispatch subsequently, upon an exhaustive study of election figures, precinct by precinct, has reasonably established the fact that this was not necessarily the case.

Hill, who lost by only 44 votes, received more votes in the predominantly white precincts than in 1949. However, Negro voters who, in 1948, voted for Hill only, this time voted for candidates for all nine vacancies, swelling the total vote to where Hill was nosed out.

Primary Date a Perennial Thorn

By James P. Connolly

THE SPECIAL session of the Legislature which Governor Lane has said he will call to change the date of the Maryland State primary, now set for Monday, September 11, because it happens to be the eve of the Jewish New Year, is the last special session that should be necessary for that particular purpose.

CONNOLLY

This is not the first time the dates have conflicted, and, under the present law, it would not be the last. Since the legislators now are paid on an annual instead of a per diem basis, a special session is not as expensive as it was, but the last cost estimate was $18,000.

So an extra session is still an expensive, inconvenient and cumbersome way of adjusting a recurring detail of difference, and a comprehensive change in the election law is indicated.

One of the purposes of the change this year from biennial to annual sessions of the Assembly was to avert the need for extra sessions, with their extra expense. But, if extra sessions are to be avoided, the legislators and the administration will have to be more farsighted in their deliberations.

This can be accomplished in part by making the fixing of the election date more flexible, as it used to be. The Governor or the Attorney General can be given authority to shift the date to take care of any emergency, or the power can be vested, as it was, in the State central committees of the two major parties.

Difficulty Over Deadlines

UNTIL 1945, the law fixed a date—the second Monday in September—but granted the governing bodies of the major parties, the Democratic and Republican State central committees, the privilege of settling on any other mutually agreeable date not earlier than September 8 or later than September 15.

There was no general or hard and fast dissatisfaction with this system, but sometimes the State central committees were dilatory. They were hard to get together, and once or twice they failed to agree. When they failed, it involved some difficulty or doubt about the deadline for filing candidacies in the primary

When the State central committees failed to hit it off, the decision fell back on the statute, so it was felt that the date had better be fixed inflexibly, which was done. The change was made in 1945 on recommendaion of a special commission to revise the election laws named by former Governor O'Conor and headed by Hilary W. Gans, attorney.

There are at least two precedents for calling a special session to change the primary date to meet special conditions. In 1920, after the adoption of the Federal suffrage amendment, the late Governor Ritchie called a special session to give women the right to register and qualify to vote. In the early '30s, Governor Ritchie called another special session to change the preprimary registration day, which happened in that year to coincide with the Jewish New Year.

Expression of Confidence

GOVERNOR LANE, deep in a campaign for renomination and reelection, is considered by some to be assuming a dangerous risk in calling a special session now. The Legislature's field, once the Assembly has been convened, is unlimited, and it might conceivably embark on embarrassing legislative byways.

But runaway legislatures are hardly a tradition in Maryland. In recent years, especially, relations between the Legislature and the executive office have been harmonious. The present Assembly enacted most of the Governor's policies, and it is a demonstration of his confidence in the lawmakers—and perhaps of their confidence in him—that he feels safe in calling them into special session at this crucial time.

There is also a certain safety factor involved. Since the purpose of the special session has a religious significance, there is the chance that any effort on the part of any opposition to turn it to political advantage might backfire.

The Magazine Rack

DO YOU BELONG to one of America's first 50 families? Is your name Smith, Johnson, Brown, Williams, Miller, Jones, Davis, Anderson, Wilson or Tyler? These are the top ten in the American hit parade of widely shared family monikers. Edith Rose names these and 40 more in the order of use and gives little-known facts about them in Good Housekeeping.

For instance, the Joneses used to be second to the Smiths but have fallen to sixth place. There are more John Browns and John Joneses than John Smiths, because the Smiths seem to think John is too plain to give their sons. Mark Twain once dedicated a book to John Jones on the theory that most people who have books dedicated to them buy them.

Jones and Johnson both derive from John, which means God's Grace, and are simply two ways of saying John's son, says Miss Rose. "But Owens, Jenkins, Evans, and MacShane—even Giovanni, Yankowitze, Jansen and Ivanovitch—all mean son of John."

A. J. CRONIN, the famous novelist who started out as a doctor, writes "Why I Believe in God" in the Woman's Home Companion. As a medical student, Cronin recalls, he had the usual superior and skeptical attitude. When he started out in practice and witnessed the courage and good humor of people in the face of hardships, he realized that life held more than the textbooks revealed and took his first step toward religion when he lost his superiority, he reports.

He speaks from faith now, says the author, because never has the question of belief in God been so urgent or vital as today, and at the same time it is one from which people shy away as though it were in questionable taste. While half the world is bound by an atheistic ideology which wages tireless war against religion, we, in the other half, are apathetic in our attitude and "dead to the true meaning of existence," Cronin charges.

He appeals to no particular sect or creed. He does not attempt to prove the existence of God by a mathematical equation or a geometrical problem. "The revelation of God comes only from the heart," he says, and relates briefly how it came to him.

Miller makes generous use of the columns, and they read as well as they always did. But he uses even more letters to Pyle's wife, whom he remarried by proxy while overseas, and to his friends and editors. It was during the African campaign, covered here, that Pyle grew to be the nationally famous and beloved figure he was. Mrs. Roosevelt stated she never missed a column if she could help it. Quentin Reynolds declared he was going to call his next book, "Do You Know Ernie Pyle?" Miller tells what went into the making of a hero.

A Peek Into History

Lewis' Letters Reveal 'Case Study' of Grant

LETTERS FROM LLOYD LEWIS, Showing Steps in the Research for His Biography of U. S. Grant. Little, Brown. 83 pp. $2 (with "Captain Sam Grant, $7.50).

THE "Letters From Lloyd Lewis," whose "Captain Sam Grant" has been winning universal praise since its publication a few weeks ago, take the reader backstage in the writing of a biography.

Robert Maynard Hutchins, in his introduction to the "Letters," says "they are exactly like his conversation, which is one of the great departed glories of the Middle West." And the letters—addressed chiefly to Angus Cameron, Mr. Lewis's editor at Little, Brown—are a glorious peek into the mind and personality of a lively and vital man, and a period of American history that is interesting a constantly growing number of readers.

Culled from scores of passages that cry for quotation, the following is a sample of Lewis at work:

July 1, 1947—The biography "appalls me, yet it is incredibly real in my mind. Some days it seems the only real thing in the world—and my lima beans, where I hoe for a half hour or so now and then, a phantom, something that happened 80 years ago."

April 17, 1947—Grant "said the Rebels had more dash, but the Northerners more steadfastness, determination, stubbornness.

Rebel Army Gaunt

"NOW I doubt if this explanation is as sound as a thing I note—the Rebels in their great dash overrun Federal camps in several battles, then stop to eat and losing their momentum, never get it back . . . Their soldiers are always talking about the better food issued by the North. Their prisoners always seem awful hungry—they are a gaunt army, lean, sallow, long-legged, long-armed, apparently tough, but how enduring were they? . . .

"In modern times much is written about the undernourishment of the rank and file of Southerners, bad diet, hookworm, pellagra, etc., in the farming regions. Weren't the same Tobacco Road conditions in the 1850's and 1860's sapping the endurance of the population?"

July 1, 1947—"Did Halleck's piles trouble him in March as they did in September? If I knew that I could explain things that must otherwise be charged to a ferment at the other end of his spinal column."

July 8, 1948—"I discover that Captain Buchanan, the officer who canned Grant for drinking, was so zealous for booze and gambling in Mexico City that Scott had to connive with religious officers to curb the fellow's influence on younger officers."

2 Other Chapters Planned

MR. LEWIS had reached the point in his biography where Grant is going to war. He had planned, Mrs. Lewis has written me, "to write two additional chapters, taking Grant to Glory at Donelson" for the first volume. The "Letters"—which, of course, do not represent his considered final judgment—reveal how much further research had already been done before death interrupted on April 21, 1949.

They show, too: How alive a past period can become for a man engaged in research, and it must come alive if his book is to be truly good; the excitement of research, a form of exploration; and how contagious a vital personality can be.—L. G.

BOOKS

Jeremiah Beaumont and Colonel Fort in the murder scene of Robert Penn Warren's "World Enough and Time," as illustrated by Piotr Dimitri in Wings, Literary Guild Review

Fundamentally Silly Plot

Reader Must Accept Warren's 'Romance'

By Lee Grove

WORLD ENOUGH AND TIME. By Robert Penn Warren. Random House. 512 pp. $3.50.

PUBLICATION of a new novel by Robert Penn Warren, author of "All the King's Men," would under any circumstances be an event. In the instance of "World Enough and Time," the expectation of quality is justified, though because of its originality it is not quite what may have been anticipated.

WARREN

There is no subtitle on the title page of "World Enough and Time," but on the jacket the work is described as "A Romantic Novel," and the adjective, understood in its literary sense, is the apt description. If "World Enough and Time" is not accepted as a romantic novel by the reader, then it is a story whose fundamental silliness cannot be concealed by all the mannered poet's prose in the world.

Briefly, the plot situation involves a young man, Jeremiah Beaumont, and a young woman, Rachel Jordan, in the Kentucky of a century and a quarter ago. Rachel has a child, born dead, by Colonel Fort, Jeremiah's friend and patron. Jeremiah, who has known nothing of the girl until after the event, seeks her out in her distant home, courts her, and agrees to kill Fort as a condition to her consent to marriage.

Warren phrases it better: ". . . one of the men, the older, had done something perfectly natural. He had been in a lonely house with a handsome, young, neurotic, desperate woman, had brought her sympathy, and had, finally, tupped her in a dark parlor. At the time the young woman was not even known to the younger man. Hecuba had been nothing to him and he nothing to Hecuba."

Compelled to Create

THE realist, the naturalist, would snort at this situation where, to concede the doubtful, Rachel was a victim rather than an adult participant, and view with horror as a psychiatric abnormal the Johnny-come-lately who feels it incumbent to take upon his shoulders that which is best left to due process of law. Even in the light of the mores of Jeremiah's own day, as Warren indicates at one point in his book, many must have felt he was arrogating unto himself what is God's prerogative.

But this fundamental romantic situation has to be accepted by the reader on the author's terms, and, accepted, "World Enough and Time" becomes the story of an inept idealist.

"Jeremiah Beaumont had to create his world or be the victim of a world he did not create. Out of his emptiness, which he could not satisfy with any fullness of the world, he had to bring forth whatever fullness might be his . . . The gratuitous act: that was what he sought. But why did he seek it, the act outside the motives of the world?"

And Warren, the poet, answers, "The answer is easy. It was the only way he knew to define himself, to create his world. We look back on his story, so confused and comic and pretentious and sad, and it seems very strange to us, for our every effort is to live in the world, to accept its explanations, to do nothing gratuitously. But is his story so strange? Explanations can only explain explanations, and the self is gratuitous in the end."

Denied the Gallows

WITH slow inevitability, deflected at times but the very deflections shaping him back to his route, Jeremiah moves to the appointed end.

Warren's story is derived from "the Beauchamp Case," a murder that rocked Warren's native Kentucky and became literary material for William Gilmore Simms, Edgar Allan Poe and others. In this history, Jeroboam Beauchamp in 1825 stabbed another man. On the eve of his hanging for murder, he took laudanum in his cell with his wife, and when this proved ineffectual they stabbed themselves. She died but he was carried to the gallows.

In Warren's book, hanging is not the appointed end for Jeremiah and his Rachel. As a result of a rescue, which by its very nature was a betrayal by the outside world, Jeremiah, the man who as a child had been fascinated by the pictures of martyrs in an old book, and his wife live on for meals of ashes that end in her mad suicide and his subsequent murder.

There would have been a triumph for Jeremiah on the gallows, but it was not to Warren's purpose. Warren would have his Jeremiah end not on a note of drama, self-crucified, but in the slums of the mind.

"Was all for naught?" Jeremiah asks at the conclusion. Like Pilate's query about the truth, it is a question for the moralist.

Awful Writing

JEREMIAH'S romantically pretentious story is told slowly in a measured prose that abounds with such flavorsome words as "norated," "prinking," and "flingfooted"—words that come richly but not unseemly, so deeply has Warren saturated himself in the period.

At times the story stops for the author's interpolations and for biographical digressions on the past and future facts of those who figure in the narrative. Jeremiah and his world are seen half as the historian would see him.

Characters are sometimes shadowy in delineation, but the world itself was shadowy to Jeremiah, and when the reader finishes he knows that he has read writing of artful skill, and a poem in novel form.

U. S. Agencies Law Practice

A MANUAL ON TRIAL TECHNIQUE IN ADMINISTRATION PROCEEDINGS and ILLUSTRATIVE FEDERAL ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCIES. Published by the Bar Association of the District of Columbia. 80 pp., $2.

IN THIS pamphlet, the Junior Bar Section of the Bar Association presents a guide to the administrative lawyer in Washington. It follows the general lines of the Practice Manual for the District of Columbia Courts prepared earlier by the association.

The lead article, written by Judge E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals, traces a case from its initial preparation in the offices of a lawyer through appellate court review. In it are hints to the young lawyer as well as refresher material for the experienced practitioner.

The attorney is cautioned not to rely on histrionics or repartee in an administrative hearing, but to build a clear written record that will establish his side of the controversy. He is also shown how he can best build a record with brevity and conciseness.

Part II of the pamphlet cites the statutory authority, jurisdiction, description of organization, some illustrative procedures, judicial review, practice requirements and suggested references for the agencies.

The preface is written by John F. Donelan, chairman of the administrative law practice manual committee of the bar association.

Ivan—God Of All the Stalinists

By Ferdinand Kuhn

THE DEADLY PARALLEL: Stalin and Ivan the Terrible. By George Backer. Random House. 240 pp. $3.50.

THE EAGLE AND THE BEAR: A Primer of Political Philosophy. By Pennington Haile. Ives Washburn. 194 pp. $2.50.

WHEN George Backer was in Moscow in 1947, reporting the Council of Foreign Ministers for American newspapers, his eye lit on an English language book about Ivan IV, the sixteenth century tsar whose cruelties won him the title of Ivan Grozny, "the Dread" or "the Terrible."

Clearly, this was something the Soviet authorities wanted foreigners to buy and study; no book, Russian or English, can go on sale in the Soviet Union unless the government wants it sold. This one, moreover, had been decked out in brown-and-gold binding, with color plates and decorated chapter headings, and the subject matter was as striking as the format.

The book was a glorification by R. Wipper, a Soviet-sponsored historian, of one of the most tyrannical monarchs who ever lived. It sought to prove that Ivan's cruelties had been exaggerated by malicious German historians; that he had to do the things he did to save Russia from her enemies, and that his heart beat only for the Russian people.

Backer bought the book as a curiosity, and so did other Americans who were in Moscow at the time. The result of his purchase, and of subsequent digging into other histories of Ivan's reign, is Backer's own book, which draws a "deadly parallel" between Ivan IV and Stalin I.

The Only Choice

SUPERFICIALLY, there are many likenesses between the two rulers. Ivan conducted such ferocious purges that he depopulated whole provinces. He was an expansionist who pushed constantly toward the Baltic and the Black Seas.

His court and his country were suspicious of foreigners, yet Ivan was shrewd enough to know that foreigners' skill and knowledge could help him against his enemies. He was, in truth, the creator of the centralized Russian state.

These were some of the parallels of fact; but the really "deadly parallel," as Backer presents it, is the Soviet historians' picture of Ivan as a ruler in Stalin's own image. The horrors Ivan perpetrated were logical, necessary and correct (in Soviet eyes) because "Ivan did not represent the state—he was the state."

In this present-day anointing of Ivan the Terrible, Backer finds a terrible clew to Soviet intentions: "the all-powerful state has no choice; its destiny is to expand until it embraces the entire earth."

Locke and Hegel

THE Soviet concept of the state comes in for similar treatment by Pennington Haile, a former Dartmouth instructor, in "The Eagle and the Bear." This time the technique is less original but equally plausible.

Professor Haile believes the present struggle between America and the Kremlin is explainable in terms of a simple contrast.

The United States, he writes, is the child of John Locke, the seventeenth century philosopher who gave the Founding Fathers their ideas of liberty, reason and human dignity. The Soviet Union, on the other hand, is the misbegotten creature of Hegel, the evil German who taught that the state can do no wrong, and of Karl Marx, his disciple and prophet.

"Only an understanding of the philosophic premises of Germany and Soviet Russia," he writes, "makes the fearful history of the last 35 years at all intelligible. From those premises have been derived the theory of total war, state espionage, an 'elite' class, concentration camps and slave labor."

Brook Into Torrent

THE present reviewer, not being a student of philosophy, is not competent to say how faithfully this "primer" sums up the teachings of Locke, Hegel and Marx. But he does know that it is wickedly misleading to interpret any great nation in terms of one or two philosophers, however profound and prophetic they may have been.

The stream of American life and thought has widened into a giant river since the eighteenth century, and many tributaries have flowed into it from sources very distant from John Locke. Likewise, the Moscow River had flowed past the Kremlin for many blood-soaked centuries before Marx and Lenin. The error of both these books is in assuming that there is some convenient parallel or contrast, some easy short-cut to an understanding of our adversaries.

To understand the Soviet Union, one must know something of Russian geography, climate and history; one must take into account the effect of 250 years of Tartar conquest, the impact of endless invasions from west and south, and the habit of submission which has been whipped into the Russian people by the knouts of tsars and commissars for hundreds of years.

Present-day Russia is compounded of Ivan and Peter the Great, Marx and Lenin, and a thousand other ingredients. To assess Soviet intentions in terms of any one or two of them may be a pleasant pastime, but it gives an illusion of knowledge. And illusions can be just as dangerous as outright ignorance in times like these.

A Paradoxical Position

The Leftist Tinge in Churchill

By Sterling North

EUROPE UNITE. By Winston Churchill. Houghton, Mifflin. 506 pp. $5.

PERHAPS the major irony of our time is the swing of events which frequently makes the intelligent conservatives more "liberal" than the men of the left.

Thus we find Winston Churchill in these 52 speeches, delivered in 1947 and 1948, more "liberal" on the subject of Palestine than Ernest Bevin; more "liberal" on the subject of a United Europe than the Socialist planners, and, finally, far more concerned over civil liberties than the "timid, incompetent dictatorship" in London.

While it is true that the bureaucracy in Britain has only hired directly one employable in eight, whereas a completely totalitarian state likes to make state flunkies out of one man in six, Churchill has good reason to believe that the long-term trend is toward "a determined totalitarian oligarchy."

At which point, of course, a man still holding Churchill's views would be considered a dangerous radical if not an out-and-out enemy of the state.

Bitter But Wise

CHURCHILL'S current political position is paradoxical. He is simultaneously a wise elder statesman of Europe leading a great and probably idealistic movement for the unification of Europe, and an out-of-office Tory bitter at the ingratitude of the electorate.

In the first capacity, he has sent a clarion call to Europe not far inferior to his rousing wartime broadcasts:

"And we are here to proclaim our resolve that the spiritual conception of Europe shall not die . . . But what is Europe now? It is a rubble heap, a charnel house, a breeding ground of pestilence and hate. Ancient nationalistic feuds and modern ideological factions distract and infuriate the unhappy, hungry populations . . . Are we all, through our poverty and our quarrels, forever to be a burden and a danger to the rest of the world? Do we imagine that we can be carried forward indefinitely upon the shoulders—broad as they be—of the United States of America?

"The time has come when these questions must be answered . . . If the people of Europe resolve to come together and work together for mutual advantage, to exchange blessings instead of curses, they still have it in their power to sweep away the horrors that surround them, and to allow the streams of freedom, happiness and abundance to begin their healing flow. This is the supreme opportunity and, if it be cast away, no one can predict that it will ever return or what the resulting catastrophe will be."

Since that speech in May, 1947, much has been done toward unifying Europe. But much more is necessary to produce the "third great power" which could save the planet from a fatal war.

Churchill's aims in domestic politics are less stirring, though still important to a country which is beginning to wonder whether "spreading the poverty" means permanent austerity. Churchill refuses to let the opposition get away with its assertion that England's bankrupt economy is taking the new social services in its stride.

He Likes Us

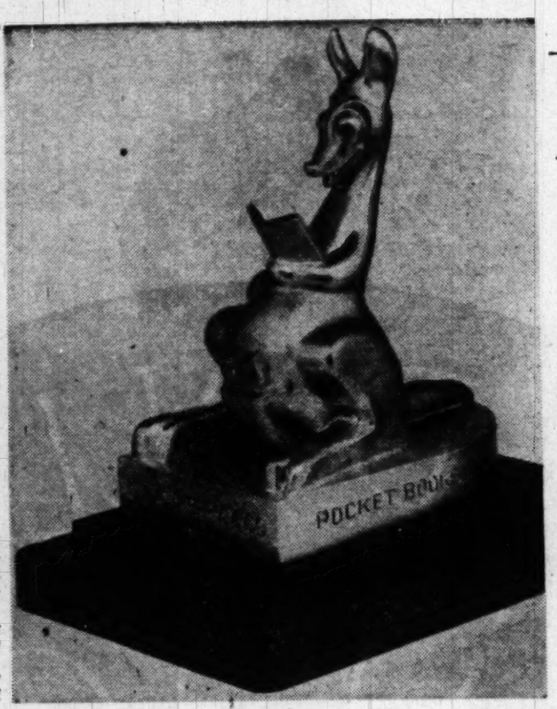
IT particularly infuriates the friend of America—of Roosevelt, of Eisenhower and of countless other important men on this side of the Atlantic—to hear the snide insults hurled at the United States by the Socialists whose very regime depends upon our alms-giving.

One reason we like Churchill, perhaps, is because Churchill likes us. There is nothing so rare as gratitude in the modern world.

On only one major score does the wartime enemy of German nationalism seem to be inconsistent, if not actually perverse. That is his dangerous aim of quickly reviving Germany. Before the House of Commons in December, 1948, he made the following inflammatory appeal to German nationalism:

"The recent elections in Berlin have been a proof of the resurrection of the German spirit, and are a beacon casting its light upon the minds of a mighty race without whose effective aid the glory of Europe cannot be revived. I earnestly hope that nothing will be done by the government or, so far as we can deter it, by our allies, to chill or check this vast evolution of German sentiment."

At this point, a very sharp doubt may creep into many minds concerning Churchill's dream of a United Europe. If what he really means is a German-dominated Europe, most sensible men would prefer disunity. Luckily, in a thick volume of common sense, such aberrations are relatively rare.



This is a Gertrude, as opposed to an Oscar. Silver Gertrudes are presented annually by Pocket Books, Inc., to authors whose Pocket Book editions have sold more than one million copies. This year, they went to James M. Cain, Erskine Caldwell, Lloyd C. Douglas, Thomas Heggen and James A. Michener. At the same time, gold Gertrudes went to Max Brand, the G. & C. Merriam staff, Dr. Benjamin Spock and Elizabeth Woody for Pocket Book sales of more than two million copies or combined title sales of more than five million. Also in the big time were DeMaupassant, Shakespeare and Zola

Finally Found a Publisher

Meyer Levin Stirs Whirlwinds

IN SEARCH. By Meyer Levin. Author's Press. 524 pp. $3.75.

HOW free is the American press? How honest are American book publishers?

What seems to me to be a shocking lack of editorial courage has been dramatized by Meyer Levin's long fight to get his autobiography published in America.

MEYER LEVIN

Levin's trouble seems to be that he insists upon keeping the commandment, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." Severe with others who have failed his generation, Meyer is equally severe with himself. The result is a confession as startling as Rousseau's, almost as frank as Boswell's private papers, and as full of fissionable atoms as an A-bomb.

Levin's search began back in Chicago when, as a cub reporter, he took over Ben Hecht's old job as front-page feature writer for the Chicago Daily News in the days when John Gunther, Carl Sandburg and a dozen writers nearly as famous were on the staff. When I took over Levin's assignment, he went to join his struggling coreligionists in Palestine, moved on to cover three wars, wrote novels praised by Dreiser, Hemingway and most of the critics, and wound up behind the eight ball with an autobiography everyone praised and no one would publish.

What were the publishers afraid of?

A Report on Spain

FOR one thing, Levin is perhaps unjust to one of his previous publishers. For another, the owner of several powerful magazines comes out of this detailed exposure looking less than gallant. For a third, several racial and religious minorities, who have become accustomed to having their activities reported with tender regard for neurotic sensibilities, are here treated like ordinary citizens.

Levin is of the highly commendable opinion that no one (including himself) is above criticism. Neither the Loyalists nor the Franco-lovers will thank him for his report on the Communist-Fascist struggle for control of Spain. His book will stir up a small whirlwind in Israel. It will start bitter arguments in New York, Chicago and Hollywood.

But I think any fair-minded reader will concede that the purpose of this autobiography is not attack for the joy of attacking. Rather it is an almost painfully candid attempt to review the last 45 years of chaos—to see the world clearly and to see it whole.

Meanwhile, even for those who do not agree with Levin's politics, philosophy, or racial and religious views, "In Search" is excellent reporting. This veteran newspaperman makes events vivid, whether covering the Republic Steel strike, the front-line action in the break-through at St. Lo, or the street fighting between Arabs and Jews in Palestine.

A World Citizen

SOME readers may be shocked by his admission that he hoped to take personal physical revenge upon the Germans for the crimes committed against his fellow-Jews. But when they have seen the concentration camps through his eyes, they will be more likely to understand.

Levin is, among other things, a talented producer of documentary films, a film critic, a playwright, a communal farmer, an editor and a social worker. But above all else, he is a Jew and a world citizen in search of himself.

His experiences as a Chicago slum child, as a University of Chicago student, as a magazine writer and as a war correspondent are all part of the larger pattern of an honest man seeking his own identity.

At the end of this book he has satisfied in his own mind the problem of "dual loyalties." He is more tolerant, more at ease with himself and the world as he finishes this book than when he began it. The writing seems to have furnished what Aristotle called katharsis—a cleansing through terror.

"In Search" is not recommended for readers who are excessively squeamish, nor for those with such hardened prejudices that they cannot, for the space of a few hours, see the world through fresh eyes. It is recommended, however, for all those who, like Meyer Levin, are eager to understand themselves and the incredibly complex civilization in which we all live.—STERLING NORTH.

For the Boy in Every Oldster

Old Dime Novels Fan a Dying Ember

By John Barkham

THE HOUSE OF BEADLE AND ADAMS. By Albert Johannsen. Oklahoma University Press. Two vols: 476 and 443 pp. $20.

THESE two volumes will bring back many a boyhood memory for those able to recall the turn of the century. The dime and nickel novels on which a whole generation of American youth cut its teeth are no more, but the fun and excitment they once generated in their readers lingers in the mind like a dying ember. Mr. Johannsen has rendered a noble service not only in exhuming a vanished literature, but in reviving a nostalgia for boyhoods long past.

The house of Beadle and Adams published its first dime novels in 1860, after which they poured out in a flood for 25 years or so. Until their coming, popular literature had been of a neo-Walter Scott flavor, seasoned with a dash of Gothic romance. Beadle and Adams, however, gave it an authentic frontier character that was American through and through.

Across the pages of its paper-bound books marched such Western heroes as Buffalo Bill, Kit Carson, Big Foot Wallace and many others. And what fabulous fellows they were! Mr. Johannsen reminds us that Carson was once depicted in a Beadle novel as "slaying seven Indians with one hand, while he clasped a fainting maiden with the other." When Carson, then an old man, was shown this, he finally said: "That there may have happened, but I ain't got no recollection of it."

The Western trend started by Beadle and Adams hasn't died by any means; in fact, today's Western heroes spread their adventures over television and the movies as well. Hopalong Cassidy and the Lone Ranger are to kids nowadays what Buffalo Bill and Kit Carson were to their grandfathers.

MARTIN GOLDSMITH
. . . tells modern fable

These two handsome volumes will appeal to the boy in every oldster. Perhaps time has lent enchantment to the view, but it cannot be denied that even now this stuff makes rousing reading—when taken in reasonable doses.

The Booklover's Manual

THE ANATOMY OF BIBLIOMANIA. By Holbrook Jackson. Farrar, Straus. 668 pp. $7.50.

BOOKS about books are not everybody's meat, but here is a rare work that crowned a lifetime of treasuring books. Holbrook Jackson was a recondite Englishman who died two years ago and whose passion was the collecting and savoring of good books. Although he wrote his own essays and poems, he was primarily a bookman who loved the creatures of other men's minds. Where books were concerned (to quote Franis Meynell), he was a conductor, not a composer.

In this ample volume, now generally issued for the first time, Jackson surveys the whole field of the world's literature for what others have said and written about books. But this is no mere compendium of other men's thoughts; Jackson performed the remarkable feat of writing the whole volume in the style of Robert Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy." While this does not make for easy modern reading, it is an astonishing virtuoso effort nonetheless.

Moreover, Jackson so thoroughly "gleaned the crop of innumerable authorities" that his book just cannot be read straight through. It should properly be savored whenever the mood takes the reader, for in these pages will be found the distilled wisdom of many men as most felicitously expressed over some five centuries of time.

Why Work?

THE MIRACULOUS FISH OF DOMINGO GONZALES. By Martin M. Goldsmith. Norton. 308 pp. $2.75.

LOVERS of the leisurely life like to tell of the altercation between an American tourist and a Mexican dozing in the sunshine. "Why don't you work?" the American asks. "Why should I?" replies the Mexican. "So that you can make money." "Why?" "So that you can grow rich and never have to work again." "But I'm not working now," the Mexican says.

This is the theme of Mr. Goldsmith's amiable little novel, an item perfectly suited for hammock reading. His Mexican fishing village of Puerto Miguel is a tranquil spot in which no one has anything but everyone eats regularly. Time is the one commodity everyone has plenty of.

American civilization arrives in the person of Senor Mulligan with his plan for an industry to extract vitamins from shark livers. In no time at all the villagers are fishing like mad to make money with which to buy radios, bicycles, sewing machines and other shiny products of American know-how. Only Father Salvador is alarmed that the villagers no longer have time for anything. He appeals to the saints for help, and the miracle of the title is the answer.

It needs a light touch to tell a modern fable of this kind, but Mr. Goldsmith has it. He not only brings a quaint village full of people to life, but (if the temperature is high enough) actually makes the reader wonder whether the backbreaking pace of daily life is worth the candle. Could it be that the no-good Mexican had something?

Notes On the Margin

By Lee Grove

EDWARD T. GIBBONS, of RFD 1, Springfield, Fairfax County, Va., is at work on a biography of his brother, Floyd Gibbons, who died in 1939.

A colorful newspaperman, Floyd Gibbons covered nine wars between 1916 and 1937, losing an eye at Belleau Wood in World War I. Older readers will remember the black patch he wore over the eye.

He was also a fast talker—his speed rate of 3 and 6/10 words a second over the radio is probably still the record, according to his brother.

Floyd was born in Washington. When he died, he left all his papers, including 250,000 letters he received from his radio audience, to his younger brother, Edward, a former Maritime Commission public relations man and now president of the Taxpayers Advisory Association in Fairfax County.

Biblical Gender

DR. EDWIN ELIOTT WILLOUGHBY, of the Folger Shakespeare Library staff, is leaving next month for a year in London, where he will do research on the political and business aspects of the publication in 1611 of the (King James) "Authorized Version" of the Bible.

Parenthetically, there are two issues of the first edition of this Bible by Robert Barker, Printer to the King. In the first issue, at the end of the fifteenth verse, third chapter, Book of Ruth, it reads: "He measured five measures of barley . . . and HE went into the citie." In the second issue it was corrected to read, "SHE went into the citie." But as a result of the dropped "s," the two issues are known as the "Great He" and "Great She" Bibles.

According to Willoughby, prior to the King James version the English people were not Bible readers, and in his book he hopes to tell how the Barker family got the public to read the work.

Lincoln Facsimile

THE National Archives and Records Service of the General Services Administration has handsomely reproduced in facsimile the five-page Emancipation Proclamation signed by Lincoln, as the sixteenth in its series of facsimiles of historic documents.

The copy reproduced is the official document that was transferred from the State Department to the National Archives in 1936, and is in a clerk's hand.

According to Dr. Percy Powell of the Library of Congress, there is in the Lincoln papers at the library a tentative draft in Lincoln's hand which he read to the Cabinet, and there is a draft of the preliminary proclamation, a part of which is in Lincoln's hand, in the New York State Library at Buffalo. An 1863 draft, partially in the President's writing, was destroyed in the great Chicago fire. Powell has never seen a copy wholly in Lincoln's hand.

An interesting copy in the library's possession is one which Lincoln signed for Vinnie Ream, who did the sculpture of the President that now stands in the rotunda of the Capitol.

The bibliography of the printing of the "E.P." is confused. Charles Eberstadt, a New York bookseller, is working on the problem now. The results of his research will be published in the Colophon this winter.

The facsimile just published in exact size of the original (10 x 16¾ inches) is on 5 leaves of good quality paper in a portfolio. Copies may be obtained (at $1 each) at the National Archives, or by mail from the Exhibits and Publications Officer, Washington, 25, D. C., checks payable to the Treasurer of the United States.

Rich Mine of English Verse Produces Forgotten Jewels

SEVENTEENTH CENTURY LYRICS. From the Original Texts. Edited by Norman Ault. William Sloane Associates. 562 pp. $7.50.

THE ENGLISH scholar, Norman Ault, in this newly revised edition of a book long out of print, has managed that difficult feat—a book that enchants the casual reader and interests the student.

Ault's anthology of one of the richest centuries of English verse begins with Ben Jonson and ends with the young Alexander Pope. In between are lyrics by Herrick, Suckling, Vaughan, Wafler, Lovelace, Sedley, Rochester, Carew, Dryden and a host of others.

Altogether, there are 565 poems, representing 214 named poets and the prolific Anonymous. About a third of these poems, according to the editor, have been "undeservedly forgotten because they have never been reprinted since the seventeenth century." A number are printed here for the first time.

In some instances, the editor has reassigned authorship of poems, notably the epitaph "On the Death of Marie, Countess of Pembroke," which begins:

"Underneath this marble hearse
Lies the subject of all verse:
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother:"

These famous lines, so long assigned to Jonson, Ault gives good reason for attributing to a lesser known poet, William Browne.

Of Herrick's familiar lyric beginning:

"Gather ye rose-buds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-flying:"

Ault notes that on the basis of the number of times it was reprinted during the century, it was "easily the most popular poem" of the time.

Ault's book is a companion volume to his "Elizabethan Lyrics." —L.G.

In a Nutshell

SUPREME COURT PRACTICE. Robert L. Stern and Eugene Gressman, Bureau of National Affairs, Inc. $7.50

THIS important volume is designed to "tell lawyers what they will need to know in order to handle a case in the United States Supreme Court," and it does so in a most admirable fashion. Included are tips on drawing up briefs, the proper dress in the courtroom (the marshal "frowns on vestless gentlemen with unbuttoned coats"), how to grab a snack during the 2-to-2:30 lunch period. More important are discussions of jurisdiction, certiorari, appeals procedure, original cases, oral arguments and forms and rules.

HANDBOOK OF AMERICAN SILVER AND PEWTER MARKS. By C. Jordan Thorn. Tudor Publishing Co. 289 pp. Ill. $3.50.

C. JORDAN THORN'S handbook, with a preface by John Meredith Graham 2d, Brooklyn Museum curator, contains nearly 3500 silver and pewter marks and "touches," some 200 line drawings showing the development of various types, and 110 photographic reproductions of important silver and pewter pieces—making it a most useful tool for students and collectors.

WILLIAM HENRY BELK, Merchant of the South. By LeGette Blythe. University of North Carolina Press. 225 pp. Ill. $2.75.

A "RAGS to riches" biography of a Southern farm boy who has grown to be one of the country's great merchants—written in the cloying style of a toastmaster.

INSIDE WESTERN UNION. By M. J. Rivise. Sterling. 248 pp. $2.50.

M. J. ("MIKE") RIVISE, consultant to Western Union's department of special services, provides a poke full of stories, from the queer character who hired a squad of Western Union messengers to drill with broomsticks to the development of stereotyped holiday greetings and singing telegrams. Rivise loves W. U., and readers will enjoy his behind-the-scene tales.

The Coffin Corner . . .

THE CASE OF THE DEMENTED SPIV, by George Bellairs (Macmillan, $2). Strangling of English small-town woolen mill secretary stumps local cops and gives Littlejohn of Scotland Yard some ticklish moments, especially at finish. Intricate plot, rich local color and gaiety that may sometimes be too insular. Dependably good hunting.

THE GENTLE HANGMAN, by James M. Fox (Little, Brown, $2.50). Girl who leaves Hollywood radio show with diamond ring and turns up strangled gives Private Eye Johnny Marshall, his wife and their Great Dane a tough, tense and torrid chase with an eye-popping finale. Tops in the tough brackets.

DOUBLE, DOUBLE, by Ellery Queen (Little, Brown, $2.50). Lorn and lovely lady lures Ellery Queen back to Wrightsville and sequence of nursery rhyme murders that point to him as prize victim. Incessant action, attractive people, dexterously distributed clues and almost insoluble puzzle. Hard to beat.

WILLIAM C. WEBER.

"The broadest grant of power ever legislated by Congress"—Presidential Agency

THE OFFICE OF WAR MOBILIZATION AND RECONVERSION

By Herman Miles Somers

Now, for the first time, you can read the full inside story of the most powerful of wartime agencies. As Washingtonians will certainly remember, its directors were, in effect, civilian "Chiefs of Staff" to the President of the United States.

The wealth of new information it presents on wartime issues, operations and personalities—men like James F. Byrnes, Fred M. Vinson, Donald M. Nelson, Paul V. McNutt, Bernard M. Baruch, Harold D. Smith, Robert Patterson, General Lucius D. Clay and President Roosevelt parade through its pages—makes PRESIDENTIAL AGENCY an invaluable source-book on mobilization and war administration in World War II.

After a keen analytical appraisal of OWMR's experience, the author appraises the significance of the experiment in terms of today's challenging and baffling problems of government coordination.

One of the most important stories of war mobilization, PRESIDENTIAL AGENCY is a vivid case study of a unique experiment in overhead coordination which has had an enduring influence upon the Executive Office of the President. $4.50

Avila's Homer in Eighth Whips Nats, 6-5

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern:

CLEVELAND, June 24.—Next winter, Luke Easter will read about the four home runs he hit in the last two days. He doesn't look at the sports pages during the season, risking no emotional upsets, but asks his wife to keep a scrap book . . . one of the reasons why Briggs Stadium in Detroit is the best-manicured, most eye-pleasing park in the majors: A Detroit groundkeeper, not the boss, admitted the other day that his salary check for the week, including overtime, was $145 . . . Joe McCarthy's friends are certain that the chief factor in his resignation from the Red Sox is his wounded pride . . . McCarthy never quarreled with umpires when his team was down in the race. "I'd squawk if we were on top or near the lead," he used to say, "but not when I'm in the second division. Nobody will ever say Joe McCarthy is a crybaby who can't take it" . . . Joe DiMaggio, who lost six baseballs that were souvenirs of famous hits when thieves rifled his auto, is saving the ball that represented his 2000th hit. "It's for Joe, Junior," he says . . . With Jackie Robinson and Larry Doby threatening to win both major league championships, you'd have to say the Negro in baseball is here to stay.

POVICH

IF YOU'RE asking whatever became of Notre Dame's famous Four Horsemen: Harry Stuhldreher is now a public relations man for U. S. Steel; Don Miller is U. S. district attorney in Ohio; Elmer Layden is a trucking big-wig in Chicago, and Jimmy Crowley is a super salesman for Better Brands Food . . . For Sammy Snead, the irony of his defeat in the PGA was his semi-dubbed shot on the final hole with his one-iron, the club he is supposed to play better than any other pro in the business . . . The big broadcasting networks are putting pressure on the Garden and the Fight Managers Guild to settle the latter's strike, which is keeping boxing out of the Garden. Unless there is a quick compromise, the broadcasters will program other shows and the Garden will be closed to boxing . . . When Eddie Burke, Cleveland pro, pulled the upset of the PGA by beating Snead, he won a Cadillac promised him by a wealthy friend, Henry Winski, Detroit steel broker . . . Former heavyweight contender Buddy Baer has a considerable role in the movie "Quo Vadis," now being filmed in Rome by Metro, with Robert Taylor playing the lead . . . The New York State conservation department recently fished up a muskelunge in Chautauqua Lake whose tag showed it had been stocked in the lake in 1931.

EVIDENCE THAT the baseball is livelier this year is offered by Wayne University engineers who report that a 1949 ball dropped from a specified height bounced 100 feet, while the 1950 ball rebounded 102.3 feet . . . When Pitcher Hank Wyse was fined $250 by Connie Mack the other day for failure to be in his hotel room, it marked the first time in three seasons that the kindly Mack had fined one of his ball players . . . When Broadcaster Al Helfer related Buck Newsom's troubles with Chattanooga President Joe Engel over his "Game of the Day" program, Newsom wired: "Retraction requested. I am not in Engel's doghouse. He is too cheap to build one and lets his own dog sleep in a torn-up sugar sack. Anyway, we're getting along fine." . . . The Nats are interested in Jack Fogarty, Western High School's 6-foot 4-inch right hander who averaged 18 strikeouts per game. So are the Yankees, Phillies and Dodgers . . . Hank Greenberg is peeved at the Nats for not asking what he'd offer for Ray Scarborough, who went to the White Sox. He points out he let Clark Griffith have Mickey Vernon after turning down better offers from the Yankees and Tigers.

THE BIGGEST injustice in the All-Star team voting is Jim Hegan's position as sixth among A. L. catchers in the poll. He's far and away the finest catcher in his league, perhaps the best in both . . . Johnny Farrell, the pro who once beat Bobby Jones in a National Open play-off, saw his son, Johnny, jr., win the N. Y. State junior title the other day . . . Because betting has slumped all over the Nation, and tracks are cutting down on their stake purses, no horse will top Citation's money-winning record unless a new world war brings another post-war inflation: if any horse lives through it . . . Ben Jones, boss of the Calumet Farm, is moaning that there isn't a good 3-year-old in his stable, which used to dominate that age class . . . Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler will be swept back into another seven-year term of office next December when the club owners assemble to vote . . . New Red Sox Manager Steve O'Neill will have no difficulties with temperamental Ted Williams. O'Neill handled a tougher case in Dick Wakefield and was the only Detroit manager for whom Wakefield played good ball . . . Clark Griffith's nephew, Sherry Robertson, has been elected to the Washington players' grievance committee, which will take any of their troubles to the boss.

Clout Only Hit Harris Yields in 4 Innings

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Cleveland, June 24. — Mickey Harris lost a tight relief-pitching duel with Steve Gromek of the Indians today when he bumped into an eighth-inning home run by, of all people, Robert Avila. It licked the Nats, 6 to 5.

Senor Avila, Cleveland's Mexican second baseman, was hitting his first home run of the season and the second of his major league career. It was a line drive that scaled the left field fence, inches above Johnny Ostrowski's frantic clutch.

That was the only blow permitted by Harris who took over the job from a faltering Sid Hudson in the fifth inning, after Hudson failed to hold a variety of leads like 2-0, 4-2 and 5-3.

Back in the second inning, Al Rosen and Ray Boone clouted consecutive homers off Hudson, but it was Avila's that made the victory stick.

Gromek Gets Credit

The winning pitcher was, and deservedly, Gromek. Like Harris, he moved in in the fifth inning, and didn't allow even one hit to the finish. His relief pitching was in bold relief against that of Gene Bearden, Jess Flores and Sam Zoldak who had been banged by the Nats for 12 hits.

Gromek was pitching against a gang of frustrated Nats in the last two innings, particularly. He walked Harris to start the eighth and after Yost forced Harris, Easter made a wild throw to second on Combs' grounder, leaving both runners safe. But neither Noren nor Vernon could nudge 'em home.

Gromek put the tying run on in the ninth with a walk to Mele before getting anybody out, but then he pitched them nothing but woe. Pinch-hitter Ed Stewart popped up, Dente moved Mele to second with a grounder to Easter, and Evans fanned on a 3-2 pitch by Gromek.

They're All Singles

In contrast to the Indians' power display, the Nats could muster nothing more than a single among any of their 12 hits. They left nine men on base in the first five innings.

They took a 2-0 lead off Southpaw Bearden with the help of a wild throw to second by Easter. Noren beat out an infield hit, and Vernon and Ostrowski drove the runs home with singles.

That lead lasted no longer than it took Rosen to bang his 18th homer over the left field wall and Boone to smack his fourth, in the second inning.

The Nats restored Hudson to a 4-2 lead in the fourth, after Evans beat out an infield hit and Hudson singled to center. Yost got Evans home with a single, and after Flores moved in Noren singled Hudson home.

Hudson Gives It Back

Hudson gave a run right back to the Indians after Boone and Avila led off the fourth with singles. Zoldak moved in for the Indians in the fifth and was no success.

Mele and Michaels whacked him for singles right away, and after Dente sacrificed, Evans was given an intentional pass that filled the bases. Hudson rapped a high bounder in front of the plate, a run scored and everybody was safe when Zoldak lost the ball in the sun.

That's when Gromek moved in, with one out and the bases still

Noor Again Beats Citation For Record

Irish Star Runs 1 1-4 Miles In 1:58 1-5 to Win Easily

Albany, Calif., June 24 (AP).—Swift-running Noor, the four-legged wind splitter from Ireland, took the measure of mighty Citation today for the fourth time in winning the $50,000 added Golden Gate Handicap in world record-cracking time of 1 minute 58 1/5 for the mile and a quarter.

Noor cut one and three fifths seconds off the old mark shared by Saint Andrews II, made in England; Coaltown, a stablemate of Citation, and Shannon II, the Australian who tied that mark of one minute 59 and 4/5ths at Golden Gate fields two years ago.

It was Noor's second world record performance in 8 days. Last Saturday in defeating Citation by a neck, he hung up a new mark for the mile and one eighth of one minutes 46 4/5 seconds.

Citation now has won 29 and ran second 9 times—7 times in California.

The invincible Irisher, after running last for nearly a mile, moved up on the outside, followed by the Calumet Farm pride.

As they charged into the stretch they picked up lightweighted On Trust which had led from the start and at one time held a lead of nearly 10 lengths.

Noor's winning margin was three lengths over Citation. Citation was a length ahead of On Trust.

Only win wagering was allowed and Noor, who went to the post a 3-5 favorite, paid $3.40 on each $2 mutuel ticket. It was the first time since Citation was a two-year-old that he was not favored to win.

The veteran Johny Longden gave Noor a terrific ride. He held the big Irish son of Nasrullah in check for nearly a mile. During that time On Trust went to the front and at the halfway mark was nearly 10 lengths in front of the field, with Stepfather second, three lengths ahead of Esprit De France, who was trailed by Citation and Noor.

At the three-quarter mark it looked as if On Trust's margin was too large for Noor or Citation to make up.

Then Longden turned Noor loose and he and Citation ran neck and neck to the head of the stretch. It was then that Noor showed his championship caliber as he pulled away from Citation and On Trust to win with plenty to spare.

Mrs. Charles S. Howard's winner carried 127 pounds, one more than Citation who had previously spotted his keen rival poundage in their other three meetings.

Esprit De France ran fourth and Stepfather was fifth. Old Rockport and Mocopo were late scratches.

It was Big Cy's farewell to California racing but he leaves one world record here anyhow. On June 3, he set a new mark of one minute 33 3-5 in the Golden Gate mile. Citation will be shipped shortly to Arlington Park near Chicago where he will go after the magic million dollar figure in earnings.

The victory was worth $28,950 to Noor and brought his all-time earnings to $205,690. Citation, the all-time money-winning champion, picked up $12,000 for second place and now has $938,630 to his credit.

Bosox Pound Out 2d in Row For O'Neill

St. Louis, June 24 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox, frequently adept at humiliating the St. Louis Browns with fairly large scores, downed the local American League club, 12 to 3, today with Bill Goodman's grand slam homer leading the way.

It was the Bosox second straight victory over the Browns since their new manager, Steve O'Neill, took over.

Ellis Kinder gave up only nine hits and was in trouble only once—the fifth—when the Brownies gained their three tallies. A double and two walks filled the

Attlesey Sets World Hurdle Mark at 13.6

by Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Big Dick Attlesey of Southern California set a world record of 13.6 seconds in the 110-meter high hurdles yesterday over Byrd Stadium's sun-parched track to win the National A. A. U. championship in 96-degree heat.

The performance of the 6-foot 4-inch senior will go up before the International Amateur Athletic Federation in London for recognition as a world standard.

There's little doubt that it will be accepted. Two of the three official clocks timed him in 13.6, and the third in 13.5 and there was no helping breeze of any kind except that created by Mr. Attlesey himself.

It was Attlesey's second world record run within three weeks. At the Pacific Coast championships three weeks ago, he hedge-hopped the 120-yard high hurdles in 13.5, also under consideration as a world record.

Wearing Los Angeles Athletic Club's colors, Attlesey broke from his mark second to Penn-State's Jim Gehrdes, who stayed in front for three hurdles. Then Attlesey poured it on, passing the Penn Relays champ, and crossing the wire 2 feet in front.

The former world record was 13.7 seconds, set by Spec Towns of Georgia in 1936, and equaled by Fred Walcott of Rice in 1941.

Attlesey's brilliant showing was

Tigers Take 2d Straight From Yanks

Detroit, June 24 (AP).—Right-hander Art Houtteman survived a New York Yankee uprising in the ninth inning today to get the Detroit Tigers a 4-to-1 victory that stretched their American League lead to three games.

Houtteman, coasting along with a six-hit shutout through eight innings, ran into trouble in the Yankee ninth after two were out.

Yogi Berra started the rally as he hit his eighth homer into the right field stands to make it 4-1. Johnny Mize then doubled and moved to third as Cliff Mapes singled for the Yanks' ninth hit.

That brought up Pinchhitter Tommy Henrich who got a home run in a similar role in the series opener last night. He grounded out to give the Tigers their second straight win in the four-game series between the ewo league leaders.

It was Houtteman's ninth win as against five losses and evened his personal duel with the Yanqees at 2-2 this season.

The Tigers sewed up the game with a three-run first inning against Allie Reynolds, who went all the way in absorbing his sixth loss as against five wins.

Johnny Lipon led off the Tiger first with a single and moved to second as Gerry Priddy walked. George Kell sacrificed both men along. Vic Wertz' double scored Lipon, and Priddy and Wertz came home a minute later with the third run on Hoot Evers' double.

The Tigers picked up their other run in the fifth inning when Reynolds uncorked a wild pitch with Lipon scampering in from third and evading Reynolds' attempted tag.

Fourth Annual Affair

Receipts of Celebrities Golf, Bob Hope Show Are $31,880

Gross receipts from the fourth annual National Celebrities golf tournament, June 3-4, at the Army Navy Country Club, and the Bob Hope-Celebrities show at the Armory the night of June 3, were $31,880.65.

Of this amount, $5,192.84 goes to Federal taxes.

Expenses for the two-day golf tournament were $2,584.97, and for the Hope show, $5,964.57.

Net proceeds are $18,138.27, subject to a few minor outstanding items.

This amount will be disbursed to non-profit organizations engaged in welfare work for boys and girls.

A citizens' committee, cooperating with The Washington Post, sponsor of the events, will decide how these funds shall be allocated.

The tournament is held each year in conjunction with the Attorney General's efforts to combat juvenile delinquency.

Texan Captures Southern Amateur

New Orleans, June 25 (AP).—Dale Morey, of Dallas, Texas, became the first medalist ever to win the Southern amateur golf championship by defeating defending champion Tommy Barnes of Atlanta, Ga., eight and seven today in the forty-fourth annual tournament.

Bromwich, Hart Take Net Titles

London, June 24 (AP).—Jack Bromwich, the Australian veteran, won the men's final in the Londor lawn tennis championships today with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Art Larsen of San Francisco.

Doris Hart of Jacksonville, Fla., repeated her Paris success by winning the women's title. She defeated Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont of Wilmington, Del., 4-6 3-1, 6-4.

Mangrum, Palmer, Demaret Lead Advance in PGA

Columbus, Ohio, June 24 (AP).—Three of the favorites, Lloyd Mangrum, Jimmy Demaret and Johnny Palmer, today reached the quarterfinals of the PGA championship in company with Henry Picard, Ray Gafford, Chandler Harper, Henry Williams, jr., and Dave Douglas.

Four of the octet—Mangrum, Palmer, Williams and Demaret—also went to the quarterfinals of last year's classic at Richmond, Va. The battle lines will be clearly definied in tomorrow's quarterfinals, for in each of the four matches over Scioto's treacherous 7032-yard course will pit a home pro against a traveler.

The schedule calls for Gafford to meet Demaret, a fellow but transplanted Texan, Mangrum to battle Harper; Williams to tangle with Douglas, and Picard to joust with Palmer.

Lean and hungry looking Gafford from Fort Worth, Tex., took the measure of Eddie Burke, "the man who beat the man" by 4 and 3. In yesterday's second round Burke dethroned defending champion Sam Snead and was king for a day, but he'll watch the rest of the battle for the $3500 top prize from the sidelines.

Demaret, the laughing boy of the links, staged one of golidom's great comebacks in triumphing over Denny Shute of Akron, the 1936-37 champ, 4 and 3. Jimmy, as colorful as his wardrobe, never was better than even until the twenty-ninth hole, and twice he was three down. One down at the end of 27 holes, Jimmy started burning up the course despite the rain, won five holes in a row—three with birdies—and ousted his 45-year-old foe.

It was the fourth time in five years that Demaret had made the round of eight.

Demaret said Shute had played such magnificent golf that until the rains came at about the 27-hole mark he was certain he would loose the match.

"But the harder the rain fell, the better I hit 'em," he said, "so I just kept praying for more rain."

Latvian DP Gets Chance To Make Caps

The Washington Caps, trying to field a better team than last year, will give a tryout to a Latvian refugee, who arrived in the United States less than two weeks ago.

It's not quite as wild an experiment as it sounds. The D. P., Henriks Baitkistis, 6 feet, 8 inches tall, was named most valuable basketball player last year in the European labor camps, which had a league under Y.M.C.A. sponsorship.

The good looking 19-year-old lad manages a fair usage of English, and has been playing basketball for only three years.

Starred in Camp

He picked up the game from American GIs and moving pictures of the Harlem Globetrotters and Oklahoma Aggies after being liberated from a Nazi slave labor camp in Pilsen, Czechoslovakia.

German newspapers gave him a terrific play after he scored 30 points in the championship game, which his camp lost to a German team.

Henriks and his mother were brought to Washington June 10 by Eddie Miller, 1441 Primrose rd., nw., a former Central High and sandlot baseball star. Henriks has been nicknamed "Henry" by Eddie's three young sons, who have been teaching him how to play baseball.

"Shoots Like a Pro"

Eddie recommended Henry to the Caps after reading some of the German press clippings and watching him work out on the Shepherd school outdoor court.

"He shoots like a pro with either hand, and is sharp in the pivot slot," reports Eddie. "He acts like he knows what he's doing.

Henry says that super height runs in his family. Two of his uncles were 6 feet, 9 and his father was 6-4. He says he's used to playing against tall men, having encountered them as high as 7 feet tall on other labor camp teams.

His first impression of Washington is good and he hopes to settle down here. He left his hometown of Riga, Latvia when he was 13. The Germans took the city from the Russians, who had taken over in 1941, and the Nazis shipped him to a labor camp.

When the Yanks liberated him, they spotted him as basketball timber, and taught him the game. HERB HEFT.

Blue Ridge Hunter Titlist At Catonsville

By Harry DeMawby, Jr.

Cantonsville, Md., June 24.—Blue Ridge, H. O. Firor's Alta Vista Farm entry, added another title to his long list as the smooth-performing grey under the guidance of Hugh Wiley accounted for the hunter championship at St. Agnes horse and pony show held here today.

Blue Ridge scored 14½ points to On Time's 10. On Time, owned by Roxanne Wagner, had a good win in the model class and placed in the ladies and took an award in the pair event for the tally.

Another entry from Roxanne's stable took the jumper tricolor as Lariat with Linky Smith doing the riding accounted for two blues and a second place award for a 13 point score. Reserve was a tie between Skippy Diehlmann's Play Boy and Pat Boyer's Holiday Eve, each horse scored 6 points, on a coin toss Holiday Eve was the victor.

Bums Halted In 8th With 19-12 Lead

Boston, June 24 (AP).—Johnny Lindell's homer, his second in as many nights, enabled the St. Louis Cardinals to break a three-game losing streak with a 10-inning 7-6 victory over the Boston Braves tonight before a 20,826 crowd.

Earl Torgeson put the Braves into a 6-6 deadlock with a two-run homer in the seventh inning.

The Braves sent out Johnny Sain for his tenth win of the season but the ace righthander came to grief in the third inning when he was banged for four consecutive singles before Bill Howerton shelled him out of action with a three-run homer.

Both sides made 13 hits as the Cards pulled out their second victory in their last nine starts. Marshall drove in four of the Boston runs before Manager Billy Southworth yanked him in the seventh.

Dodgers Lead, 19-12, As Curfew Halts Game

Brooklyn, June 24 (AP).—Brooklyn led Pittsburgh, 19-12, tonight after 7 2/3 innings, the game being suspended due to New York's Sunday law which prohibits play after 11:59 p. m. existing time. The game will be completed at a date to be announced later.

The game was halted with two out in the Dodger half of the eighth. Carl Furillo was on first and Gil Hodges at bat. Brooklyn had five runs in, four coming on Jackie Robinson's grand slam home run.

The crowd of 22,010, was treated to one of the wildest scenes in Ebbets Field history. The Dodgers clubbed seven Pirate hurlers for 23 assorted blows.

Attlesey Sets 13.6 World Hurdle Mark

the highlight of the greatest track carnival ever staged in the Washington area, but patronized by only 4000 spectators.

The two-day meet was sponsored by the Capital Sesquicentennial Committee, which underwrote it to the tune of $15,000.

Placed in the background by Attlesey were Sam Felton, who broke the 36-year-old A. A. U. hammer throw record; Jim Fuchs, who equalled the A. A. U. shot-put standard, and a spectacular finish in the 100-meter sprint, decided by a photo.

The team championship was also decided in a photo, Olympic A. C. of San Francisco nosing out New York A. C. by 3/5 of a point, 79 3/5-79. Favored Los Angeles A. C. was third with 57 4/5. By taking third place in the final event, the javelin, George Roseme won the title for Olympic.

Felton, Harvard business school graduate, flung the hammer 187 feet 3¼ inches to successfully defend his title for New York Athletic Club, and break the old mark of 183 feet 3¼ inches, set by Pat Ryan of Irish-American A. C. in 1914.

Fuchs, who seems to set a new shot record every time he throws, hit the old mark of 57 feet 2⅛ inches right on the nose in his first try. He was also tossing for New York A. C.

That blanket finish in the 100 was a dilly with Arthur Bragg of Morgan State, Lloyd LaBeach of Circle A. C., San Francisco; Bob Tyler of Morgan, and Jim Golliday, sensational schoolboy flash from Chicago, seemingly hitting the tape at once.

It was announced that all four had been timed in 10.4 for the about 110 yards, with LaBeach the unofficial winner. However, the judges decided to let an automatic photo of the finish determine the winner.

Twenty minutes later, after Attlesey had smashed his world record, it was announced that Bragg, a Baltimore boy, was the winner, LaBeach second and Tyler third. Bragg, colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association 100-yard dash king, had won the junior A.A.U. 200-meter sprint the day before and finished second to Golliday in the 100.

Andy Stanfield of Long Branch A. C. and Craig Dixon of Los Angeles A. C. reluctantly surrendered their 100-meter dash and 110-meter hurdles titles. Stanfield pulling up lame, and Dixon failing to qualify.

But another champion, George Rhoden of Morgan State, made a fighting defense of his 400-meter crown, passing world record holder Herb McKenley on the last turn, and steaming home in front by five yards. His time was 46.5 seconds.

Illinois Athletic Club's John Twomey also happily retained his 1500 meter championship, beating Southern Cal's Indian Jim Newcomb by two yards, with Alf Holmberg, Tennessee's transplanted Swede two more yards back. Twomey's time was 3:51.3 1.3 seconds better than his winning time of last year.

In the rough equivalent of the mile, Twomey hung back in the early stages, letting Morgan's Thurlow Brown set the pace in the first lap. Occidental's Bob McMillen took over the lead in the second lap, and Kansas' Bob Karnes was ahead in the third lap with Newcomb second. Karnes faded badly as Twomey swept by him and Newcomb to win handily.

Arlington Angler Lands First Marlin

by Ralph Murdock

Murdock

THE FIRST MARLIN to be hauled in at Ocean City, Md., was captured by Lieut. Frank R. Loyd of Arlington, Va. The angler was aboard the "Katherine" which was captioned by George Willis. The scrapper was 7 feet, 4 inches long and scaled 55 pounds. For his effort Loyd will receive a rod and reel from Pfleuger and have his catch mounted at no cost. The skipper will be presented with a $50 savings bond. In this particular case, it pays to go fishing.

ANOTHER UPSET occurred 25 miles southeast of Abecson Inlet off the Jersey coast when Roy Hackney nailed a 83-pound marlin and landed the hefty. This marks one of the earliest catches of marlin on record for this area.

DOWN NORFOLK way, off Ocean View, an influx of small hardheads has arrived. They are not whoppers but will hit near the 1-pound mark. As E. E. Edgar says in the Salt Water Sportsman—they are pan size, eating size and fun size.

IT IS generally agreed if you want to fish for walleyes in Maryland you must journey to the Susquehanna River and Conowingo Lake. However, they can now be taken—if you know how—from Triadelphia Lake in Montgomery County. About 400 adult fish were released in this lake in 1946.

Several have been a caught which have weighed from 2 to 4 pounds, tagged and released. Incidentally, the season on walleyes in tidal waters outside the Susquehanna River and Conowingo Lake does not open until July 1, along with the black bass season.

THE CROAKER situation has been a spotty proposition in the upper Chesapeake Bay. Seldom are they located in the same area on two consecutive days. We fished at Sharp's Light on Wednesday evening and caught 25 big ones in 1½ hours. We arrived on the tail end of a flood tide. On Thursday night, we came back to the same spot and failed to get a single nibble.

The only way we averted a shut-out was by drifting between Poplar Island and the red spar buoy. Twelve croakers were nabbed by this process. After our party had docked we heard that about 20 boats which fished at Sharp's Light failed to land a fish. You figure it out!

Pep Fights Here July 10

Willie Pep, world's featherweight champion from Hartford, Conn., had been signed by Promoter Goldie Ahearn to box an opponent to be named in a scheduled 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium two weeks from tomorrow night, July 10.

This marks the opening of the Liberty Athletic Club's 1950 open-air season.

Pep, a smart boxer and sharp puncher, has taken his place among the greatest little champions of all time.

He won his championship from Chalky Wright on a 15-round decision in New York City on November 20, 1942, and defended it four times before losing it to Sandy Saddler on fourth-round knock-out in New York on October 29, 1948.

Willie bounced back to regain his crown from Saddler via a 15-round decision in New York on February 11, 1949.

The Hartford, Conn., veteran has boxed professionally since 1940 and his over-all record through 1949 reveals 97 decisions, 46 knockouts and one draw against two losses.

Falls Church Garage Wins

Catcher Russell Lovelace rapped out a single, double and home run to bat in four runs and give the Falls Church Garage an 11-2 victory over the Ballston Indians in a playoff for the Old Dominion League first-half championship yesterday at McLean, Va.

Herb Hensley also homered for the winners.

Falls Church finished the first half with a record of seven triumphs and one defeat. The Indians wound up with a 6-2 mark.

Five Records Make Up for Light Turnout

Even if attendance wasn't up to standard, the National A. A. U. track championships at Byrd Stadium the last two days left everybody reasonably well pleased.

Pincus Sober, head of the A. A. U.'s national track and field committee, congratulated Kip Edwards of the local chapter, and Maj. George Bohler, retired Army engineer, for putting the University of Maryland's layout in tip-top shape.

"That Dick Attlesey could set a world record, and four other meet records could be broken is proof that they did a grand job", said Sober. "The meet was run well too."

Stroup Leads Area Athletes

Phil Stroup, Anacostia High senior, made the best showing of any Washington athlete in the National A. A. U. track meet at Byrd Stadium yesterday.

The Interhigh broad jump champion tried his luck in the pole vault and soared 13 feet, 6 inches to tie for fifth place with some of the best collegians in the country. It was higher, by two feet, than any Washington schoolboy has ever vaulted. Bob Richards of Illinois, the winner, vaulted 14 feet, 8 inches.

Loss Put at $10,000

It's estimated that the National Capital Sesquicentennial Committee, which underwrote the meet for $15,000 suffered about $10,000 in losses because only about 3500 people turned out Friday and Saturday.

However, it had been expected to lose on track, and make up the deficit in receipts at the rest of its Sesquicentennial sports program, which includes the Police Department-Fire Department baseball game in August at Griffith Stadium, and an indoor horse show at the Armory in October.

Edwards said "the Sesquicentennial Committee came to the D. C. A. A. U. months ago, and asked us to bring the meet here. They said they were prepared to put up $15,000 to back us. We succeeded in getting the national sanction for $2500.

$4500 Spent on Track

"Then we had to put out $8000 to pay traveling and food expenses of defending champions who came here from all parts of the country.

"The remaining $4500 was spent overhauling Maryland's track and buying additional equipment for the meet.

Concluded Edwards, "We think the meet was a fine success and very much worthwhile."

Harry Mann of D. C.

Meet the Owl, Wise Old Man of Racing

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, JUNE 24 (NYHT).—Above ground there was noise and heat and confusion as Aqueduct's thousands sweltered and struggled, batting their brains out against the tote machines. In a dungeon beneath the racing secretary's office it was even hotter, but that cluttered cell was silent except for the rackety-clack of a typewriter where a swarthy gentleman with round, hornrimmed spectacles worked.

Red Smith

This is the domain of the Owl, perhaps the only bird of that ilk that does not nest in a barn loft or a hollow tree. The Owl, who was christened Harry Mann in Washington, D. C., about 70 years ago, is the official clocker for the New York Racing Associations. Each morning he and his staff time all workouts and furnish reports in duplicate for the guidance of the track handicapper and the information of the press department.

After noon, when the entries for the following day come out, the Owl lists the latest workout by each horse on the program. By midafternoon he is finished with a business day than began at 5:30 a. m.

IN 60 YEARS around race tracks from Belmont to Juarez to Nagasaki, the Owl has come to be known by eight tens of thousands of horses. Unaided by silks or numbers, he can recognize them at a glance galloping through the morning fog.

He has also got to know clockers and to understand the temptation which besets a man who, catching a phenomenal work in the morning, yearns to keep the knowledge to himself and protect the mutual price.

There was, for example, the time during World War I, when the Army borrowed clockers from Havre de Grace to help time the flight of shells at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland.

"The Army," the Owl predicted, "won't get none the best of that. Them thieves will hold out the fast ones for themselves."

IF YOU WONDER how a man discovers hat nature meant him to live by holding a stopwatch on horses, here's how the Owl did it:

"My family had a little place in Virginia across the Potomac from Washington, and the big place next to it was owned by Dr. W. F. Atlee, the greatest surgeon of that time. They had a boy, John, who was my age, and when we were 10 nothing would do but they had to take me along to Philadelphia to play with John. They had a town house in Philadelphia and a country place in Wayne out on the main line.

"I guess they meant me for a priest, because I had to go to school at Villanova, near Wayne. I kept runnin' away from school, and at night after Mrs. Atlee tucked us in bed, out the window I'd go for some fun. Finally the doctor called my mother up from Virginia and told her I wasn't meant for houses but I'd always get along.

"I took out then and went across the river to Gloucester, in Jersey, and got a job galloping horses. Gloucester was where they ran the year around, right through the winter and all. They'd pour salt on the track to melt the ice and snow. Big Bill Thompson, that they called the Duke of Gloucester, he run it until they shut down racing in Jersey in '93.

"I WENT OUT to Chicago then, and one payday I win all the money in the barn shooting dice and I run away by train to California. I was 14. I got a job with Ed Corrigan at the old Bay District track, but I'm raising hell around there and one day I'm shooting marbles and I feel a heavy hand on my shoulder.

"I know who it is, because Ed Corrigan was the strongest man of his time. He and A. B. Spreckels built Ingleside and once they had an argument about something and Corrigan threw Spreckels out the window. Well, he says to me, 'Boy, get in the buggy,' and he sent me down to the Ben Ali Haggin ranch to work.

"You've heard of that place. We had close to 85 stallions there and close to 2500 mares. I got to be assistant stud groom and I rubbed Sweet Briar all the time she was racing. She was undefeated as a 3-year-old in '97. One time I took a carload of wild horses to South America and places.

"Then in 1907, well, I went to clocking. Been at it since."

"HOW DO YOU identify horses?"

"It's tough with the new 2-year-olds in the spring but you get to know 'em by their way of going, like you know a man from his appearance. The way they stand, the way they walk, their disposition. This one's always kicking and jumping and that one's quiet like Middleground, just like a big sheep dog. Assault, you could spot over on the back stretch by the way he had of favoring the foot he hurt as a yearling, and Coaltown, he just glided along something like Max Hirsch's old horse, Sarazen. That was the prettiest gaited horse I ever saw. No waste motion at all.

"The best horse I ever saw? There never was one to make a comeback like this Citation. Maybe Man O'War was the best but I couldn't say so because he never raced after he was 3. You take a horse out of training for 13 months at the top of his form like they did with Citation, and how they ever got him back again I'll never know. They got to break a world record now to beat him a nose, with him carrying all the weight, and how do we know that this Noor that's been beatin' him ain't one of the great horses of all time? But for one burst of speed, anywhere you asked him to turn it on, there never was one like Whirlaway.

"Still," the Owl said, "For me, for what he's done, I got to take Citation."

Meyer Ends Loss Streak Against Cubs

Philadelphia, June 24 (AP).—Fireman Jim Konstanty pitched no hit relief ball today to save a 5-4 game for Russ Meyer as the Philadelphia Phillies evened their series with the Chicago Cubs before a slim gathering of 7195.

Konstanty took over for Meyer with none in the sixth inning after the Cubs had inched to within one run of the Phils and closed the door on the Chicagoans from then on. The triumph was Meyer's second after six straight reverses.

Frank Hiller, second of three Chicago pitchers, was charged with the defeat.

Double Pays $61 at Laurel

Laurel Raceway, June 24.—Anthony Hanover, handled by Gib White and Topsy Scott with George Mahony in the sulky, combined for a $61.40 daily double payoff last night at Laurel Raceway before a crowd of 9000.

Anthony Hanover trotted the opener, a 24 conditioned mile, in 2:10 to return $5.80, $3 and $2.40.

The favored My Majesty, owned by Octave Blake and driven by Del Cameron, broke at the start but came back strongly to finish second, a half length behind the victor.

Topsy Scott paid $13.20, $6.20 and $4.80 after pacing the mile in 2:15 3-5. The third race went to Flying Fortress, as William Little's trotter went the 1 1-16 miles in 2:17 4-5 for driver Charlie Crook. Flying Fortress paid $31.20, $11 and $6.40.

Welsh, Lynch Upset by Smith, Adair, 6-3, 6-2

Alphonso Smith and Buddy Adair upset the second-seeded team of Barney Welsh and Hugh Lynch, 6-3, 6-2, in the semi-finals of the Woodmont Invitational Doubles tennis tournament yesterday at Woodmont.

In the other semi-final, top-seeded Don Leavens and Jim Thackara defeated Fred McNair and Bill Gifford, 6-2, 6-0.

Leavens and Thackara, defending champions, meet Smith and Adair at 8 p. m. today at Woodmont for the championship.

AAU Officials Almost Outnumber Entries; Scorebook Author Learns to Use Own Book

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

IF ANYTHING escaped the attention of officials at the AAU track championships at Byrd Stadium, it wasn't because there weren't enough of them. No less than 174 officials, or one for every three contestants, were on hand to observe the performances of the 560 athletes . . . Next to badges for the officials, perhaps the costliest item connected with the event was ammunition for the starters' guns, especially in the junior 110-meter hurdles where there were seven false starts alone in one qualifying heat Friday . . . Washington's public golf courses are so crowded on weekends it takes a foursome from 4 to 5 hours to play 18 holes. . . . With the baseball season almost half over, a local sports announcer has just published a score book. The book was delayed in publication while the author-announcer learned the approved method of keeping score. . . . Tommy Laughran, the 35-year-old San Franciscan who hitch-hiked to College Park, Md., to participate in the 3000-meter walk, walked 5 miles Friday morning to practice for the event that afternoon, only to finish last . . .

LAUGHRAN

STEVE BAGARUS, one-time darling of Redskins' fans, isn't moaning his departure from football too loudly. His commissions as an auto salesman for a local auto concern amounted to $2000 last month . . . Also on the doing well list are Ends Ed Berrang and Joe Tereshinski, of the present day Redskins. They took off from regular jobs with an auto company last week to pick up $70 apiece for two days work as extras in "Born Yesterday," the Broderick Crawford film which was on location here briefly . . . Roberto Ortiz, who earns his keep on the Nats by serving as an interpreter for Pitchers Sandalio Consuegra and Conrado Marrero, is a man of piscatorial distinction. In 1948 he caught the largest sabalo in Mexican waters in a United States sponsored fishing contest . . . Promoter Florence Turner's wrestling gate dropped $14,500 in one week. It tumbled from $15,000 (Mr. America-Rocca at Griffith Stadium) June 14 to $500 June 21 (Martinelli-Superman at Turner's Arena) . . .

THE WASHINGTON POST'S handicapper at Laurel Raceways has picked more winners than any handicapper in town. For him, it's no stroke of luck. He led the Rosecroft meeting in winners . . . Maryland University athletic officials have solved their feared problem of too many requests for tickets to the Navy game and not enough for other home football games. Persons wishing choice seats for the Navy game must buy season tickets. To the happy surprise of Terps officials, they are . . . There were actually more participants at Byrd Stadium Friday than spectators for the first day of the AAU games . . . The Nats have made the cleanest sweep down in the majors this season. Besides a new manager and a new thir dbase coach, they also have a new first baseman, a new second baseman, a new utility infielder, a new catcher, two new outfielders, three new pitchers and have fortified their board of directors with a new stockholder . . . Charlie Justice, who has said "no" repeatedly to the Redskins, proved the other day he was no snob. He also said "no" to an invitation to play in the All-Star game in Chicago in August.

Fighters Fall Out of Ring, One Gets Up to Win

Hollywood, June 24 (AP). — If Dave Whitlock hadn't fallen out of the Hollywood Stadium ring last night and if Irish Bob Murphy hadn't fallen on top of him, Murphy might not be the California light heavyweight title holder today.

As it happened, however, both battlers tumbled through the ropes in the tenth round of a scheduled 12-rounder. Whitlock, San Francisco Negro, didn't get up. Referee Abe Roth gave Murphy a tenth round technical knockout.

Murphy, fighting out of San Diego and holding one of the country's top knockout records, weighed 171¾. Whitlock weighed 173.

After Whitlock cracked his head on the apron of the ring, stadium Dr. John Fahey examined him and pronounced him unfit to answer the bell for the eleventh.

Giants Seven Homers Beat Cincy, 12-3

New York, June 24 (AP).—Catcher Wes Westrum staged the greatest batting performance of his major league career today as he socked three home runs and a triple to lead the New York Giants to a 12-2 triumph over the Cincinnati Reds.

The Giants slammed a total of seven homers, one short of the major league record for most homers in one game set by the New York Yankees, against the Philadelphia Athletics on June 28, 1939. Hank Thompson, Alvin Dark, Whitey Lockman and Monte Irvin were the other Giant homer hitters.

Westrum, who walked in his only other trip to the plate, drove in four runs and scored five.

Next Move Captures Delaware Oaks by Five Lengths

In $40,000 Dwyer

Hill Prince Is Upset by Greek Song

New York, June 24 (AP).—Greek Song, flying the Brandwine Stable silks of Donald P. Ross, charged through the stretch today to overhaul the pacesetting Hill Prince and win the $45,000 Dwyer Stakes before 29,438 at Aqueduct.

Greek Song's margin at the finish of the 1¼-mile race being run for the thirty-third time was 1½ lengths.

Hill Prince, C. T. Chenery's Virginia flyer who won the Preakness but lost to Middleground in the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes, was six lengths ahead of the third horse, George Widener's Lights Up. Four lengths behind Lights Up came the C. V. Whitney pair of Mr. Trouble and Dooly in the five-horse field.

Jockey Ovie Scurlock brought the winner home in 2:03, well off the track record of 2:01 2/5 established by Valdina Orphan in winning the 1942 Dwyer. It was Greek Song's first major victory of the year, and only his second triumph in eight 1950 starts.

The rank outsider and the small field, the son of Heliopolis-Sylvan Song returned $14.80 and $4.80. Hill Prince was $3.10 to place, with no show betting because of the small field.

The victory was worth $27,400 to Brandywine Stable, and boosted Greek Song's earnings to $53,760. He had won only $13,510 in his seven other starts this year.

Busanda Second and Include 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporters

Delaware Park, June 24.—Jogging through the stretch as if she owned it, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Next Move made a joke of her opposition as she won the $22,500 added Delaware Oaks, richest race ever contested here.

The daughter of Bull Lea and Now What, who was given top Vanderbilt assignments when Bed O'Roses, the champion filly juvenile of 1949, went amiss, coasted into the wire five lengths in front of her closest rival in the 3-year-old filly test of a mile and a furlong.

Under Jockey Eric Guerin, her regular pilot, Next Move led Ogden Phyps' Busanda and King Ranch's Include to the finish line in a field of 11.

An estimated crowd of 16,000 played, replayed and parlayed Next Move and after she had answered all questions a $3.30 win mutuel was displayed. The brown filly was clocked in 1:49 2-5, a record for the Oaks, first contested here in 1938, but a second over the track mark held by Capot.

However, had Next Move been pressed through the stretch, she undoubtedly would have hung up a new standard for the 9 furlongs.

The Vanderbilt miss, rolling along to her sixth straight victory in eight starts this year, picked up $24,375 today and that ain't moss. She brought her season's total to $94,450 and her two-year earnings to $112,600.

Vanderbilt in accepting the trophy disclosed that Next Move will move next in a Midwest campaign with her chief objectives the $20,000 Cleopatra Handicap and the $50,000 Arlington Classic, both at Chicago's Arlington Park.

Carrying a betting load of $75,000 across the board, Next Move had all the earmarks of a winner from start to finish. Guerin saved ground while keeping her in the first flight and close up to Busanda, the pace-maker, and Oujia, the No. 1 pace-chaser.

Guerin was apparently about to go to the outside when he spied clear passage along the rail. He took advantage of the opening, assumed command without effort and was being eased in the final eighth.

Texas Retains NCAA Title With 3-0 Victory

Omaha, June 24 (AP).—Texas was master all the way last night as the Longhorns beat Washington State 3 to 0 to retain the NCAA baseball championship.

FROM CALIFORNIA—Some of the best pacers and trotters that California boasts arrived here yesterday to run in six $10,000 races at the Laurel Raceway. Among the arrivals was Par, 8-year-old trotter, shown leaving the train. Ralph Kroening of Milwaukee, owns Par, who is handled by Guy Crippen, one of Santa Anita's top drivers

Bill Benning Says:

AT DELAWARE.

DEAR FOLKS:

Former steeplechase jockey George Walker, paralyzed from the waist down as the result of a fall at Laurel some years back, has a 2-year-old, George W W, named for him by Phil Goodwin. Joe Tucci, Washington owner, has named juveniles for his old Northeast friends Bob Considine and Vincent X. Flaherty. Tucci and Flaherty were the ends on the once famous Stanton Juniors football team at a time when Considine was playground tennis champion. The new Detroit race track is suffering because the town is red by its winning ball club. However, betting has improved recently. Marlboro is ready to experiment with night flat racing in September if the commission will give the nod.

Shirley May Takes First Workout

Dover, England, June 24 (U.P.).—Shirley May France took a two-hour swim in Dover Harbor today—the first real workout of her "comeback" attempt to swim the English Channel.

The 17-year-old swimmer from Somerset, Mass., did not venture outside the harbor breakwater. She explained that she only wanted to "get the feel" of the channel's chilly waters.

Coach Harry Boudakian said he was "very satisfied" with the 4-mile swim. He said Shirley May might go into the channel proper for training next week.

Herb Flam College Champ

Austin, Tex., June 24 (AP).—Herb Flam, UCLA ace, won the National Collegiate Tennis Championship today. He vanquished Ricardo Balbiers of Rollins College in a four-set match, 6-3, 1-6, 6-1, 9-7.

Flam ran Balbiers, the unseeded darkhorse from Chile, until he looked ready to drop. Balbiers never quit trying.

A double fault by Balbiers in the final game gave Flam the advantage and Flam dropped one over the net that Balbiers barely hit but could not return.

Didrikson Whips Peggy Kirk, 4-3, for 4th Western Open Title

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

TIRED AND DEFEATED—Clara Bias leans on the net and gropes for a towel, exhausted from her two-and-a-half-hours match, which she lost to Jean Hall in the opening round of the Public Parks women's tennis championships yesterday on the courts at 16th and Kennedy sts. nw.

Record 71 Round Gives Babe Edge

Denver, June 24 (AP).—One blistering four-under-par nine-hole stretch today lifted Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias into the women's Western Open Golf championship for the fourth time.

She strengthened her claims to dominance in the women's golf field by whipping Peggy Kirk, courageous amateur from Findlay, Ohio, 4 and 3, to become the first ever to capture this major golf prize four times.

Babe led four birdies and five pars on the second nine this morning for a four-up margin while posting a three-under-par 71 for the best 18-hole medal score yet reported in this tournament over the difficult Cherry Hills course.

The battling amateur from Ohio lost two of the first three holes in the afternoon but fought back to cut this margin to three holes at the turn after the twenty-seventh.

Babe Gets a Birdie

She trimmed it to only two up with a birdie four on 29 but Mrs. Zaharias started lowering the boom on the 190-yard thirtieth when she sank a four-foot putt for a birdie deuce.

They halved 31 in par fours but an eagle three with a 12-foot putt on the thirty-second and par three on No. 33 closed it out.

The Babe birdied five of the six long holes in the morning round and led 4-up at the halfway stage.

Two down through five, Mrs. Zaharias won eight and nine to turn all square with a one-over-par 37 against the Ohio amateur's even par 36.

Lois Penn Wins Match

She started pouring on the heat with a birdie four on 11 and won the last three holes of the morning round with a par and two birdies, carding a 37-34—71, three under par. Miss Kirk had 36-42—78.

While her terrific drives were consistently 10 to 40 yards ahead of Miss Kirk's, she did real damage with her short irons and her putting also. She had seven one-putt greens, thanks largely to some chipping, and used only 29 putts for the 18 holes.

Lois Penn of Des Moines won the consolation title in the championship flight by beating Dorothy Vance of Denver, 3 and 2.

Andrews Golfers Win 5th Straight

Andrews Field won its fifth straight golf match yesterday, defeating the Pentagon Officer's Athletic Club, 12½—2½, at Fort Belvoir.

Capt. W. R. Roath and Maj. R. C. Ross had a best ball 64—six below par—for the best score of the day.

ALL ALONE—Despite the added weight assigned Noor, the Irish thoroughbred, with Johnny Longden aboard, crosses the finish line three lengths ahead of Citation to win the $50,000 added Golden Gate handicap in Albany, Calif., yesterday. It was the fourth time Noor has beaten Citation. Noor ran the mile and a quarter in record time of 1 minute, 58 1/5 seconds

Gallaher, Gardner Lose One Down

Favorites Eddie Gallaher and Jim Gardner of Washington lost a tough 1 up golf match yesterday in the semifinals of Congressional Country Club's annual member-guest tournament to J. D. Kendall and Bob Harris of Prince Georges.

Gallaher and Gardner were one down going into the eighteenth hole but Gardner birdied the 300-yard par four cup and it looked like a tie match until Morris holed his putt for another birdie to close out the match.

Until yesterday's defeat Gallaher and Gardner were overwhelming favorites to win the championship, having won the qualifying medal, ousted Defending Champions Harry Bachman and Bobby Brownell, and defeating Ralph Bogart and Tom Wheeler in prior tourney play.

John Conroy and John Jankowski of Prince Georges had an easy time disposing of S. K. Smith and Walter Brill, of Ridgewood, 3 and 2, in the other semifinal match.

FIRST FLIGHT
(Member's Name First)

J. D. Kendell and Bob Morris, Prince Georges, beat Eddie Gallaher and Jim Gardner, Washington, 1 up.

Pinckney Loses 1st in 11 Starts

Hyattsville Baptist handed Hyattsville Pinckney its first loss in 11 starts in a Prince Georges County Church League softball game at the University of Maryland yesterday 5-3.

In other games, Mount Rainier Lutheran defeated Brentwood Methodist 4-3; Hyattsville Methodist defeated Bowie Lutheran, 16-13, and Mount Rainier Christian blanked Cheverly Community, 7-0.

Coss, Friends, Rogers, Landon In Tennis Meet

Charlottesville, Va., June 24.—Tim Coss of Friends School and Ted Rogers of Landon will represent the District of Columbia and Maryland respectively in the 42 Annual National Inter-Scholastic Tennis Tournament which starts tomorrow at the University of Virginia. Twenty-eight schools in 18 States and the District of Columbia will be represented.

Last year's champion, Keston Deimling of Oak Park, Ill., has graduated and the leading candidate of number one seeding is 17-year-old Hamilton Richardson of University High School, Baton Rouge, La. Hamilton won the National Boys' Championship two years ago and is the ranking junior tennis player in the South.

Wimbledon Tennis Tourney Opens Monday

London, June 24 (AP).—Britain's biggest fortnight of international sports opens Monday on the famed center court of the All-England Lawn Tennis Club at Wimbledon.

In the next 14 days the sports menu in these islands will include the British open golf championship at Troon, Scotland; the Royal Regatta at Henley, England, and the Wimbledon championships, widely regarded as the supreme international tennis competition.

Four American professionals and three amateurs headed by British amateur champ Frank Stranahan have entered the open golf meet starting July 3.

But the tennis at Wimbledon will be the big show.

Frank Sedgman, 22-year-old Australian Davis Cup star, drew the No. 1 seeding, but he has been troubled by an injured wrist and may run into difficulties before the men's final on July 7.

Billy Talbert of New York was seeded No. 2.

New Coach

Springfield, Ohio, June 24 (AP).—Wittenberg College today appointed Ralph E. (Tom) Ness, of Lakewood, Ohio, high school, its new athletic director and football coach.

—Weik, Wynn Tribe Starters—

Nats' Cuban Parlay, Marrero And Consuegra, Face Ex-Nats

Cleveland, June 24.—Bucky Harris is sending his Cuban parlay, Conrado Marrero and Sandalia Consuegra, to the post here tomorrow afternoon in an attempt to square the Nats' series with the Indians.

That pair, recent winners over the league-leading Tigers, will start in the doubleheader in which the Indians will counter with a brace of pitchers formerly in the employe of the Nats.

Early Wynn and Dick Weik will pitch for Cleveland.

Weik will be making his first start for the Indians since the Nats traded him to that club a week ago for Mickey Vernon. He won starting status by two splendid relief shifts against the Yankees in which he walked nobody.

Wynn, who made the Washington-to-Cleveland trek in the winter of 1948, beat the Yankees with a four-hitter in his last start.

IN SHORT . . . The Indians have now hit 25 home runs in their last 12 games and are blossoming as one of the power clubs . . . There were 12,219 paid admissions today, but Ladies Day and thousands of kids boosted the total figures to 23,748 . . . The Nats have 17 hits in the two games here, 16 of them singles . . . Ostrowski draped himself over the fence railing in left field in an effort to catch Avila's game-winning homer in the eighth and miraculously was unhurt . . . Vernon had no luck in the tighth when Mitchell made a fancy, twisting catch of his drive near the left field fence with the score tied and two on.

filled. And he called a sudden halt by striking out Yost and getting Combs on a pop foul. The Nats never did get another hit.

Mudson pitched away his two-run 5-3 in the fifth. With none out, he walked Easter and a run scored on cheapish singles by Doby and Rosen. Avila got the tying run home with a single to left. When Hudson walked Hegan, filling the bases, Harris got the job. He walked nobody, pitched one-hit ball and got licked.

bases and two singles accounted for the runs.

Bobby Doerr, Vern Stephens and Ted Williams also hit for the circuit. It was No. 21 for Williams.

Boston had the game won in the second. Stephens was safe on Billy Sommers' error. With one out, Al Zarilla walked. Doerr singled, scoring Stephens; then Doerr and Zarilla pulled a double steal.

Kinder walked, filling the bases, as did Dom DiMaggio, forcing in Zarilla. Then came Goodman's blow.

Packers Sign Grimes

Green Bay, Wis., June 24 (AP).—Coach Gene Ronzani of the Green Bay Packers today announced the signing of halfback Bill Grimes, the club's No. 1 choice in the draft

Mangrum Leads Way

(Chick) Harbert of Detroit was a classic, despite the 6 and 5 margin against the 1947 finalist. Mangrum, who has adopted 32—four under par—as his favorite score for the front nine—manufactured a 66 on the first 18 for a 4-up advantage, got another 32 going out, and finished 9 under par as he ended it on the thirty-first. Harbert, one of the game's long hitters, was 5 under par and 5 down at the end of 27 holes. Mangrum had 11 1-putt greens.

Harper of Portsmouth, Va., clipped six strokes off par for 35 holes in ousting Bob Toski, the 23-year-old lightweight from Northampton, Mass., 2 and 1. Toski not only lost the match but dropped six pounds in weight, checking out at 121 pounds.

Claude Harmon, tourney-tested and terrific in the clutch, was three down with three to go against Williams, of Secane, Pa., but won the last three with two birds and a par, only to three-putt the thirty-eighth green from 15 feet to let Williams advance. Harmon was under par for the 38 holes, and Williams was even after losing two holes by two strokes.

Douglas Ousts Reed

Douglas, dubbed "the Human One Iron" because of his length and slimmness, triumphed 3 and 2 over Elmer Reed, the 35-year-old Eastern Airlines pilot from Atlanta who yesterday ousted Jim Ferrier, the transplanted Australian who won the 1947 title.

Douglas, from Wilmington, Del., was three under par for the route in sending Reed back to his Boston-Atlanta plane run, from which he took a few days off to appear here.

Palmer, the North Carolinian, last year's finalist against Snead, needed a birdie on the last hole to snatch a one-up decision over Ted Kroll, the oft-wounded infantryman of World War II from New Hartford, N. Y. Palmer was three up with six to play, but Kroll whittled him down to one with only the thirty-sixth to go, which they halved in birds.

Picard Tops An Eagle

Picard, however, furnished the picture finish in the match with Jackson Bradley of St. Charles, Ill.—and he got plenty of help from his foe in the fireworks department. After a nip-and-tuck battle Picard went one up with a birdie four on the twenty-sixth hole.

They banged away at each other, halving nine holes in a row and came to the thirty-sixth with Picard still 1 up. Bradley banked his second to the fringe of the green on the 490-yard hole, and calmly sank a 31-foot pitch shot for an eagle. Henry just as calmly dropped a 15-foot putt for another eagle three, shutting off Bradley's bid to win the hole and salvaging his 1-up conquest.

The eight survivors of the original field of 129 play 36 holes Sunday, with the semifinals Monday over the same route, and the $3500 title going to Tuesday's winner.

A gallery of around 8000 witnessed today's play, despite the rain which marred the afternoon round.

Wake Forest Hires Preston

Wake Forest, N. C., June 24 (AP).—Paddison (Pat) Preston, one of Wake Forest's all-time line greats, today was added to the school's football coaches staff.

Preston said that he would concentrate on the coaching end of the game after four years as guard for the Chicago Bears of the National Professional league. Preston was a tackle for three years at Wake Forest, then moved to Duke where he rounded out his collegiate career.

D. C. Women's Qualifying Begins Monday

Qualifying rounds for the Women's District Amateur Golf Championship, sponsored by the Women's District Golf Association, will begin Monday at Indian Spring Country Club with 71 players teeing off.

Match play begins Tuesday and will continue through Friday. Mrs. A. B. Bower of Manor, three-time winner, is defending champion and qualifies automatically.

Belle Haven Honors Ryan Today

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

TODAY IS "Tom Ryan Day" at Belle Haven Country Club. Most of the area's top local linksmen will join in a banquet and an all-day sports program in Tom's honor.

The occasion is his 25th anniversary as club professional. Tom has been at the Alexandria golf club ever since he helped lay out the course back in 1924. Besides a golf tournament there'll be a swimming and diving exhibition, a water ballet, and a tennis exhibition by Pauline Betz Addie.

Visitors from all over the Middle Atlantic area are dropping in and Charley Muck, assistant pro at Belle Haven, estimates that over a thousand people will be on hand today.

FRED DONALDSON, son of Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson, is a nexcellent golfer. He's a member of Bethesda Country Club and tied for first in last Sunday's Sweeps, shooting 79-9-70.

Bunker Hill may be a famous battle site to the folks in Boston, but to the folks at Manor Country Club he's a good golfer who tied for first in their match play against par last Sunday.

The first match of the publinx series is scheduled for July 2 . . . Anacostia will tangle with East Potomac.

TODAY'S SEMI-FINAL match between Claude Rippy and Jim Gardner in Washington Country Club's club championship tournament is attracting a lot of attention . . . Gardner is the defending champ and Rippy is regarded as his toughest opposition.

Add free golf clinics for kids: Bethesda, Tuesday morning at 10:30 when Pro Harry Griesmer, one of the best club swingers in the area, will give a free lesson to any interested youngsters, and at Fort Dupont Public Golf Course, the same day and the same time, Assistant Pro Bobby Hart will conduct a five-lesson free clinic.

The Virginia State Amateur is scheduled at Hot Springs July 1-4. Army Navy's Col. Jim Wilson is entered and will be a strong contender. He finished second in the Maryland State two weeks ago and won the Air Force tournament this week. It will be Wilson's first try in the Virginia meet.

The tournament is open to residents of Virginia or members of Virginia golf clubs. Entries close Wednesday and should be mailed to F. J. D. Mackay, Box 6-0, Richmond. Everybody will get to play, tournament officials plan to have as many flights as there are entries. Jack Hamilton of James River Country Club, Newport News, is defending champion.

JULIAN WILLIAMS, Earl Marcy and Keith Kallio of East Potomac Public Golf Course, winners of three of the four Middle Atlantic qualifier's spots in the National Public Links Open, will leave this week for the national tournament at Seneca Golf Course, Louisville, Ky.

S. G. Loeffler, operator of the public golf courses, presented the trio with transportation tickets and expense checks.

Williams and Marcy are scheduled to entrain for Louisville Thursday and Kallio will fly there Friday. The trio will take Tuesday out to give Al Tredor, East Potomac pro, a hand in teaching a session of the publinx junior golf clinic.

"FLINT HILL"
GENTLEMAN'S ESTATE
IN HISTORIC FAIRFAX
COUNTY, VIRGINIA
Situated at an elevation of 420 feet on 20 fertile acres of pasturage with additional acreage available, this charming brick plantation-type Colonial home painted in a soft cream shade with white two-storied Southern columned portico is flanked by two wings connected by inclosed arcades and has an overall length of 120 feet. Of center hall plan, there are 5 bedrooms, 4½ baths, with a 12-mile view from the east porch. It is within 15 miles of downtown Washington over the fast fourlane Lee boulevard. It is on local bus transportation and near railways and Greyhound express stops.
A new elementary school is within walking distance and school buses for the public high schools, junior-and-a-half away, pass the gate. There are two country clubs with excellent golf courses within several miles of the estate. The surrounding countryside lends itself to horseback riding either with the Fairfax Hunt or in the numerous Virginia and Maryland horse shows. The pasturage is completely fenced and cross fenced with a white board paddock fence and is watered by springs forming part of the headwaters of Accotink Creek. There is a four-box stall barn with running water and electricity and a six-room tenant house with heat and bath. The brick used in the 14-inch solid walls, the hand-hewn beams of the 4,000-book capacity library, the graceful stairway in the wide 12-ft. center hall and the delicate mantels all came from a 135-year-old tavern in the historic town of Fairfax, Va. DEVELOPED FOR WATER SPORTS!
The developers of Drum Point Beach must have had all lovers of water sports in mind when they planned this lovely year-round beach retreat! The specially developed harbor area, protected and secluded has special appeal to the numerous owners and operators of boats and pleasure craft. The Patuxent River is overabundant with the best fisheries in the Bay area, a perfectly lovely fresh-water lakes offer leisurely small boating and canoeing, and the wide, beautiful white sand beaches along the Chesapeake Bay leave nothing to be desired in luxurious, bathing, surf swimming and sunning. It is unbelievable that so much is packed into one beach development; yet today this is only half the story. For you water lovers, the new Drum Point Beach Section Seven has just opened —offering, for the first time to the public, waterfront sites, where you can tie your boat at your front door, amazingly low priced from $750. (Other choice lots from $350.) Add to this the latest improvements of Drum Point Beach—community of fine homes, electricity, telephone lines, piers, streets to name a few—and you realize that you need wait no longer; the waterfront you've always dreamed of is a reality today. See it this very weekend. Follow these directions to Drum Point Beach: Out Bladensburg Road to Peace Cross, on out to Landover Road, right on route 202 thru Upper Marlboro on route 4 to Wells Corner, right on route 414 thru Prince Frederick, route 2 for 15 miles, left at the sign Drum Point Beach.

Wedding Bells Peal ... On a Nautical Key

Harris & Ewing Photos

WHO had the most fun at Nancy Misson's wedding Wednesday? Why, Nancy did, of course. Proof of the fact is right here on this page. From the moment she enters St. Alban's Church on the arm of her father, Rear Admiral Clinton A. Misson, Nancy is all smiles. Looks like she enjoys every exciting minute of the Carlton Hotel reception, too. The bridegroom is George Randolph Cooper, jr., whose father, Rear Admiral C. R. Cooper, USN, was a classmate of Admiral Misson at the Naval Academy

THE bride receives a spirited toast from the Navy at the Carlton Hotel reception. The occasion was a double celebration. First, it was her wedding day, but, to the surprise of some of the guests, it was her birthday, too. And, thus, the double-barreled salute

THE ceremony's over and the bride's friends rush up to inspect the brand new wedding ring before the Carlton Hotel reception gets under way. The girls are (left to right) Mrs. Reuben F. Woodall of Glen Burnie, Md.; Miss Jane Lingo; the bride's sister, Miss Anne Misson, and, of course, the bride. Then Mrs. Arthur H. Page, 3d, Miss Virginia Summerlin, and Miss Elaine Trimble

THE bride slipped up to the balcony of the banquet room to toss her bouquet. But it fell into three pairs of outstretched hands. Elaine Trimble was in the middle, so it was her prize. She won out over Anne Misson and Virginia Summerlin. Anne didn't care too much about giving up her hold on the flowers. "I've got my fiance," she stated. She wants to wait a year for her wedding, however, so she can be a traditional June bride as her sister, Nancy, was

"MY ACHING ARCHES!" The bride's sister Anne was maid of honor and after a few hours of handshaking and errand-running she was ready for a rest. The handsome Ensign is her fiance, Samuel F. Powel, 3d, of Chevy Chase

AFTER almost an hour in the receiving line, newlyweds and their parents are able to get a bite to eat and relax. To the right of the bride and her husband are Mrs. Misson, Mrs. Cooper and Admiral Misson. Admiral Cooper wasn't able to leave his duties in Europe for the wedding on Wednesday

WHAT'S a wedding without a few pranks? As the newly married Nancy and George Cooper drive off to catch their plane to Bermuda, a box reading "you'll be sorry" clambered behind them. After their island honeymoon the couple will live in Cambridge where the bridegroom attends Harvard Law school

Mrs. Barkley's 'Gallery'

Coterie to Accompany Sponsor to Launching

By Marie McNair

WHEN MRS. BARKLEY takes a crashing swing with the champagne bottle against the SS President Jackson's hull on Tuesday, she'll have her own cheering section from Washington with her. With the Vice President and Mrs. Barkley when they leave Monday night for Camden, N. J., will go Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford and Mrs. Arthur MacArthur.

They'll be met for the noon ceremony on Tuesday by Mrs. Barkley's mother, Mrs. Roy Rucker, who'll come from Nantucket, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Coburn of St. Louis.

When confronted with the problem of choosing a maid or matron of honor for the launching of the President Jackson, Jane Barkley is the perfect diplomat. She's too fond of too many people to have to make a choice.

Anne, elder of her two daughters, is in Palm Beach having such a good time that Mrs. Barklety hated to ask her to come back just for that day. "I'll probably just hand my flowers to my husband," she said. The Veep will be speaker for the occasion and will share honors with the ship's charming sponsor at a luncheon which is to follow.

Mrs. Rucker will bid her daughter farewell on Tuesday for a visit to friends in the Adirondacks; Mr. and Mrs. Coburn will in all probability catch the St. Louis train at Philadelphia, and the Veep and his missus will return to Washington Tuesday night. When Congress adjourns, they expect to head for Paducah, Ky.

Dancing Is Outlet For Excess Energy

IF YOU have troubles (and who hasn't) if your excess energy has no outlet, take up dancing, is Mrs. William Pope Anderson's advice.

She's one of Arthur Murray's most enthusiastic pupils, goes to the studio here every day and has been following that routine for the last 15 months. She feels younger and healthier, finds it easier to keep those extra pounds away, as the result of a two-hour session doing everything from the waltz to the tango, rumba, mambo and samba.

Dancing started with Marguerite Anderson as a pleasant way to exercise. Now it's her only hobby. There wasn't much about dancing that anyone could teach her, Mrs. Anderson thought, when she first enrolled. She had danced all her life, had given many exhibitions for charity's sake. But she was quick to discover that she didn't know it all and had a lot to learn.

It wasn't easy either, she says. But she triumphed in the end and won a brone pin for ballroom dancing in a recent studio contest. In fact it was a very special pin—the one that Arthur Murray pinned on Mrs. Murray some years ago. It was clasped to Mrs. Anderson's frock by Mrs. Murray herself.

One of the Murray's pet projects is the cerebral palsy clinic in New York. They've asked Mrs. Anderson to give a dance exhibition next fall, not only as entertainment but to encourage the victims of the disease to try it for themselves.

NOTEBOOK NOTES:

Mrs. Reeve Hoover, her motherly duties over for the nonce, will fly to Europe July 12.

"Everything happens to me" might well be Mrs. Hoover's theme song. First date on her June calendar was her daughter Hilary's graduation from Westover. That same week came Hilary's debut tea. Then it was Mrs. Hoover's job to get Hilary and her sister, Louise, ready to be bridesmaids in their brother, Bill's wedding to Patricia Seidenberg, which took place yesterday in New York. Now it's seeing her youngest, Clara, off to camp, with all necessary equipment.

Then, if she has strength left, Mrs. Hoover will get herself together for a month's holiday. She'll visit friends in England, join her sister, Miss Alice Tully, in Paris, and motor through Normandy, Luxembourg, and fly back from Switzerland August 8.

Did you know that the statue of Jose Artigas (father of independence of Uruguay), which was unveiled with appropriate ceremonies on Tuesday at 18th st. and Constitution ave., is the second Artigas monument in this country? The other one, erected a year ago in July, stands in Montevideo, Minn.

To Wed in July

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Procter of Washington announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Procter, to Dr. Charles R. Price, jr., son of the Rev. and Mrs. Charles A. Price of New York City. The ceremony will take place in St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church, New York City, in July.

The bride-elect was graduated from Trinity College, and Dr. Price was graduated from Columbia University.

Southall

MRS. JAMES HOWARD AUSTIN, the former Miss Constance Eleanor Shaw, was married yesterday at Grace Evangelical Church. She is the daughter of Mrs. James A. Kennedy of Washington and of Howard K. Shaw of Trenton, N. J., and the granddaughter of Maj. Walter R. Metz, retired chief engineer for the Veterans' Administration, and Mrs. Metz. The bride wore French bridal lace over white satin, and carried white roses and lilies of the valley. A wedding breakfast at the Wardman Park Hotel, home of the bride, followed the ceremony. The couple will live in Durham, N. C., where the groom is studying medicine at Duke Hospital

Virginia Beall Is Bride Of Sen. Knowland's Son

MISS DOLORES FAYE BEALL of Sandy Spring, Md., and Joseph William Knowland, son of Senator and Mrs. William F. Knowland of California, were married yesterday in Oakdale, Md. The bride is the daughter of Forrest Purdum Beall of Sandy Spring, and the late Mrs. Beall.

The ceremony took place at 4 p. m. in the Oakdale Emory Methodist Church and a reception followed at Foxley, home of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Brigham, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, in Ashton, Md. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a Chantilly lace and marquisette gown, with a close bodice of lace and the full skirt sweeping into a double train. A Chantilly lace cap held her illusion veil. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

Miss Estelle Knowland, younger sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Flora Beall, sister of the bride, were attendants. Others were Miss Judith Groves of Washington; Miss Catherine McKeever, Miss Joan Johns and Miss Katherine Tolson, all of Sandy Spring. Stan Church of Piedmont, Calif., served as best man. Ushers included Calvin Craftritz of Washington, Terrance Longacre of Falls Church, Va.; Richard Scammell of Piedmont, Calif., and William Jaspet of Pittsburgh, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Knowland will live at 199 Guilford rd., Piedmont, after a cross-country motor trip. The bride was graduated from the Sherwood School, Sandy Spring.

Gen. Wilson's Son Marries in North Carolina

Of interest to Washington is the wedding of Miss Jane Buchanan Reynolds and Lieut. Durward Saunders Wilson, jr., which took place yesterday at 5:30 p. m. in First Presbyterian Church, Wilmington, N. C. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bradford Reynolds, and the bridegroom is the son of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Durward Saunders Wilson of Arlington, Va.

The Rev. William Crowe, jr., was officiating clergyman, and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Marshall Baker of Niagara Falls, N. Y., cousin of the bride, was matron of honor, and Miss Mary Bonner Reynolds of Wilmington, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Miss Mary Hill of Wilmington, Miss Nancy Finch of Hoopeston, Ill., Miss Helen Hardin of Richmond, Va., and Miss Louise Rhett of Charleston, S. C. Miss Olive Kengla of Arlington, a niece of the bridegroom, was junior bridesmaid.

A reception was held at the home of Mrs. Jennie Gilchrist Hill, cousin of the bride. After a wedding trip to western North Carolina, the couple will make their home in Japan, where the bridegroom is stationed.

Miss Knowlton Becomes Bride Of Mr. Jordan

ST. MARGARET'S Church was the setting for the wedding at 6 p. m. yesterday of Miss Josephine E. Knowlton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Knowlton, and R. Curtis Jordan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Jordan of Columbus, Ga.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white satin gown. A circlet of orange blossoms which had been worn by her mother at her wedding held the bride's tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, and wore a pearl pendant surrounded by diamonds, the gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Frances Galpin of Austin, Tex., was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. M. C. Jennings of Columbus, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Ruth Neilson of Malvern, Pa.; Miss Edith Scott and Miss Mimi Griffin of Washington.

Gunby Jordan was his brother's best man. The ushers included M. C. Jennings, Joe Bowers, Lloyd Bowers, jr., LeGrande Elebash, jr., Henry Swift, James McMurria, Monk Arnold, all of Atlanta; Robert Train of Macon, Ga., and Douglas Robinson of Long Island, N. Y.

A reception for the family and close friends was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan will honeymoon in Europe and will live in Columbus, Ga.

The bride was graduated from Potomac School and attended Madeira School. Mr. Jordan was graduated from Kent School, the University of Virginia and the Textile School in Philadelphia.

Saga of White House Lives to Be Published Soon

By Peggy Preston

MILLIONS of lines of romantic history have been written about the men and women who have lived in the great white mansion on Pennsylvania avenue. But the story is still being told.

Latest literary effort to trace the fascinating pattern of 150 years of living within the walls of the Executive Mansion, is a soon-to-be-published volume entitled "White House Pageant." The book, commemorative of the building's sesquicentennial, has been prepared under the direction of officials of the Treasury Department and the White House.

It is primarily a story of the women who have presided at the White House. Against the backdrop of their respective regimes is presented a running record of the courtships, weddings, christenings, brilliant levees, ceremonial banquets—and family tragedies that have occurred in the colorful history of the house.

The record is brought completely up to date—for the first time in book form—with the childhood courtship of Harry and Bess Truman in Independence, Mo., and incidents of their family life with daughter Margaret in the White House.

Young Harry's Courtship Told

WE ARE told, for instance, in the forthcoming volume of young Harry's difficulty in obtaining his first date with the future First Lady, a matter of acute boyhood reticence. Then of his ultimate success in the matter when he delivered a homemade pie to the mother of the schoolmate he so admired. Miss Bess asked him to "come in", and thus the romance was begun.

Months of research on the part of several contributing editors went into the preparation of the volume. Data was compiled from books, magazines, diaries, original letters, newspaper files and other sources in the library of Congress, the District Library, and the library of Georgetown University.

Here are a few of the informative highlights:

The first wedding in the White House was during President Madison's administration, when Miss Todd—a relative of

ABIGAIL ADAMS
. . . first White House hostess

Mrs. Madison—became the bride of Representative John G. Jackson of Virginia.

Elizabeth Tyler, 19-year-old daughter of President and Mrs. Tyler, was the first girl to be married in the East Room. The bridegroom was William Waller of Williamsburg, Va.

First wedding in the famed Blue Room was that of John Quincy Adams, jr., and Miss Edith Johnson.

Banished Wine From White House

LUCY WEBB HAYES was the first college graduate to become First Lady. She banished wine from the White House table and inaugurated the use of growing plants in the decorations for all formal social occasions. At the White House celebration of her silver wedding anniversary, Mrs. Hayes wore the same satin dress and slippers she had worn on her wedding day. Such an accomplishment is not recorded for any other First Lady!

Dolly Madison's turbans are reported to have cost $1000 a year, and she delighted in wearing conspicuous colors and rich costumes.

After the burning of the White House by the British, the Madisons lived for a time in a Washington home (which is still standing) in which two beautiful lovelorn girls had died by sucide. Newspapers of the period report that each night at 11 o'clock bells would jangle in every room of the house, pictures would fall from the walls, and a piercing feminine shriek would sound forth. (Hardly a fitting abode for the social-minded Dolly.)

Mrs. Madison's farewell levee was given on the night of Valentine's Day, 1816, in the temporary White House which still stands at 1901 Pennsylvania ave. nw., now occupied on the ground floor by a drug store. It was the most pretentious social event witnessed in the United States up to that time.

Tyler Proposed At Reception

PRESIDENT TYLER, a widower, proposed to 17-year-old Julia Gardiner at a White House reception. The startled young lady gave her "No, no, no!" such emphasis by shaking her head that she whisked the tassel of her crimson schoolgirl cap in the President's face.

Mr. Tyler was mortified but refused to accept defeat. He later composed a serenade beginning with the words "Sweet Lady, Awake" in her honor, and, in due course she became his bride in a ceremony in New York's Church of the Ascension. It was the first wedding of a President in office.

When beautiful Frances Folsom delivered her valedictory address at Wells College, Aurora, N. Y., in June, 1885, a superb bouquet of red roses from President Grover Cleveland was one of her gifts. The following year they were married in the Blue Room, the bride magnificently gowned. Just as the closing words of the blessing were spoken, there came from the Navy Yard the booming of the Presidential salute of 21 guns, announcing the news to the city. Whereupon, virtually all the church bells in Washington rang out in unison, proclaiming the first marriage of a President in the White House.

But other White House ladies were concerned with matters other than romance:

Abigail Adams, first wife of a President to preside at the new White House, found it a barren and cold residence. "The house is habitable", she wrote, "but there is not a single apartment furnished. We have not the least fence, yard or other convenience without—and the great unfinished audience room I make a drying room of, to hang up the clothes in.

DOLLY MADISON
. . . her turbans were fabulous

"And, surrounded by forests, can you believe that wood is not to be had, because people cannot be found to cut and cart it!"

Mrs. Harrison Top House Cleaner

MRS. BENJAMIN HARRISON was probably the most conscientious housewife. She did a thorough cleaning job from cellar to garret, discarding the accumulations of years, and secured "cleanliness, order and system."

Mrs. Fillmore was appalled to find not a single book in the entire White House!

Mrs. Polk was her husband's private secretary while he was in office, the only First Lady ever to have filled that position.

Mrs. McKinley, a semi-invalid while in the White House, knitted more than 3500 pairs of slippers for women and children in hospitals.

Mrs. Taft was the First Lady to ride with her husband in an Inaugural parade.

Mrs. Coolidge frequently delighted guests with her famous homemade blueberry pies.

"White House Pagaent" is now in the process of printing at the Internal Revenue annex of the Treasury, and will be issued at an early date. A specially bound volume will be presented during the sesquicentennial year to President and Mrs. Truman.

Miss Walkendifer to Wed

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Vincent G. Walkendifer of the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Ann, to Walter Moroz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Moroz of North Wilbraham, Mass.

Miss Walkendifer attended the University of Maryland and Strayer College for Secretaries Her fiance, a Navy veteran, was graduated from the Capitol Radio Engineering Institute. The wedding will take place September 16.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Still Waiting in Vain for Man to Propose, Girl's Health Is Waning, Due to Suspense, After Nearly Four Years; What Blocks Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For 3½ years I've known that my one purpose in life is to get Phil to propose. He is 29 and I am 23. I have waited so long, and in such suspense, that it is impairing my health.

Why does he look at me so lovingly, why does he contrive opportunities to hold my hand, why does he caress my personal belongings such as purse and gloves, why does he discuss marriage, children, religion, etc., with me, and then never ask me out?

He is a man of good character and nice personality and he has a good job. I couldn't ask for a more sincere and wonderful fellow. From our discussions I gather that he has had a sheltered life and comes from a fine and closely knit family, with whom he spends most of his leisure.

Phil and I see and talk to each other for hours several times a week, whenever our jobs make it possible to meet. Our mutual friends are confused by his failure to ask me out. I've resolved to confront him with this, but my shyness keeps me from doing so.

I feel sure he can tell from my actions and occasional remarks that I care for him; and I am very sure he cares for me. But what's blocking him? Could it be his family? I've never been able to understand what goes on in a man's mind, so I've decided to ask you about Phil, hoping you'll be able to penetrate the mystery of his behavior. C. C.

Girl and Hero Seem Much Alike

DEAR C. C.: It occurs to me that you and Phil are two of a kind, in the sense that neither of you has had any dating experience. He doesn't know how to get started, and you don't know how to usher him into the traces in a cordially casual way for a trial run, which is the fetching technique of the successful "man's woman."

Such inexperience and uneasy gaucherie as you two demonstrate seems more appropriate to 12-year-olds than to persons your age, as I suppose you know. And because each wants to seem "super" in the other's eyes, both of you tense up in nervous attempts to act as nonchalant and sophisticated as Lunt and Fontanne, after you've sought each other out for another exchange of random words.

This flustered striving to sail under false colors keeps your association on a stilted puzzling plane for both. It blocks spontaneity, which is the life of sentiment. You don't promote any psychological attunement to each other. There is no silent communication, more impelling than words, on the subjective level of thought-feeling, such as usually precedes an outspoken bid for social companionship between boy and girl, or man and woman.

Does She Know He's Eligible?

IN SHORT, I think Phil's behavior is probably no more mysterious than yours. Just as you are too shy to voice your dating aspirations outright, so is he too timid, self conscious and defensive to take a chance on being brushed off, perhaps.

In offering this interpretation of your mutual difficulty, I am assuming that he is a bachelor, of course; for surely you can't have wasted four years waiting for a wolf in sheep's clothing to propose marriage. You simply couldn't be that much of a goose; or could you?

For advice, if you have reliable information about Phil's background, sufficient to assure you that he is a decent rational person, eligible to marry, then don't mark time waiting for him to ask you out.

Take the intiative. Ask him for a date; and if he sidesteps the first invitation, try again, and again and again.

Here is where your interested mutual friends can help. Instead of shaking their heads at his aloofness, they should join you in planning various projects that afford graceful excuse for tapping him to be your escort or special guest. M. H.

Mailbag Produces Evidence That D. C. Folks Aren't Repining With the Heat; They Want to Go Places, Do Things

DEAR ANNE:

Could you please give me all the information you have about Eugene, Ore., where the University of Oregon is located? I am interested in all of the usual things, such as schools, cost of living, availability of rental housing, cost of buying a house, etc. E. B. C.
Alexandria, Va.

Folk who call Eugene home, sweet home tell us that their town has experienced a phenomenal population increase in the past decade—40 percent. The result is a tight housing situation and overcrowded schools. The state school system is reported to be up-to-date and excellent in its methods, but for reasons too complex to explain here, there has been delay in new building to meet the need in certain areas.

More cheerful is the report that living costs in Eugene tend to run lower than in Washington, D. C., although this is based on impression rather than statistics. Real estate costs have risen remarkably, but were fairly low to start with, so that houses within reasonable price range may possibly still be found. For more specific information, you might write the Eugene Chamber of Commerce. Before making a cross-country move, it's often best to have a real estate agent activated at the other end.

DEAR ANNE:

I have an old rug I use on the back porch. The nap is all worn off and it's faded, but the threads are still good. I wondered if I could paint it just to freshen it up. What kind of paint should I use? Mrs. De B., Washington.

You could turn the rug over and paint the back. I believe this would be more practical than trying to paint the right side where a little of the nap is probably still left. The results would give you something that resembles a summer fiber rug.

Paint it in the same manner as you would paint such a rug, either with awning paint or flat floor paint thinned with turpentine. (Use one fourth as much turpentine as floor paint.) Clean the rug thoroughly first with broom or vacuum cleaner. It would also be a good idea to shampoo it with rug shampoo and a stiff brush, as dirt and grease on the surface will keep the paint from penetrating. Work the paint in thoroughly with a stiff brush.

DEAR ANNE:

Do any schools in Washington or nearby offer self-improvement courses for early teen-agers? What is the price, length of course, and could it or part of it be taken by correspondence? I am interested in a course contributing to dress, style, figure, poise and confidence. XYZ, Washington.

A school of modeling here does offer a special course in self-improvement for teenagers during the summer. Usually, lessons are spaced at once a week for two months, but can be completed in shorter time. However, the instruction must be taken in the studio. Tuition is $50. All of the points you stress are covered in the course except "dress." For this, you would have to take the adult course. Further information can be obtained by calling Sterling 8630.

DEAR ANNE:

I am interested in joining an amateur play group, but do not know the names of any, nor how they may be contacted. Could you supply a list of those here in the District? M. G. B., Washington.

Washington and vicinity boasts about 54 amateur theatrical groups when the season's in full tilt, but most of these have discontinued their activities for the summer. Those still in action for the most part concentrate on one-act plays during the dog-days. Among those with summer projects are the Roosevelt Masquers (Miss Pauline Oak, Dupont 9052), and the Fairlington Players, (Mrs. F. Deen Evans, Temple 0440). Out from town, but seeking troupers, is the McLean Summer Theater (Tommy Brent, Elmwood 510). The American Theater Wing (Dupont 0381) is a hard-working group which presents plays and vaudeville programs all year round to entertain patients in military hospitals of the vicinity.

DEAR ANNE:

Could you suggest a way to remove blue permanent ink from the front of a man's white shirt? The stain hasn't been touched since it was made as I didn't know what methods would be the most effective. M. H., Arlington.

Even though that "permanent" label is a formidable one, you've got the advantage here of the cloth being white. First, I'd rinse out as much of the surplus ink as possible in luke-warm water.

Next, use milk, since this is simple and easy to do. (Not always advisable on colored materials, though, as it can affect the color.) Place stained portion in saucer of milk and soak for a day or two, changing as milk becomes stained. Now wash thoroughly in lukewarm soapsuds.

If the spot still shows, you'll have to use a stronger bleach. You can use the ink eradicators, sold at stationery stores. Follow the directions of the manufacturer. Or use oxalic acid, mixing 3 tablespoons oxalic crystals in 1 pint water. Soak stain a second or so in this solution, rinse in warm water, then in water to which a few drops of concentrated ammonia have been added.

DEAR ANNE:

I have three place settings of sterling silver, but I know I shall never be able to complete a set. Does the company allow one to "trade in" used sterling for a set of silver plate? Or do you have any suggestions for working this "conversion?" Mrs. Y. J. B., Washington.

No, I don't know of any company that will effect a trade for you. Wonder if there's a reader who does? There is the Silver State Exchange, Denver, Col.' that specializes principally in out-of-date silver patterns. You might write and see if they would be interested in buying these three settings from you. Or you might advertise them for sale in the classified columns of The Washington Post.

Miss Sarah Zantzinger Makes Debut at Tea

MR. AND MRS. RICHARD ZANTZINGER entertained at tea yesterday at their home in Upper Marlboro, Md., to introduce their daughter, Miss Sarah Daingerfield Zantzinger to their friends from Washington and nearby Maryland.

Chatham Graduate

The debutante was graduated this month from Chatham Hall, Chatham, Va., and will enter Bryn Mawr in the fall. She will make her debut at the Bachelors Cotillion in Baltimore next December. On December 29 her parents will give a dance for her at the Chevy Chase Club.

Yesterday, Miss Zantzinger wore an ankle length gown of blue nylon net with full pleated skirt and tight off-shoulder bodice. She carried a cluster of red roses. Mrs. Zantzinger's gown was pale blue organdy with a flower pattern of deper blue and with it she wore white orchids.

Classmates Are Guests

Classmates of the debutante who are her guests for the weekend and who assisted at the tea were Miss Ellen West Childs of New Hampshire; Miss Cynthia Murray of Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; Miss Molly Weare of Mount Kisco, N. Y.; Miss Kathleen Herty of Bethlehem, Pa., and Miss Alice Jane Davis of Maryland.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Linton Matthews of Philadelphia, longtime friends of the Zantzingers, arrived to be weekend guests. Mrs. Matthews was among those assisting the hostess at the tea table and others were Mrs. Charles Marbuy, Mrs. William Roberts, Mrs. Zantzinger's sister, Mrs. Benjamin Dunlap Hill, jr., and Mrs. Otway Zantzinger, jr., sister-in-law of Mr. Zantzinger.

Ethiopia's First Ambassador

Diplomat Has Served Nation in Many Fields

This is the thirty-third in a series of articles on embassy homes, hosts, and hostesses.

By Elizabeth Maguire

ETHIOPIA'S first ambassador to the United States, Ras Haile Selassie Imru, qualified himself for diplomatic responsibilities by a long career of civil and military service to his country.

The governor of three provinces of Ethiopia, when war came he was commander-in-chief of the army which struggled against Italy's forces. For nearly seven years he was a prisoner of the enemy.

After coming to Washington in May, 1946, as minister from his country, he subsequently assumed the role of ambassador in September, 1949, when the legation was raised to an embassy.

Physical Courage And Gentleness

The Ambassador's individuality is an unusual mixture of great physical courage and gentleness and he has charm and imagination. His fortitude was well tested during the war when he was held prisoner for three years on the Island of Lipari, three years in Ponza, and eight months in Calabria. He was liberated by the British Eighth Army in 1942. His many decorations include Commandeur de la Legion d'Honneur and the Cordon de l'Ordre de Leopold.

But when he is free of his varied state responsibilities, the Ambassador had hobbies in several fields. He likes to sketch and paint in water colors and he is an amateur photographer as well.

But his most arduous pastime is hunting big game in primitive regions of Ethiopia where few white men have ever been. Often he has emerged from the jungles with a bag of giraffes, lions, elephants, gazelles and related denizens brought down by his marksmanship.

Seven Daughters And One Son

The Ambassador and Mme. Imru have eight children—seven daughters and one son. Mme. Imru, a lady of quiet charm and old-fashioned domesticity, has her time well-occupied tending the interests of her ample family. Correspondence alone stacks up considerably, as two married daughters are in Addis Ababa, as well as a very young daughter. Two other girls are in schools in London, and the son is at Oxford. Ruth and Judith, age 23 and 20, live here at the embassy.

The embassy on Kalorama rd. is a pretty town house neatly furnished in shades of green and beige. Of interest are a few oil paintings of Ethiopian scenes by Perry Fellows. One gives a view of the mountainous plateaus, which make up a large part of the Ethiopian terrain. Another shows a group of native huts, called tukals, made of brick and thatched roofs. A third scene if of the cliffs along the Abbai River which flows into the Blue Nile. Lake Tana, source of the Blue Nile, is in the northern part of Ethiopia.

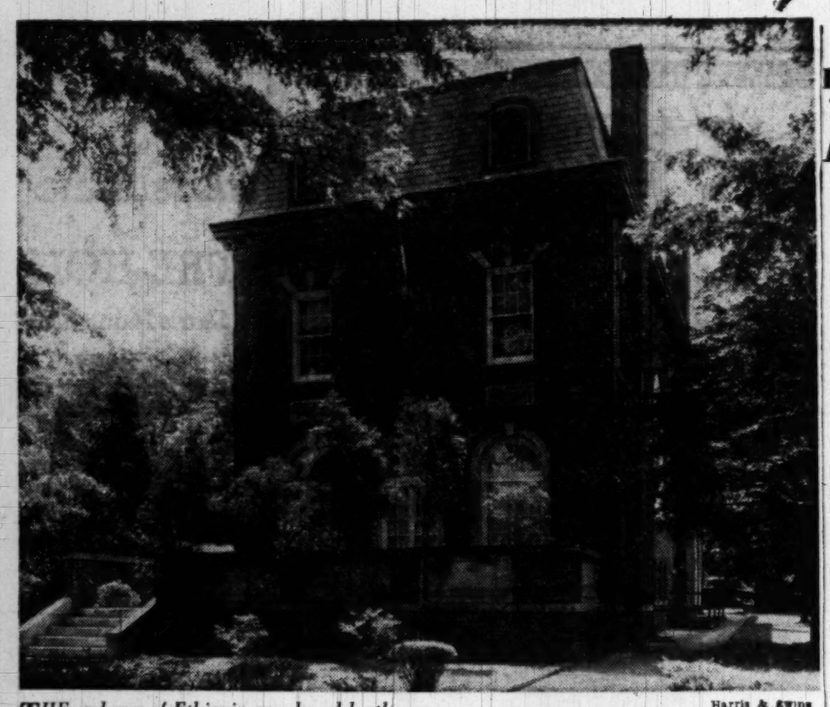
Like most Ethiopians, the Ambassador and his family are of the Aryan race and adhere to the Coptic branch of Christianity. They speak Amharic in the family, and French, Italian and English when abroad.

Imrus' Home In Addis Ababa

Their home is in Addis Ababa, a town of eucalyptus-covered hills. Addis Ababa means "new flower," and flowers are in bloom there the year round. Christmas Day in Addis Ababa is celebrated on January 7, some say because it took the three Wise Men so long to get to Ethiopia with news of the birth of Jesus. Others just say it's the Julian calendar.

Harris & Ewing

THE Ethiopian Ambassador, H. S. Imru, is a cousin of the emperor of Ethiopia. He came to Washington in 1936



Harris & Ewing

THE embassy of Ethiopia, purchased by the Ethiopian government in 1944, is an attractive red brick structure, surrounded by hedges. It is located on Kalorama road, near the embassies of France and Portugal

RAISIN HONEY COOKIES

Ingredients: 1 cup seedless raisins, 1 egg, 2/3 cup honey, 2/3 cup granulated sugar, ½ cup shortening (melted), 1¾ cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda, 2 tablespoons milk, 2 cups quick-cooking oats.

Method: Rinse raisins and drain. Beat egg lightly and blend in honey, sugar and shortening. Sift together flour, cinnamon, salt, baking powder and soda. Blend into egg-honey mixture. Blend in raisins. Add milk, then oats, mixing well. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheet. Bake in moderate (350 F.) oven about 15 minutes. Makes about 3½ dozen 2-inch cookies.

Spice for Summer— A Gay Velveteen Hat

With hats as tiny as they are now, you can wear as startling colors as you want. For instance, the new little velveteen berets and caps that have been brought out by the smart milliners come in a series of very gay bright colors—coral, sulphur yellow, orange, and violet—to mention only a few of the newest and brightest.

I like them enormously to wear with either black or stark white—for any kind of costume from a black chiffon cocktail dress to a white linen suit. These little soft velveteen hats are wonderful travelers too, as you can pack them in almost no space at all.

Vets Swamp VA for Loans Under New Law

By Robert P. Jordan

A LITTLE more than two months ago the Housing Act of 1950 became law. Since then, the Veterans Administration regional office at 1825 H st. nw., has been deluged with requests for GI home loan benefits.

The new law, as VA personnel will testify, has made it easier for veterans to become home owners. That particular bit of intelligence has made the rounds of veterans as fast as wartime scuttlebutt.

And the servicemen of a few short years ago are checking it out. As witness:

Over in the loan guaranty division of the regional office, incoming telephone calls and visits have been halted from 8 a. m. to 1 p. m. The reason? To permit the staff to cut down the considerable backlog of requests for GI home loan benefits.

Right now, for instance, it takes up to two weeks for a veteran to get his certificate of eligibility for VA home loan insurance. "It used to take only five or six days—before the storm," one official said yesterday.

That isn't all. Once the veteran has the certificate, he turns it over to the real estate agent for the house he wants. The agent writes up the documents involved in the sale and sends them back to the regional office for approval.

VA's okay used to be forthcoming within 48 hours. Now it's five or six working days before the documents get through the mill.

Then there's the appraising end of the business. It's a problem to get a house appraised in short order because of the backlog. The appraisal slowdown—because of the number of requests—will continue for some time, VA admitted.

Still Catching Up

THE loan guaranty staff gradually is getting back on a current basis. Phone inquiries and requests for certificates now are handled by the VA contact division at 1825 H st. nw. in Room 118.

Since the start of 1950, more than 5000 veterans have applied for GI home loans. More than 2000 requests for certificates have been made per month recently. In March, 1949, around 300 applications were made—the low point of the year. But only 800 were made at the October 1949 peak.

In all, nearly 24,000 Greater Washington veterans have obtained loans since the loan guaranty program got underway in 1944. The total of their loans comes to 200 million dollars.

Easing of credit brought about by the new law, plus increased demand for housing, already is having a further inflationary effect on house prices, said Morgan B. Callahan, loan guaranty officer of the regional office.

He pointed out that the increase in GI guarantee from $2000 to $4000 when the GI Bill was first amended in 1946 was a contributing factor in the rise of prices then. A similar situation is on hand, he said.

"The only way we can protect veterans is in keeping a close watch on the values set on houses by VA-approved appraisers," he asserted.

T. B. King, chief of the VA's loan guaranty service, is on record as promising that "VA appraisal staffs will be exhorted to exert a strong resistance to the anticipated upward pressures on the reasonable value lid."

"VA is cautioning veterans to go slow and to be careful in considering the purchase of a home in the face of rising prices," Callahan declared.

The agency is emphasizing that most veterans have seven years—until July 25, 1957—to use their GI guarantee, and that conditions may be more favorable when the demand for housing eases, the official said.

Even so, VA recognizes that many veterans need housing now, Callahan observed, and "a large percentage of them will be using their GI loan benefits in the near future."

Changes in Law

HERE IS what the liberalized 1950 housing law does:

1. Raises GI guaranty limits from 50 percent of a loan with a $4000 maximum to 60 percent with a $7500 top guarantee for veterans who have not previously used the benefits.

2. Extends the period over which GI home loans may be repaid from 25 to 30 years.

3. Continues the so-called secondary market for GI loans by giving additional funds to the Federal National Mortgage Association for the purchase of GI loans from private lending agencies.

4. Provides for elimination of combination VA-FHA loans. VA has announced a schedule that calls for eliminating these loans in four stages by October 20.

5. Authorizes VA to make a limited amount of direct loans to veterans in areas where the four percent financing it permits is not available from private sources.

6. Extends GI loans to widows—not since remarried—of veterans who died as the result of service or service disabilities.

7. Makes certain minimum construction requirements mandatory for housing started after June 20 for the property to qualify under a GI loan.

It is still too early to say where and how many direct loans will be made by VA, according to Callahan. This program by law will not begin until July 20.

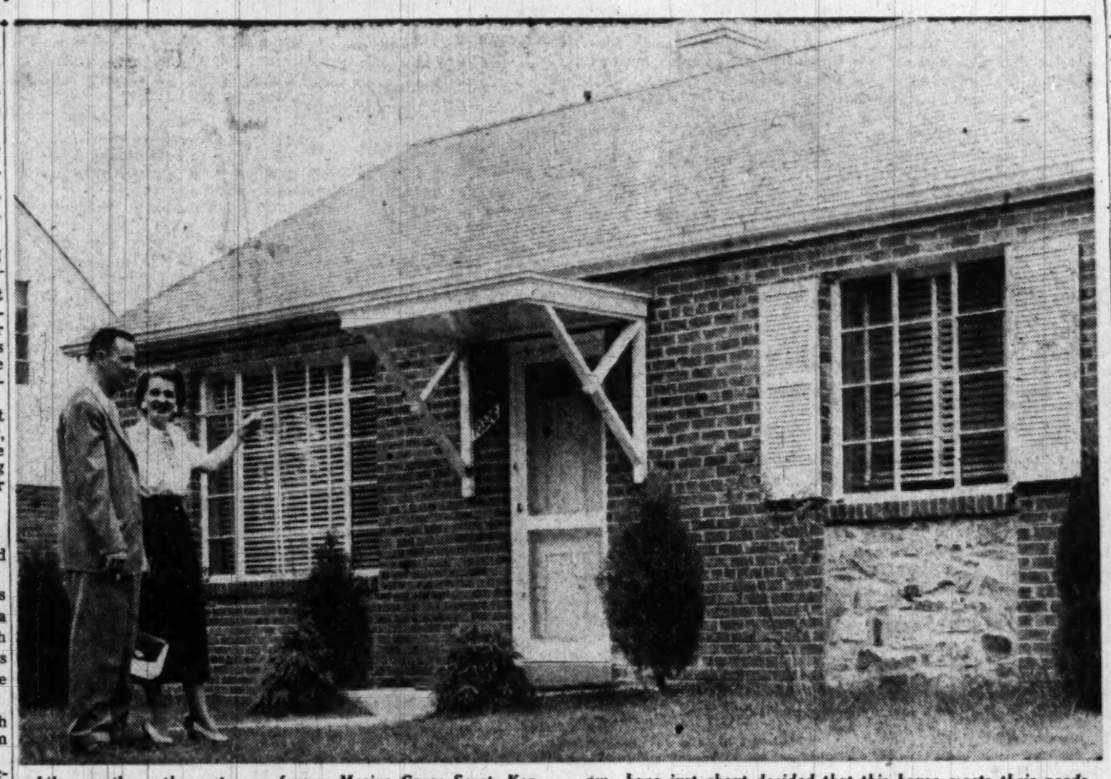
"However," he said, "few if any direct loans likely will be made here. Four percent financing is considered generally available here.

Tips for Vets

TO VETERANS who want to buy a home with GI financing, Callahan addressed these pointers:

"Find the house you want and that you can afford. Then locate a lender to make the GI loan—many sales agents can direct you to such a lender.

"When you apply for the loan, submit your honorable discharge certificate to the lender. After that, the lender may apply to VA for your certificate of eligibility, or you may apply directly to VA for it."



Like countless other veterans, former Marine Corps Sergt. Kenneth W. Arris wants to become a home owner. After a long look at what's on the market over Greater Washington, he and Mrs. Arris, both 33, and apartment dwellers at 3621 39th st. nw., have just about decided that this house meets their needs. Offered by Weaver Bros., Inc., it's in the Parkwood subdivision of Kensington, Md. Arris will seek VA home loan insurance to finance the house

Because he's a veteran (eight years in the Marine Corps), Arris is eligible for GI Home Loan benefits. Here, he and Mrs. Arris are finding out at the Veterans' Administration regional office, 1825 H st. nw., how to go about getting a certificate of eligibility. Their informant is Mrs. Annye Weldon (left). VA is swamped with requests for certificates

Development Of Barcroft to Begin in July

DEVELOPMENT of the 680-acre Lake Barcroft tract in Fairfax County is about to begin, it was learned yesterday.

Main offices of Lake Barcroft Estates, Inc., have been opened at 711 14th st. nw., and final plans for the development are nearing completion.

Construction work is expected to begin early next month on the first of several private beaches to be created along the five-mile lakefront.

Establishment of the office was announced by Joseph V. Barger, vice president in charge of operations. The firm, he said, is answering letters of inquiry on a priority basis in the order received.

First portion of the large tract to be offered to the public will be the area between Columbia Pike and the southern shore of Lake Barcroft, it was announced. Home-

Home Boom Means A Gray Market

HOUSE prices are going up again. The building boom, breaking all records this year, has created shortages of various materials to a point where gray markets are developing.

Some materials have become so scarce they are being rationed in several communities.

A national survey by the Associated Press shows that rough lumber has advanced from 10 to 50 percent since the first of the year in various sections of the country. Lumber accounts for a fifth to a half of the cost of the average house.

Construction costs in general are rising so rapidly that many builders frankly say they are worrying about possible "buyers' strikes." The National Associationof Home Builders has warned its members that "costs may increase to the point of affecting sales."

The number of new houses put under construction in the first four months of this year was 53 percent greater than for the parallel period of last year—and 1949 set an all-time high.

Rumors Everywhere

MOST observers trace the rising costs and shortages directly to the abnormal demand created by this boom, but in many places wild rumors are current.

In New Jersey, for example, many supply men blame the lumber shortage on "tremendous Government buying on the West Coast." But Oregon lumber producers report there is no Government stockpiling.

Upstate New York dealers blame it all on Army shipments to Alaska. But the Uuited States Engineers' procurement chief in St. Louis says a program for buying lumber is just being set up.

Pennsylvania attributes the shortage to floods in the south and to increased freight rates. But the Southern Pine Association says demand over production is the only answer—that it knows of no Government buying.

A Wisconsin lumber yard official cites the Federal public housing program as a cause of the shortage. But the Housing Institute in New York points out that although plans are being drawn, no actual construction is yet under way on the Highest Cost Ever

Costs Rising, Some Supplies Scarce Here

WHAT is happening over the country in the way of price advances is happening in Greater Washington.

Construction costs, which have been rising steadily since last August, now stand at the highest level here in history, E. H. Boeckh and Associates, 1406 M st. nw., valuation enginers, report these findings as of June 1:

Based on the amount of home building a dollar bought from 1926-1929, it now takes nearly $2.35 for the same amount of frame residential construction, and more than $2.34 for a similar amount of brick building.

The Boeckh cost index hit its lowest point since 1938 last August: 216.4 for frame home construction, and 218.3 for brick construction. It has climbed from then until now. The index stood at 220.1 for frame and 220.5 for brick last January.

Shortages are being felt here in certain supplies and materials, according to several builders, and price increases have come with the scarcity.

"Bricks," one builder declared, "are now very scarce." Last January, he paid "about $30 to $32" for every 1000 bricks. Now, he said, the same amount costs about sites in the northern Virginia community—located between Columbia and Leesburg pikes about seven miles from downtown Washington—will range upward in size from one-fourth acre.

Barger said the firm is "planning to create . . . one of the most desirable residential developments in this part of the country."

"The unique combination of a close-to-Washington location with unsurpassed natural facilities for swimming, sailing and fishing will give property owners a perfect opportunity for gracious, year-'round country living," he said.

The Barcroft property was purchased last March from the Alexandria Water Co., which used the fresh water lake as a reservoir. Opening of new water company facilities at Occoquan, Va., make the reservoir unecessary.

Fifty years ago only 348,000 people worked for the Federal Government. Now the figure is more than two million.

Home Boom Creates Shortages, Higher Prices

new public housing projects.

Many districts blame lumber exports. But the West Coast Lumbermen's Association says the export trend is downward and Department of Commerce figures show exports sharply decreasing for fir—the big export lumber.

Signs that the situation will get worse before it can get better are seen in many quarters. In Oregon lumber circles there is a feeling that retail yards, in some instances, have not passed on increases in wholesale lumber prices as promptly as they occurred. These observers explain that higher wholesale prices will rule as soon as stocks on hand are exhausted.

Home Prices Up

THE Dow Service Building Reports in New York recently completed a study to determine how much of a price increase for houses can be justified by higher costs. It found that a boost of more than $600 was warranted on the $10,000 house of three months ago.

Home builders have been caught in a squeeze. Committed by contracts to produce houses at prices stated several months ago, they have been obliged to absorb the higher costs. The result is that the next groups of houses undertaken will show rises of 5 to 10 percent.

A Baltimore builder reports that he will have to raise his $6600 house to $7000. Buffalo builders estimate that houses this summer will average 5 to 10 percent above last fall. Washington State has already encountered rises of that amount.

North Carolina builders say cost increases of 5 to 8 percent since January will soon be reflected in house prices. Oklahoma and Texas prices are rising. Dallas reports some suburban land prices up as much as 200 percent.

Some prices in New Jersey have advanced $300 to $500 on $9500 and $10,000 houses. On Long Island, N. Y., where a $17,000 house has been upped $1000, some lumber dealers are scrapping their previous commitments. Leonard Frank, head of the Long Island Home Builders' Institute, has warned suppliers to police their industry against gray market tactics.

"Unless immediate action is taken to stabilize the situation," Frank said, "many builders will be forced out of business, countless building trades workmen will be thrown out of employment and thousands of families will be forced to forego home purchases."

Failure to keep wholesalers and distributors in line price-wise, he said, may result in cooperative buying by builders direct from the manufacturers.

Gray Markets Found

THE spread of gray market practices has been noted in many States.

Oklahoma calls it a black market, with small truckers scouring the countryside and going even into Texas to obtain supplies. Sheet rock, scarce in most sections of the country, is bringing 50 percent above list prices in Oklahoma's gray market.

Texas, reporting a definite gray market, finds sheet rock the real problem. A demand described as "terrific" has stripped dealers' supplies and the gray market is getting "all the traffic will bear."

Minnesota lumbermen tell of being obliged to make "tie-in" deals—taking items they do not need. Iowa supply firms admit they have opportunities to sell plaster board at gray market prices, but are not taking advantage of it.

Detroit reports pirating in expert masonry crews with wages of $3 to $4 an hour offered, while gray markets in short items are expected at any time.

San Francisco observers say "all sales do not seem clean" in plywood, another scarce material. Plywood is rationed in Memphis. Cinder and concrete clocks are being rationed in Maryland. Cement in Detroit.

The Associated Press survey of 36 major regions shows lumber prices up sharply in all 36 areas; plywood scarce, very tight or rationed in 24 areas; sheet rock varying from scarce to "impossible to obtain" in 16 regions; gray market evidence in 20 regions and labor short in nine areas.

$2 more—"when you can get them."

There has also been a marked advance, it was reported, in the prices of lumber, millwork and plumbing. Some large-scale builders are buying thousands of dollars worth of materials now in anticipation of further cost increases and shortages. Lumber, it was said, is becoming scarcer.

The Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington has a study of the situation in progress, according to James W. Pearson, executive director. It is centering around the effect of price advances and material scarcities on building plans in the latter part of 1950, he said.

No voluntary rationing of supplies apparently is going on in Greater Washington. A couple of builders said, however, that there are signs of a gray market.

"The material is available," one said, "if you pay a little more than the market price."

Baseboard Heat To Be Used in Miller Homes

Future homes built at Reserve Hill, Arlington subdivision under construction by John H. Miller, Jr., & Bro., will be available with baseboard radiant heating installations.

A spokesman for the firm said that public response to the heating system, which has been on exhibition in the company's model home at the corner of Little Falls rd. and N. Florida st., has been good.

The baseboard heating unit has the advantage of being placed so that it does not take up floor and wall space, thus permitting free placement of furniture.

Brick and Tile Production Dips Slightly from 1949 Levels

PRODUCTION of brick and tile during the first quarter of 1950 continued high, though dipping a little from 1949 levels due to inclement weather, according to the W. J. Goodwin, jr., president of the Structural Clay Products Institute.

Output of unglazed brick during first three months of this year was off about one percent from the near record 1949 production for the same period, Goodwin said. Shipments of brick during this quarter were up 13 percent over last year, he added, indicating strong demand when the building season started in the spring.

"Glazed tile production was 10 percent below that of the first three months in 1949, again due to weather conditions. Production estimates since the start of the spring building season indicate that total 1950 structural clay products production will approach that of 1948, when more than seven billion brick and tile were produced for a post-war record," Goodwin said.

Tank Saves Heating Fuel

Use of a tempering tank installed between the water meter and the water heater will save fuel in the heating of water for kitchen, laundry and bathroom, according to the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau. The tank brings water to room temperature before it enters the water heater.

May Change Home Design

Combination Heating, Air Conditioning Unit Announced

A COMBINATION heating plant and air-conditoner that may radically alter present home design and living conditions is going into volume production at once, according to W. Paul Jones, president of Servel, Inc.

In announcing production of the gas-operated unit, Jones asserted that "air-conditioning can be included in homes in the $15,000 to $20,000 bracket without extra overall cost or sacrificing a single element necessary to better living."

Obviously, something has to go. Here's what gives, as explained by the executive:

"It's done by eliminating single-purpose heating systems which remain idle all summer, screened porches, screens for doors and windows, attic and kitchen air exhaust fans, and windows which open and close."

Rapid extension of natural gas lines is expected to expand the market for both the three-ton home unit and the five-ton commercial unit, Jones said.

The unit operates on an absorption refrigeration principle, with no moving parts in the cooling or heating systems. Original costs of the home heating-cooling unit vary with local wage rates, type of construction and location, he said.

Jones estimated that a unit designed for a new six-to-nine-room house of average construction and modern design would cost between $3200 and $5000, including installation charges.

FHA Observes 16th Birthday On Tuesday

With FHA's sixteenth anniversary coming up, Commissioner Franklin D. Richards has written a brief summary of the administration's aims and accomplishments. Here it is:

By Franklin D. Richards
FHA Commissioner

THE Federal Housing Administration will observe its sixteenth birthday Tuesday with the record of having enabled over 12 million people to improve their housing conditions.

The sixteenth anniversary of the administration comes at a time when all volume records for home building are being broken. This high level of new home construction is a sharp contrast to the depression days of 1934 when the FHA was established by passage of the National Housing Act.

Despite the striking differences in national conditions in 1934 and 1950, the three chief aims of the National Housing Act are as timely today as sixteen years ago:

1. To encourage improvement in housing conditions.

2. To provide an adequate home financing system to make suitable housing accommodations available for American families.

3. To have the insured mortgage system exercise a stabilizing influence in the mortgage and real estate markets.

Through the years these objectives have developed into tangible accomplishments. FHA, in 16 years, has insured over 20 billion dollars in ten and a half million property improvement loans, and mortgage loans involving about three million units. All money advanced has been private capital from about 18,000 private lending institutions of the country.

The FHA has paid its operating costs out of income from examination fees and insurance premiums. In addition to supporting every phase of its operations, FHA has authorized and paid dividends of approximately 22 million dollars to borrowers who have paid off their mortgages.

In addition, the administration has built up reserves and capital in the amount of 230 million dollars.

Government Seeks Way to Provide Housing Data

A RELIABLE statistical method of providing an inventory of the nation's housing, at intervals between decennial censuses, will be sought by the Bureau of the Census under the sponsorship of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

Dr. Richard P. Ratcliff, director of HHFA's division of housing research, said that there is recurring need by every segment of the housing industry, by public groups, and by Government for data at intervals within the decade which would indicate important changes and permit a frequent check on the production of adequate housing.

The Census Bureau will provide tested techniques for classifying data and gathering compiling and keeping up-to-date information on:

Occupancy (owner or renter), vacancy, rental value, number of rooms, composition and size of households, and quality of dwellings as to physical condition and selected facilities.

Officials Of Producers' Council Elected

F. W. YOURY has been elected president of the District Chapter of the Producers' Council. He succeeds Shelton E. Reynolds.

Youry, of the Truscon Steel Co., was elected at the golf outing and annual banquet of the group. Other officers chosen were:

W. J. Galbraith, Potomac Electric Power Co., vice president; Ludlow King, Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp., secretary, and R. B. Scott, Otis Elevator Co., treasurer.

Work Starting On Public Housing Units

CONSTRUCTION work on public housing projects is getting under way in the four States under the jurisdiction of the Richmond (Va.) field office of the Public Housing Administration.

According to A. H. Hanson, director of the Richmond office, local housing authorities in Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina and Kentucky are preparing to build nearly 23,000 dwelling units in 50 communities.

These communities, he said, have received temporary loans totaling $4,133,000 to get started. The units are expected to reach a final cost of more than 180 million dollars.

Among the communities are:

Virginia—Alexandria, 250; Bristol, 100; Danville, 500; Hopewell, 75; Newport News, 600; Norfolk, 3200; Portsmouth, 1265; Richmond, 1800, and Roanoke.

West Virginia—Charleston, 500; Huntington, 500; Wheeling, 38, and Martinsburg, 20.

SHE'S WASHING the "Filter-Fan"—a new wrinkle in kitchen ventilation. The ventilator clears away greasy cooking smoke and odors and also catches the grease before it is blown into the ventilating ducts and onto the roof. Thus an end to unsightly grease drippings and a reduced fire hazard. All that is necessary to clean it—after lifting same from its position above the range, of course—is a dip in hot, soapy water. Marvin Manufacturing Co., 3071 E. 12th st., Los Angeles, Calif., makes it.

APPLICATOR for dispensing face and shaving creams from a tube is a special spreader cap that screws on in place of the usual cover. Apply the cream direct from the tube without using the fingers. Tiny holes in the wide dispenser spread cream on smoothly.

PROTECTION from rust marks caused by metal pot cleaners on porcelain sinks is provided by a round plastic holder that fastens to the wall by a rubber suction cup.

TELEPHONE stand of ivory or black plastic holds a square-based phone, memo pad and pencil and has a slot at the back for an address or appointment book. A 1950 calendar is attached under the note pad.

FLEXIBLE Celanese plastic frames on sunglasses can be bent to hold firmly in place instead of sliding down the nose with a move of the head. A thin metal insert in the bows is the secret.

FOOLISH but amusing substance called "Silly Putty" is a sort of plastic clay with amazing properties but no practical use. It stretches like gum if pulled slowly but if pulled quickly, will break. If hit with a hammer, it shatters like glass but the pieces can be pressed back together. When rolled into a ball it can be bounced higher than a rubber ball. When left alone, it melts into a little puddle.

MINIATURE radio no bigger than a handbag is designed to look like a lady's vanity box. It weighs just 4¼ pounds with batteries and may be played in either vertical or horizontal position. The cover conceals antenna and dials.

Most of the above items are not yet on the market. For names and addresses of manufacturers, send this coupon and a 3c stamp to the Home Institute, 230 West 41st st., New York 18, N. Y.

To Beam on Yourself, Let New Lamp Beam on You

EVER GET tired of looking at yourself in the mirror?

If you have, there's a reason for it that may not have occurred to you.

Perhaps the lighting was bad.

This situation has come to the attention of Westinghouse engineers. They have looked into it. Yesterday they announced that their study has produced the answer:

A "luxury" line of fluorescent lamps whose light is more flattering to human complexions.

Nor does this boon of science stop there. It casts a happier light on fabrics and foods, too. It does all this through the action of a new phosphor—the substance that coats the inside of a fluorescent tube.

"Human complexions, foods, fabric and other colored materials all appear more pleasing to the eye," according to Eugene W. Biggs, Westinghouse engineer. "But white surfaces lighted to the same level by (standard) lamps look approximately the same."

The lamps are called the "luxury" line, Biggs candidly avowed, because they cost more, for one reason.

They are known as de luxe cool white and de luxe warm white. Westinghouse has them in production now, it was announced.

Grass Expert Bemoans U. S. Lawns, Tosses Out Tips

By Claire Cox

NEW YORK—What's happening to the Nation's lawns shouldn't happen to a dandelion patch, Paul Williams said yesterday.

Just about everyone likes to look at green sod or play golf on it, and a lot of folk like to cultivate lawns themselves, he said. But just no one knows the first thing about making grass grow greener on his own side of the street.

In fact, he said, the more people do to grass, the browner it gets.

Williams, being an official of the O. M. Scott and Sons Grass Seed Co., Marysville, O., thinks grass is about the most important thing that grows—although he admits that dandelion wine is mighty tasty. He says grass is the oldest form of vegetation in existence and that if it never had sprouted up there wouldn't be any people, cows or other animals.

Well, anyway, there are a lot of things that Williams thinks Pop ought to know before his temper and backbone snap over his annual battle against dandelions, crab grass and other nuisances that blight this country's lawns.

In the first place, he said, most persons mistakenly sow grass seed in the spring, when they should plant it in the fall—as when farmers are putting in the wheat.

"The fall is nature's time to sow seed," Williams explained. "You get a good root development by spring. Hot weather is more of an enemy of good grass than cold weather."

Here's What's Wrong.

HERE ARE some of the other faults of the grass farmer, in Williams' estimation:

1. He doesn't use enough fertilizer.
2. Being a natural-born procrastinator, he doesn't water his lawn early enough or often enough and it turns brown.
3. He cuts his lawn too short. He scalps the grass, when he should keep it about 1½ inches long. The top growth produces energy that keeps the grass green.
4. He uses too much seed. It's just as harmful (for the grass) to have too many blades in a yard as it is for people to overcrowd a room.

Williams said he had more than advice and criticism for grass growers, however. He reported that scientists in laboratories at his grass seed company have developed, after years of research, a powder that kills crab grass, one of the worst enemies of lawn lovers.

You spray it on the lawn, he said, and it kills the weed without harming a single blade of grass.

"It's a fascinating development," he said, "but then, grass is fascinating anyway."

More House, For Less Money Is Present Need

LOWERED housing costs—without a cut in size or quality of the house—is the number one necessity in the home building field today, the Housing and Home Finance Agency contends.

It would be easy to produce lower-priced housing, the agency says, if all builders had to do is to reduce the size and quality of the house.

Generally, size and quality of home construction for families of moderate incomes have been reduced to the minimum for liveability, according to the HHFA.

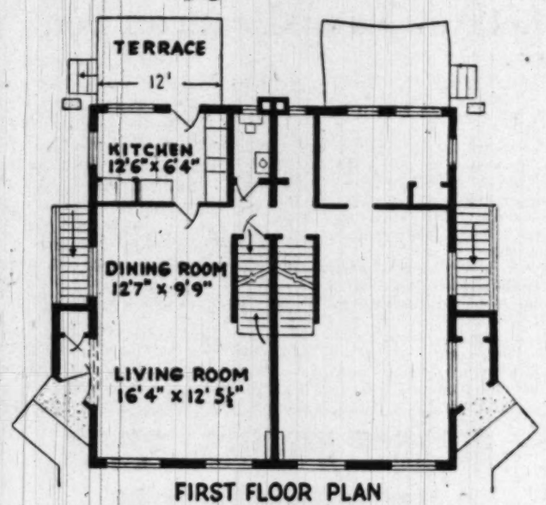
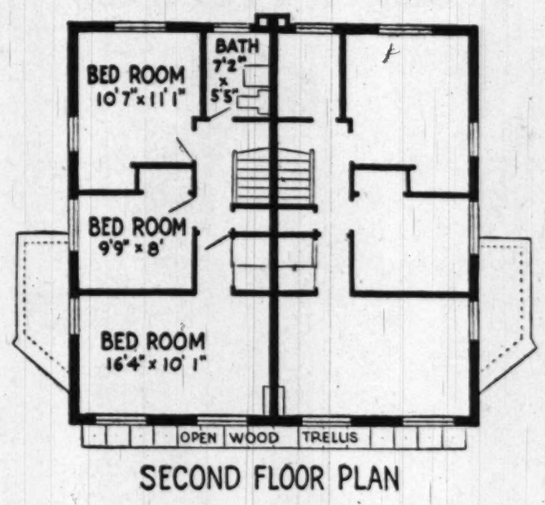
Unusual-Type Semidetached Homes to Be Built



FIRST FLOOR PLAN



SECOND FLOOR PLAN

Here are the first and second floor plans of the semidetached homes now under construction by Morris Pollin & Sons in New Hampshire Estates, on New Hampshire ave. two blocks north of University lane in nearby Maryland. Features include full basement, ½ bath and powder room on first floor, side entrance leading into vestiblue, automatic kitchen, dishwasher, garbage disposal unit

A TOTAL of 264 semidetached houses of unusual design is planned for construction in New Hampshire Estates, Md., with work under way on the first section of 54 units.

This was announced yesterday by Morris Pollin & Sons, builders, and Sidney Z. Mensh & Co., agents. Model home of the development will open at 10 a. m. today.

The dwellings will feature side entrances leading into a vestibule. Another unusual feature is the ½-bath and powder room on the first floor.

Of brick and cinderblock construction, the houses will contain living room and kitchen on the first floor and three bedrooms and a full bath on the second floor.

All dwellings are to be built with basements.

Here are other features of the houses, as outlined by Mensh:

Automatic kitchens, with dishwasher and garbage disposal unit. The kitchens, which will have dinette space, are to contain a sliding-door closet four feet deep.

Concrete porches in the rear; outside entrance to basement; six closets.

The homes, on lots from 30 to 40 feet wide and 125 feet deep, will sell for $13,250, he said.

S. Capitol St. Bridge Opens Up Commercial Area

FROM swampland to a busy business district is the prospect of the area at the south end of the South Capitol st. bridge, according to the first merchant to open his establishment there.

WALL

He is J. W. Wall, whose furniture and mattress factory is at 1026 Sumner rd. se. Wall reports that traffic past his showroom has tripled since opening of the new bridge.

As an indication of the one-time wasteland's future, he points out that property now is up for sale for commercial purposes, with several parcels already sold.

Wall selected his present factory and showroom site after fire destroyed his previous establishment at 1215 22d st. nw., believing that the new bridge would make it an ideal location.

This Week In D. C. Real Estate

SECOND ANNUAL summer jamboree of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington will be held Wednesday at Club Esperanza on the Patuxent. From 11 a. m. on, plenty of events will be taking place, including skeet shooting, swimming, soft ball, a horseshoe tournament, and so forth.

Chairman of the affair is M. C. MacKinnon. Others helping to line things up are J. Garrett Beitzell, Robert Tiffey, Edward R. Carr, Lloyd R. Coates, Dick Mansfield, jr., and Joe Deckman.

VACANT SPACE in the Nation's office buildings is rising, according to J. Clydesdale Cushman, retiring president of the National Association of Builders and Managers.

Over the country, the proportion has reached 2.9 percent, he said. In the District, vacant space is 1.1 percent, reports Charles J. Bauer, executive secretary of the Washington chapter.

MEYER REVITZ, owner and operator of Alban Towers, the apartment hotel at 3700 Massachusetts ave. nw., held a party last week to celebrate the unusual decorating job the building's lobby has just undergone.

The designers, McNab & Wisner, Inc., have struck a happy blend of the traditional and the modern. Panelled mirrors, hurricane wall lights and a large settee have transformed the foyer. Indirect lighting and decorative candlelight create a new atmosphere on entering the building.

FOREMOST CAUSE of mounting real estate taxes is not the assessor, writes Crowell D. Eddy, county assessor for the county of San Diego, Calif.

Increasing realty taxes are mainly brought about by the "continual increase in services rendered by local and Federal governments," Eddy says in the current issue of The Review of the Society of Residential Appraisers.

ANNUAL CONVENTION of the Structural Clay Products Industry will be held in Colorado Springs, Colo. October 23 through 26.

The meeting's highlight will be the first report to the industry from Robert B. Taylor, director of the group's research foundation, which was recently formed to conduct a long-range, $1,250,000 research program.

N. G. FREDERICK, head of Frederick Real Estate, reports there is a good market here in "trading" in existing homes to cover down payments on new ones.

The present building boom, with 90,000 new homes built in Greater Washington since the war's end, will last at least two or three more years at present prices, Frederick predicts. It stands a fine chance of becoming permanent, he adds, if builders can maintain the present high quality standards.

JUNE ISSUE of Home Builders, the monthly organ of the Home Builders Association here, presents a history of the association since its incorporation April 22, 1924.

Also featured is an article by James W. Pearson, executive director of the association, which fires away at "build-it-yourself" books.

A TOTAL OF 50 new members have been admitted to the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers recently, among them Harry Arthur Boswell, of Mount Rainier, Md. Membership now stands at 8720, it is reported.

The institute, an affiliate of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, aims at maintaining high ethical standards within the real estate brokerage profession and expanding the scope of home ownership and property purchase.

ANDREW JENSEN, Arlington County's chief building inspector, reports that permits for 477 structures were issued last month, with a valuation fo $4,099,725.

So far this year, acording to his report, 2695 building permits have been issued. Their value comes to $26,112,765.

THIRTY-SEVENTH annual convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America will be held in Detroit from September 27 to 29.

In conjunction with the sessions, the association will sponsor the eleventh edition of its exhibit of building, industry and services —a national home show for those who finance and build homes.

Vacuum Wells for Negev Desert

Petah Tivka, Israel (AP).—An Israeli engineer claims he can solve the problem of water supplies in the big desert stretches of the Southern Negev by using the sun. J. Marshak said big supplies of salty water can be found by boring wells.

He declared that water can be made useable by enclosing wells in a vacuum. Then, he says, the desert sun would heat the water, producing distillation. The engineer added: "In view of the fact that the Negev is being flooded every winter by large streams of water running down from the mountains and percolating into the loamy soil, there is every reason to believe that the Negev can well subsist by itself on its own superficial and underground water."

Skyscraper Owners Still Short on Depression Losses

HIGH occupancy and increased income of office buildings for the past five years have not yet enabled skyscraper owners to recoup the losses of the preceding 14 years.

This is the conclusion drawn by Dale R. Cowen, an Oregon office building executive, from occupancy, income, and expense figures gathered by the National Association of Building Owners and Managers over the past 25 years.

Speaking at the association's 43rd annual convention in Seattle, he said that increased costs of operation have more than absorbed the additional income received through higher occupancy.

"Our income, based on the purchasing power of the 1926 dollar, is practically at a depression level," he added.

Changed conditions make it advisable for industry members to regard their position in a different perspective, according to Cowen. A drop to 10 percent vacancy, the figure which in the past has been considered "par for the course," may leave the industry "under par."

Cowen pointed out the occupancy now is between eight and nine percent higher than in 1924, regarded as "normal" for the industry. At its lowest point, in 1933, occupancy was 20 percent below normal.

Net income, however, fell to 66 percent below normal from 1930 to 1939 and has not yet returned to the 1924 normal level, he emphasized.

15 Arlington Homes Planned

Milford Homes, 900 N. Garfield st., Arlington, has received a permit to construct 15 one-story houses in the 700 and 800 blocks of N. Florida st., Arlington.

The dwellings are to be part of a 250-unit project proposed for later construction. Builder is Burroughs & Preston, 2909 M st. nw. Dimensions of the dwellings are about 39 by 25 feet.

Power Pumps Boost Farm Water Use

Washington (AP).—Electric pumps boost farm family use of water, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Families which pump water by hand often use about 6 gallons per day per person, it says. After a few years of using power pumps this may rise to 50 gallons per person per day.

Lloyd Conrich, architect, of 593 Market st., San Francisco 5, Calif., who describes it as a perfect circulation plan. Combined length of living room and dining room is 32 feet. Large glass doors open on the rear terrace from both of these rooms. The 32-foot garage is ample for two cars and a trailer, or can double as a rainy day play room. The bath has a shower stall, tub, and two entrances. This house covers 1681 square feet and the garage has an area of 645 square feet. The kitchen has a dining nook

Check on Heating Costs When Buying a House

IT'S important to look into the heating cost when buying a house.

The home buyer can make fairly sure as to the cost for heat by checking the amount of coal consumed, examining the furnace for obvious defects, learning when the furnace was installed, and getting information on the frequency of repairs and the cause.

Recurrence of repair work is an indication that the furnace may need regulating. High fuel consumption may point at inefficient equipment and a need for structural insulation, or that the house needs wall insulation or weather stripping.

Important in Home Buying

House Must Fit Site; Site Must Be Treated Right

This is the first of 12 articles by Southwest Research Institute which will point out to prospective home buyers standards of quality to look for in a house built for sale.

THE most advantageous location of a house on its site and the best treatment of the site itself are two of the major factors that families buying a house should take into account, according to the Southwest Research Institute's Revere Quality House Division.

John Hancock Callender, architectural consultant for the institute, says that frequently these two important factors are overlooked in building.

"In the case of a good contemporary custom-designed house, most of the lot's original slope has been retained," Callender points out. "Existing trees have not been thoughtlessly stripped away. The house is given the effect of being designed around a fine tree shading the living terrace. A rock outcropping has been left in its natural state and developed into a rock garden.

"By proper planning and foresight in developing the lot, today's carefully planned house is given a look of "belonging." The house has obviously been built to take best advantage of the view, to utilize the shade of the trees, and to give the family privacy in its outdoor living areas.

The quality contemporary house, which is gaining constantly in popularity, is inconspicuous from the street, Callender submits. The natural finished wood of its front elevation blends into the trees and shrubs. Front windows are few and are placed high on their walls, thus adding to privacy within the house while still assuring light and air.

At the rear of the house—generally facing south—windows are large and in the living and dining areas reach from ceiling to floor, he says. Doors open out onto a flagstone terrace, sheltered partly by an overhanging roof.

"The house has been adapted to its site, and the best natural characteristics of the site itself have been utilized to the fullest. All of this adds up to more pleasant surroundings and more attractive character to the house and its 'design for living'."

Forward-looking builders and their architects, the institute believes, can do much to adapt this kind of planning to houses constructed in volume for sale.

The institute, through its program, is aiding builders in the planning and building of a superior type of home. It grants a seal of approval to houses it accepts, and is engaged in many phases of housing research and building product development. In 1950 it is expected that more than 1000 homes built for sale to the general public will have the institute's seal of approval.

Here are some points the institute urges in the planning and development of housing projects which add to the quality, acceptability and enduring value of today's homes:

1. Houses built on narrow lots should be set back from the street to create privacy.

2. Builders should put stress on the "design for living" idea by planning facilities and areas for outdoor as well as indoor living.

3. Many sites, formerly rejected as sloping, too wooded or too rocky, could be used for homes of contemporary design with careful planning.

4. A design ideally suited for the south side of the street should not be used without considerable modification on the north side.

These are just a few of the points pertinent to a site that should be carefully considered by persons looking for a home, according to Callender.

Best home construction today, he declares, does not stop at the outside walls of the house, but includes installation of at least the basic part of the facilities for outdoor living. This usually means the terrace, the right kind of fence screening if needed for privacy, and retention of trees.

The trend toward contemporary-type homes and more careful land treatment is catching on fast in most parts of the country, C. W. Smith, director of the institute's housing operation, reports from a study of building operations in many areas.

An increasing number of builders, he reports, are making it standard practice to furnish the buyer with a professionally designed landscaping plan, or a choice of several plans, to enable him to follow a consistent idea of developing the site of his home over the years.

The whole thing adds up, the institute says, to the fact that careful planning of the location and design of the house on its site, and the most advantageous treatment of the site itself contribute much to making a better home.

New Construction Method Used in California Homes

SAN MATEO, Calif.—A new type of house construction is being used in 134 homes completed in San Lorenzo Village by the David G. Bohannon organization.

Instead of conventional flooring, the builder uses circular precast concrete piers. Four-by-six-inch beams are placed over the piers and then tongue and groove subflooring is laid across these beams, topped with oak flooring.

The method makes it possible to shorten the distance of the finish floor to the grade, thereby effecting a saving in the quantity of exterior wall and providing the popular low lines found in ranch house design.

Three-Bedroom Bargain

San Francisco, Calif.—A subdivision of new homes here, "Rex Manor," has been selling an average of two homes daily. Buyers pay $7575 for a three-bedroom, two-car-garage home. The monthly carrying charge is approximately $50.

Booklet Available

A pamphlet on how ot secure a good finish on floors and furniture by using shellac has been made available by the Shellac Information Bureau, 65 Pine st., New York 5, N. Y. The publication deals, among other things, with unfinished furniture and gives directions for finishing it properly. There is no charge for the pamphlet.

Yellow "Doubles" for Sunshine

A room that is inclined to be dark and rather gloomy can be given a sunshiny aspect by painting the walls a pale tint of yellow. A ceiling painted white will reflect the maximum light that falls upon it. In one such room, the woodtrim was coated in a grey-lavender tone and draperies were a silvery gray. The upholstery combined blue-green and grey and tangerine-toned accessories added gayety and life to the room's decoration.

Good Show Despite Poor Year

Virginia Doing Well With Lilies

The regal lily, free from disease and easy of culture

By Katherine Barrett Pozer

LILY growing offers a challenge to the average grower and one which the experienced gardener finds hard to resist. In sections where the air is moist and cool, lily growing is no feat. But, with our hot, dry summers, the production of a fine lily is a definite achievement. For many years we could grow Madonna lilies with ease and it was a familiar flower in Old World gardens. But with the introduction of the mosaic disease, Madonna lilies disappeared and for a long time lily growing went into a slump.

With the introduction of the regal lily, which is free from disease and easy of culture, the interest in lily growing revived, an American Lily Committee was formed, and American growers were urged to try lily growing. American horticulturists became interested in disease control and the production of new varieties.

At nearby Beltsville, much work has been done to produce lilies which American nurserymen could grow in competition with foreign growers. It was particularly important that lilies be grown in the South, where they could compete with the Bermuda Easter lily trade, so lilies in the South have become more and more possible and their growing has become a million-dollar business.

It is said that modern horticulturists in a few years have achieved with lilies what it took generations to accomplish with tulips, narcissus and other bulbs. Constantly in search for new lily blood, botanists from all over the world are sending back specimens.

Many Sent From China

DR. J. F. ROCK has sent many from the interior of China and Tibet, where they were found on expeditions in which many dangers were faced and living conditions were almost beyond imagination. In America, Mrs. J. Norman Henry of Pennsylvania is in constant search for native species which possibly will give stamina and strength to lilies as well as increase their beauty.

A number of years ago the Garden Club of Virginia took up lily growing as one of its Statewide projects and, under the leadership of the late Mrs. Joseph Walker of Woodberry Forest, the Virginia lily show became one of the leading horticultural events of the East.

The educational exhibits gave information on diseases, pests and propagation and member clubs tested each year a suggested collection of newer varieties. Last year, the Virginia show held in Fairfax was a national event held in connection with the annual meeting of the North American Lily Society.

This year, the Virginia club continued with its show in Fredericksburg. Although this has not been a good lily year, it was demonstrated at the show that better lilies are now being grown successfully in home gardens and that there is a greatly increased interest in their culture.

The many amateur classes were well filled in spite of the fact that in many localities such favorites as the regal have not yet bloomed. There were many fine entries such as white martagons and many of the new hybrids which were displayed last year for the first time at the Fairfax show.

Excellent Variety Is Shown

THE lily collections grown by members of the Virginia garden clubs showed excellent variety. Mrs. J. Hartley Trundle, State test chairman, exhibited more than 15 varieties grown in her Leesburg garden. Other lilies grown in the Washington area were winners in interclub contests—the Alexandria Garden Club winning the blue in the club collections.

It will soon be lily planting time. The Madonna lilies should go in the ground in August and other types in the fall. For the beginner, the list of lilies considered to be in the "easy to grow" class include L. superbum longifolium, henryi, martagon album, davidi, testaceum, umbellatum, amabile speciosum, dauricum, canadense and, of course, the regal.

In purchasing bulbs, many experts advise the purchase of the medium-sized bulbs because the roots of the larger-sized bulbs frequently are injured in digging and transport. Most lilies are at their best when planted in a group rather than as single specimens. While many lily troubles have been overcome, growers advise that where lilies have already been established and are in a healthy condition, that all new bulbs be planted away from them in case they are disease-infected. Aphis carry disease and should be controlled and the Botrysis blight, similar to black spot, which affects the foliage, should be controlled by spraying with a good fungicide.

An Ideal Small Fruit

Strawberries Advocated For Tinier Garden Plots

By James H. Beattie

THE strawberry is the ideal small fruit for Washington gardens. Only a little space is required for the production of sufficient berries to supply the average family. Even when grown in sufficient quantities for preserving and freezing, the space requirements are so modest that this delicious fruit fits into the plan of quite small gardens. The strawberry deserves to be more generally grown in our local yards and gardens.

Strawberries grow well on almost any type of soil from a coarse sand to a heavy clay, provided it is well drained, yet well supplied with moisture. The experience of local gardeners emphasizes the importance of good drainage. The spring of 1950 has made this point perfectly clear. On wet soil the plants make very little growth and some diseases, particularly red stele, may become very serious. The winter killing of the plants is also likely to be severe on wet land.

Sandy soils usually produce berries a few days earlier than is the case with heavy textured land. Irrespective of the exact character of the land, the presence of an abundance of organic matter in the soil is very favorable to strawberries.

The average person having only a limited amount of space for all his gardening operations must choose the plants that will yield the greatest net return. In this respect the strawberry fits economically into almost any garden, however small.

Kinds to Grow Listed

UNDER favorable conditions a space 10 feet square, containing 100 square feet, should yield 15 to 20 quarts of berries.

In home gardens only a very few varieties can be used. As a matter of fact, there is no need to plant more than five or six sorts. We are mentioning only a few sorts, selecting those that have the reputation of doing well in this locality and that also have other desirable characteristics.

Early: Blakemore and Howard 17 (Premier).

Mid-season: Fairfax.

Late: Chesapeake and Fairpeake.

Blakemore is especially desirable for preserving and freezing. Blakemore, Howard 17 and Fairfax all have some resistance to the virus diseases. Chesapeake is quite subject to attack by the red stele disease but this trouble can be avoided by using only healthy plants. Fairfax, Fairpeake and Chesapeake are mild flavored and especially desirable for dessert use, but the quality of strawberries is strongly influenced by soil, weather and other factors.

Vine Ripening Urged

TRUE strawberry quality can be enjoyed only when the berries are properly vine ripened and used fresh. Berries of this kind can be had only from the home garden or from a nearby truck patch.

The so-called everbearing varieties are not very satisfactory in this area. The quality of summer-borne berries is usually poor and the plants are shy producers of runners and usually have difficulty in holding their own. Mastodon and Progressive are the leading varieties.

Ordinarily it is better to set strawberry plants during the early spring months. These should yield a full crop the following spring. Summer planting, during early August, is also practiced to some extent. Potted plants, obtainable from nurserymen and others, are extensively used for the summer planting. A simple, economical method for summer planting consists of lifting newly rooted plants formed by runners in nearby beds and setting them in a new location such as an adjacent row in the garden. This plan makes it possible to start a bed this summer with excellent prospects for obtaining a small crop next spring.

Use land that is free from Bermuda grass and other weeds. Don't use grass sod land as it is likely to harbor injurious insects. Legume sods are not objectionable.

Use healthy plants. Several serious virus and fungus diseases affect the strawberry. Red stele, a fungus root disease, is probably the worst. Plants attacked by it become stunted and the older leaves wilt and die and the entire plant usually succumbs. Cold, wet weather favors this disease and the better drained, lighter-textured lands are best from this viewpoint.

Healthy Plantings Needed

THOSE having healthy strawberry plantings should use these as a source of plants for a new bed, thereby avoiding the possibility of introducing the red stele or other troubles. The next best course would be to obtain plants from some nearby healthy bed from which the plants can be lifted and reset with plenty of soil around the roots. This is practically essential to the successful planting of strawberries in midsummer.

Either the hill or the matted row systems of culture are commonly practiced in the home garden. For hill growing set the plants about a foot apart in the row and have the rows just far enough apart to make cultivation easy, say 16 inches to 2 feet. Keep the runners cut off so as to make strong plants.

Unless this is done, the planting will soon become matted and poor results will be obtained. For matted rows, set the plants 15 to 18 inches apart in rows from 3 to 4 feet apart. Train the first runners along the rows and restrict the width of each row to not over a foot by removing the extra runners. Most strawberry plantings soon become too thick and it pays to reset in a new location every season or two.

Care should be exercised when setting the plants to set them the proper depth. None of the roots should be exposed, yet the growing centers of the plants must be in no danger of being covered with soil through washing or cultivation.

Frequent Cultivation

GIVE newly set strawberries frequent cultivation to keep down weeds. Remove all blossoms during the summer, except in the case of the everbearing sorts which fruit during the fall. This practice conserves the strength of the plants for a heavy crop during the spring. Failure to control weeds and allowing the beds to become matted are the most common faults with the average strawberry grower. In the spring when the plants begin to blossom, spread nitrate of soda along the rows, about 1 pound to each 80 feet of row.

When the ground freezes, cover the rows with about 2 inches of straw or other loose vegetable matter that is free of weed seeds. When growth starts in spring, remove the covering from the plants and leave it around them to serve as a mulch and to keep the berries clean.

Alien Bug About Ready to Blitz

THE alien Japanese beetle, who finds his adopted homeland the most palatable place imaginable, soon will emerge from the ground in hordes to indulge a ravenous appetite.

These pests feed on more than 250 species of trees and plants, most of them plentiful in this country. As a result, the annual beetle blitz causes damage amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The area of heavy infestation is steadily growing, notes the National Geographic Society. Japanese beetles were first observed in the United States at Riverton, N. J., in 1916. Since then they have spread over an area extending from Maine to North Carolina and as far West as Ohio. Scattered infestation occurs elsewhere, and scientists predict most of the Nation will play host to the beetle eventually.

Apparently they arrived in grub form at the roots of nursery stock imported from Japan. The beetles fell in love with the United States at once. They had no natural enemies, such as the tiphia wasp and the spores which create milky white disease in larva beneath the ground.

Entomologists soon found that the beetles were particularly fond of garden flowers, corn and soybeans, such shade trees as the elm, linden, lombardy poplar and Norway maple, and most of the fruit trees. But the hard-shelled pests have peculiar discriminations. In an orchard they generally devour plum trees leaves first, then the leaves of the cherry, peach and apple trees.

Each female Japanese beetle lives 30 to 45 days and lays 40 to 60 eggs during that time. She deposits the eggs in grassy turf—preferably the nearest golf links. In about two weeks the eggs become grubs and live in the ground through the winter, passing through several development stages before they emerge as adult beetles in June or July.

There are many effective weapons in the battle against these invaders. DDT and lead arsenate, used as a spray, protect foliage. The earth organisms which produce milky disease have been imported from Japan. The tiphia wasp, which hatches its eggs in beetle larva, is another import. This season the Department of Agriculture plans to introduce a new beetle poison called chlordane for control of the grubs.

The weather—at times—is the best ally in the beetle fight, according to a Government entomologist. For instance, the dry, hot weather last summer in much of the East was bad for beetle larva, and the pests probably will be fewer in number this year.

None of the control measures yet devised can stop the spread of infestation, although the Government tries its best to protect the interior of the country by making quarantine inspections of plants transported from the Atlantic Seaboard. "Bugs guards" at Eastern air terminals even examine passengers' clothing for beetles.

Still the hordes advance, generally along river valleys. Experts sadly admit the Japanese beetles probably will love the Mississippi Valley.

JAPANESE BEETLES—

Any residential area, with a formal or informal civic-minded group to organize the community, can control this pest with a single milky disease treatment. More than 90% of the property owners support these drives. A speaker and organization procedure provided on request.

Glass-Jar Growing of Roses Is Fun

By Alfred Putz

UNLESS you have seen it you wouldn't believe what some gardeners accomplish with a few large glass jars. For all practical purposes each jar is a little individual greenhouse just right to propagate a plant which otherwise would require a regular greenhouse to succeed.

June is a good time to delve deeply into the possibilities of jar gardening because it is the time for propagating roses. The resulting plants will stand on their own roots. In some cases that will be an advantage, in others a drawback. All the hybrid-tea roses need a good root system to thrive but are unable to form one of their own. This is the reason commercial growers bud them on strong roots of wild roses.

The best chances for success are with the hardy climbers and some of the species roses. If the weather has been dry, water the plants well a day or two before the slips are to be taken. That will give them greater vigor and induce quicker rooting.

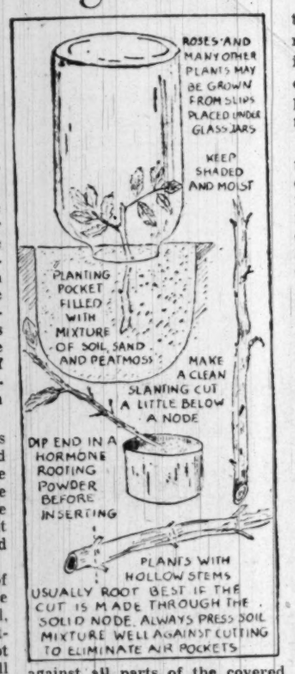
Take out a deep spadeful of soil and replace it with a mixture of equal parts good garden soil, sharp sand and granulated peatmoss well mixed together. Do not add fertilizer, not even well rotted manure. Have the mixture moderately moist and pack well into the holes until level.

Taking the slips or cuttings comes next. Use a very sharp knife to make a clean, slanting cut. Even the best pruning shears crush the tissues. Take the cuttings from the laterals carrying freshly opened blooms. Five buds or eyes to a cutting give a desirable length, but even three buds have a good chance.

But what is meant by buds or eyes? Let us change it to leaves and to make it perfectly clear we must remember that a rose leaf has three or more leaflets. These are supported by a common stem or stalk—botanists call it the petiole. It is in the axils where the petioles join the woody stem that the buds or eyes are located.

Hormones Speed Rooting

CUT off the flowers and the three lowest leaves. Keep the petiole stubs as short as possible without hurting the tiny buds or eyes. Just as soon as a cutting is taken, punch a hole in the center of the prepared soil and stick it in up to the lower of the two leaves. Press the soil firmly against all parts of the covered stem. Place the glass jar over the plant and water thoroughly.



Where the cuttings are exposed to the sun at any time of the day it is well to cover the inside of the glass with thin mud to provide shade without cutting out all light.

The chances for quick rooting are greatly increased where the cut end of the slip is dipped in one of the hormone powders offered for this purpose. After dipping, tap against the rim of the jar to dislodge any excess powder. Take special pains to see that the powder is not rubbed off by careless pushing into the planting hole.

Roses are by no means the only plants that can be propagated under glass jars. Many shrubs do as well.

Most kinds root best if a slanting cut is made a half-inch below the node. Treat them the same as rose slips, using a hormone rooting powder to give them a quicker and better start. Those with hollow stems are best cut through the solid node.

Many gardeners who decide to try their skill on this type of propagation will do it primarily for fun. Keeping detailed notes on every subject and operation adds to the enjoyment, and a slip of paper with the name of the variety placed inside the jar is very important to keep track of which is which.

The cuttings need good care. They must be supplied at all times with a uniform degree of root moisture even when they seem to be getting along well.

Do not dig them up to find out what they are doing underground. It will likely kill them.

Keep them under the glass until the space becomes crowded. A larger jar will then solve that problem. Roses should not be uncovered until they start to grow again the following spring and that holds true for all others not too large to be kept tucked in.

During the winter draw soil against the sides of the jar and place a handful or two of leaves over the top.

S THE FOURTH OF JULY "JUST ANOTHER HOLIDAY?"

Most of us accept the rights Americans enjoy as casually as the air we breathe. Oldest Savings Firm Joins FHLB System

PHILADELPHIA's 100-year-old Decatur Building Association, oldest savings and loan association in the country, recently became a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

Organized in 1849, the thrift institution is now one of 3875 members of the FHLB system. Their combined assets are more than 14 billion dollars.

The Philadelphia association is located in the Frankford section, not far from where the first mutual institution for home finance in America was founded in 1831.

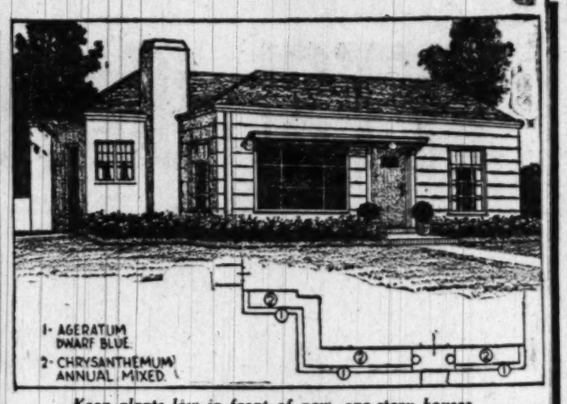
Plant Wisely to 'Frame' Modern Home

A NEW type of planting is required for modern homes, one-story, without high basements, with main floor only one or two steps above ground level.

Tall shrubs and evergreens used in "foundation" planting grow too high for these low houses, making them seem lower, and eventually hiding them from view and shutting the sunshine and view out.

Landscaping should frame the house and emphasize its good points. A low house should never be dwarfed by tall plants before or around it; and a small house should not be made to seem smaller.

Only low plants should be used in front of low modern houses.



Keep plants low in front of new, one-story houses

These effects can be well achieved by annual flowers; and the fashion for flowers in the front yard is spreading rapidly. An example of the effect which they produce is given in the illustration. On either side of the door a globe-shaped evergreen in a tub is used, rather than a pyramidal evergreen which would soon grow too large.

The line where house wall meets the ground is planted with a border of annual chrysanthemums, growing two feet tall, bearing single flowers of richly varied orange, brown, white and yellow flowers.

Edging this border is a row of ageratum, one of the best sources of blue tones for flower borders.

There are many other combinations which could be used in a similar way to produce a pleasing effect, in harmony with the colors of house wall and roof. In planting near modern houses simple color schemes, two, not over three, harmonious colors, are usually considered best.

Any of the sun-loving annuals which grow to a suitable height may be used on the east, west and south sides of houses; but on the north varieties which are known to endure shade must be chosen.

It is important that the colors used in borders around the house shall harmonize with the house colors, repeating them, or forming a harmonious contrast of complementary colors.

4 Million Homes

It Takes A Heap of Materials

SINCE January 1, 1946, more than four million new homes and apartments have been built or started in the United States. In terms of materials, reports the National Association of Home Builders, here's what it took:

39 million board feet of lumber.
10 billion bricks.
896 million sacks of cement.
4.32 billion square feet of sheathing.
852 million pounds of nails.
1 billion square feet of wire mesh.
4.8 million square feet of roofing.
4.1 billion board feet of siding.
44 million windows and frames.
48 million doors and frames.
4 million sets of finish hardware.
4 million chimneys.
52 million linear feet of kitchen cabinets.
460 million linear feet of gutters and downspouts.
3.6 billion square feet of floor covering.
54 million gallons of paint.
880 million feet of pipe.

Private builders were responsible for more than 26 billion dollars in housing expenditures since the end of 1945, according to the association. The record building pace, it said "has been a major factor in maintaining the Nation's present booming economy."

Improved Home Quality Forecast

WHAT'S the next major change in Mr. and Mrs. America's living standards?

A marked improvement in the quality of their new housing accommodations.

This is the prediction of Thomas S. Holden, president of F. W. Dodge Corp., construction news and marketing organization. Improved quality in homes is on the way, he says, because:

"While such improvement has been real and continuous for at least a generation, it has not kept pace with the rapid rise that has taken place in other phases of American consumption."

Postwar housing production, Holden asserts, has emphasized new dwelling units in the lower cost brackets. Such emphasis has been entirely appropriate in a market dominated by the urgent needs of newly wed veterans and their young families, he says.

"American families are producing more babies than they did 15 and 20 years ago. Furthermore, babies have a way of growing up to be teen-agers with ever-increasing space demands. There is already evidence of a trend to more spacious accommodations and more spacious living.

Larger Rooms Predicted

"WITH continued prosperity, many of today's young parents will enlarge their incomes as they and their children grow older. These family trends should not only create demands for more rooms per dwelling unit but also for more generous dimensions per room.

"For these and other reasons it is likely that the next great advance in the American standard of living will be in the direction of improved quality of housing."

Shelter cost is the one and only major element in the cost of living that is actually lower than in previous eras of prosperity, according to Holden. "Shelter cost has been declining during the past 40 years as a percentage of consumer expenditures."

In 1909 Americans spent as current cost of shelter 10 percent of their total consumer expenditures as compared with only 9½ percent in 1949, the official reports. The total for shelter was less than for alcohol, tobacco and amusements.

"The most spectacular change in living standards during the past 10 years has been the great increase in expenditures for improved diet," he declares.

"The market for custom-built houses," Holden concludes, "and the quality products that go into them is already definitely on the upswing. It seems likely to continue well beyond the time when the market for economy houses reached saturation.

"The current trend upward toward spaciousness is particularly in evidence among middle-income families. There will be built quite a lot of quality houses, but not very many mansions, in these days of high income taxes and difficulty in getting and retaining domestic servants."

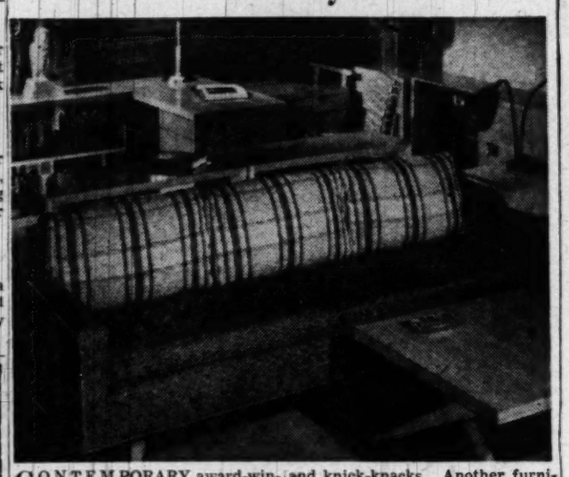
Pupils Snooze on Floors

Pupils study, play, and even nap right on the kindergarten floor in a new grade school in Bellflower, Calif. Attendance records, nonetheless, show a 14 percent drop in absence due to colds, according to Dr. Norman Wampler, superintendent of schools. Radiant floor panel heating make the floors draft-free, he said.

Handy With Brushes

Canada (AP).—The Junior Board of Trade had a lot of fun during a publicity stunt in Halifax's clean-up week. About 30 of them painted the tourist building here in five minutes, five seconds, timed by Mayor Gordon Kinley.

Furniture of Many Uses . . .



CONTEMPORARY award-winning occasional furniture for modern functional living is now being featured at Peerless Modern House.

These tables, desks and bookcases, all with cigarette and liquor-proof Realwood tops, are part of the first prize living room designed for the 1950 Better Rooms competition by the Chicago designer, Forest Wilson.

His room solves the space shortage problem by combining work and relaxation areas and incorporating several ideas for easier entertaining, among which is a "Hi-Lo" coffee table that can be raised to serve as a card or snack table.

The corner table has a top which lifts to reveal two storage compartments for magazines, books and knick-knacks. Another furniture feature is a bookcase with cantilevered top that is open on all four sides for easy access.

A writing desk has drawers opening from either side and legs that form a rack for additional book storage, and a supplementary typing desk is equipped with handrail and rollers and can also be used as a tea table.

How's This for Speed?

Fullerton, Calif.—Jewett Bros., construction firm here, has completed a two-bedroom home in two days. Workmen started on the 850-square-foot dwelling at 8 a. m. on a Monday, finished at 4 p. m. the next day. Conventional construction methods were used.

On Broadway

Your New York Correspondent

THE Broadway Lights: The drama sentinels' soft-snap of the week was "Julius Caesar" at the Arena. They saluted Basil Rathbone's always big-time performance . . . Barnes of the Herald Tribune didn't enjoy the classic at all. "Julius Caesar," he reported, "is one of Shakespear's worst and most quoted plays' . . . Atkinson in the Times dissented with his colleague, noting: "Julius Caesar is one of the supreme works of literature in English" . . . Despite almost unanimous raves and Kate Hepburn's starpower, the same bard's "As You Like It" suffered a deficit of $42,000 . . . Anthony Farrell, top Broadway Marshall Plan man, invested in 14 shows last season, according to Variety . . . M. Todd's "Peep Show" is the only new entry Broadway-bound. It lights up the Winter Garden Wednesday sundown . . . The back-stage war between Mady Christians, the star of "Getting Married," and Producer Roger Stevens is now Equity's hot potato . . . "Mr. Roberts" (in his 3rd year,) is still playing to capacity and standees . . . A London play dealing with Adolf's and Eva's last days has the perfect title: "The Rat Trap."

WINCHELL

IN THE WINGS: Anita Loos, who mother'd the long-time best seller and Broadway hit, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," is brunette . . . "Why," she was queried, "have you never become a blonde?" . . . "Maybe," she said, "I don't prefer gentlemen" . . . Disk Jockey Martin Block is still panning the Hollywood agents . . . "How did you find them?" an actor asked . . . "Same as ever," said Martin. "I glanced down at my money-belt and there they were."

STAGE DOOR: The showfolks are talking about Carlton Alsop's comment on Judy Garland's tragic crash . . . "It's a shame," he said, "she is broke. In Mary Pickford's day she wound up owning United Artists studios. But in Judy's day, with all the taxes, you wind up with nothing, despite a big salary" . . . In the film "Fifty Years Before Your Eyes" the narration has the Dionne Quints born in 1935. They were born May 28, 1934 . . . "Woman on Pier 13" is another anti-red film betrayed by a feeble script . . . It's not enough for such movies to be anti-communist. They must be pro-entertainment . . . Jean Hagen in the exciting film "The Asphalt Jungle" is a newcomer with the stardust touch. Reminds you of Joan Crawford . . . Have some B'way arithmetic: "Lost in the Stars" will register its 281st performance when it fades July 1, a long run. It lost $45,000 . . . Maude Adams, most famed Peter Pan of them all, wouldn't allow the kiddies to see her leaving the theater and realize she was a woman.

THE Intelligentisa: The literary gossips say that Budd Schulberg's next, "The Disenchanted" is based on the life of F. Scott Fitzgerald . . . Orson Welles' new play staged in Paris satirizes the life of a Hollywood agent . . . Three more 50-cent mags a la Flair are in the blueprint dept . . . Bob Considine lambasts sports and sports officials in his Flair essay "The New Society in Sports". Done in his usual Considynamic manner . . . Mrs. Theodore Dreiser has signed with the World Publishing Co. Her "My Life With Theodore Dreiser" is listed for spring publication . . . At an age when most writers give up, Marguerite Merington, past 90, has had her book "The Custer Story" published. Got good notices from the top New York reviewers . . . The familiar crack: "Always be nice to the office boy, he may be the managing editor one day" fits Joel Lewis, the new M. E. at Printer's Ink . . . He started there as office boy in 1927.

THE Press-Box: A significant coincidence was the one that ran in the gazettes the other morning. When the high court struck at segregation of Negroes and whites at two universities and on southern railroads. The same editions announced the sudden death of a Daytona Beach man named James Crow . . . Eva Peron is quoted as saying "In Argentina the children are learning to say 'Peron' even before they say 'Papa' " . . . Kids'll pick up all sorts of words in the gutter . . . Max Lerner's observation on why Dewey retired. To be beaten by FDR, jr. too, would be something awful . . . The pickets at the World-Telesun hear that a 16 page paper may be tried in the effort to break the strike. Problem is finding a printer.

MOVIETOWN memos: Big controversy in church circles over the reports that the voice of God is offered in "The Next Voice You Hear" . . . The voice is not supposed to be—it's the commentator . . . Dore Schary, the MGMagician, assumed that assignment . . . They've been miring Mickey Rooney in a sea of hokey B-films lately. Only five years ago Miguel was movieburg's top meal ticket . . . This is Metro's big week on the big apple. The MGM lion is roaring in a half-dozen B'way Bijous . . . Lollipops to the youngster named John Howard Davies in the British film "Rocking Horse Winner." The kid's a wonder . . . Shelley Winters is the latest actress to appear without makeup in the forthcoming "American Tragedy" . . . "Louisa" via Universal Pictures has a head-start via sugary advance reviews.

THE Airistocrats: Arthur Murray is teevy's newest sponsor starting July 6 . . . A half-hour musical vaudeo over 20 ABC-TV depots. Mrs. Murray will femmsee . . . The success saga of Lois Schenck, actress, and her Shoeshine Girls, Inc. (itemed here recently) is the feature on "We, the People" next Friday . . . They have a nimble way of handling the commercials on the Goldbergs program. They fit the show instead of interrupting it . . . Thrush Jane Harvey is okay for joy scouts. A looker who knows how to make a melody purr . . . Mayor O'Dwyer's personality brightens the teevy screens. His gab is glib, too.

'Madwoman' Has Them Eating Crow

By Mark Barron

NEW YORK (AP).—Many shows fold quickly amid heartbreaks on Broadway, but a heartening experience is that of "The Madwoman of Chaillot" which has returned now to Manhattan for a fortnight's run to chortle in success over certain critics. It has been triumphant on tour despite some snide remarks made by critics when it first opened.

This Maurice Valency adaptation of the French Jean Giradoux play has emerged triumphant in one of the maddest controversies about one of the maddest plays ever written. It is also one of the gayest entertainments on a stage where there isn't much sense, but many chuckles. No one has ever been able to explain much about "The Madwoman" except that it has earned a fortune in royalties.

When "The Madwoman" first was produced on Broadway in 1948 it was thought that it would not be successful because it is a play so precisely French in interpretation and adaptation that it might not be understood in Manhattan or in Kansas and California. It was thought by the critics, then, that the play was too much in the French mood, too much in that atmosphere that is found along the banks of the Seine, on a promenade on an avenue. The critics forgot that a lot of fellows from the Second, Eighteenth, Twenty-seventh and other United States divisions had considerable experience moving up through the middle of France in exactly the regions where "The Madwoman" chooses its locale.

Now She's Back

NOW "The Madwoman of Chaillot" is back on Broadway, playing a triumphal return engagement after having toured for 20 weeks through such cities as Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Toronto and Cleveland. It began those 20 weeks after 368 performances on Broadway.

When "The Madwoman of Chaillot" opened, this fantasy was completely confusing and, at the same time, was received with cheers. It was a play which made no sense, but which had a charming quality. It is the story of Countess Aurelia, the Madwoman of Chaillot, who lives in a cellar at 21 Rue De Chaillo in Paris. She has three friends such as Mmes. Constance, Gabrielle and Josephine, who also are all madwomen of certain Parisian neighborhoods.

They are not as mad as we think. Before the play is finished you will begin to believe that Mmes. Constance, Gabrielle and Josephine perhaps have good sense and that we who are seated in the audience are perhaps the mad people. It is that French whimsy which sometimes seems good sense.

Sense of a Sort

THE countess and her friends make sense to no one except themselves, to those who can dismiss reality.

Their story, which is well known by this time, is that they are living in the underground of Paris. And the underground in Paris means that one is living in what is comparable to the sub-

Cheap Seats Are the Best At Oberammergau Play

By Richard L. Coe

THIS WILL BE a report on a performance I saw 20 years ago and could be datelined: "Oberammergau, July 21, 1930."

We'd spent the night at Garmisch-Partenkirchen and got up at five to take a bus into Oberammergau. The little city nestled on the banks of the Ammer River and all its half-timbered houses were painted with those soft-hued decorations that are so much more charming than they sound.

When we arrived the village was already bustling with multi-languaged crowds on the way to the theater. This seats 5000 under a shell for protection from the rain, though the stage is open and at the back of it towers the crucifix-topped Kofel Mountain.

Our seats were well forward, which meant they were the cheaper ones, royalty and the rich always sitting far back. But as William Lyon Phelps was later to point out, the cheap seats are the best at Oberammergau, for the restlessness of the audience during the seven and a half hour play does not mar your vision. You become part of the play.

The Prologue

ANTON LANG, who had played Christ in three previous productions, had aged, and was 1930's Prologue. As it turned out this was fine, because Prologue appeared often throughout the performance and his soft Bavarian accent was a delight to this American youth, whose only previous encounter with German was at the highly gutteral Wagnerian performances of the Metropolitan.

The first scene was a "tableau." Adam and Eve being expelled from the Garden. Then the drama picked up the events of Holy Week through the Resurrection, with the familiar moments of the passion crowding each other throughout the day-long performance. There was a two-hour interval for lunch and the afternoon shadows were long by the time the crowd emptied and I snapped my hidden camera, despite the "nicht fotografen" signs on all the walls.

Of course, as I like to think, I was a mere child at the time, but I was at that early teen period when one keeps a diary. (Can it be that youth considers everything so fresh and wonderful that it must be jotted down in a diary? Anyway, I've since lost the habit.) The diary notes that "the afternoon was hot and though one of the girls in the chorus fainted this morning, I didn't fall asleep the entire day."

Visit to Lang's

AFTER the performance Tante, my museum-curator aunt, and I supped at the home of Anton Lang who talked kindly to all his visitors in the English he had learned from his wife. He served us some Benedictine, made at the order's nearby Ettal Monastary and gave me his autograph. Examples of his pottery decorated his home, "Daheim.

One of the Langs' sons, Toni, later came to Washington, where he taught at Georgetown. Toni's wife was Klara Mayr, the Mary Magdalen of 1930. Since the few leading actresses must be young and unmarried, they may appear in only one production, but the men frequently have leading parts throughout their lives. Anton, for instance, appeared in all the plays from 1880 to 1934.

Since then, of course, a lot's happened to Oberammergau, which began the plays in 1634 after those in the village who had not been struck down by the Black Plague vowed that, should they be spared, they would present, every 10 years, the passion of our Lord as a religious rite. Not a single villager died after that and their descendants kept to the vow.

There Was War I

WORLD WAR I proved an obstacle and they had to put off the 1920 production two years. After that came the complete collapse of the mark and to pay their debts, a group of the villagers, headed by Anton Lang, came to America in 1923 to exhibit and sell their lovely woodcarvings. There were cries of commercialism but tne great Anton successfully disproved them.

On the 300th anniversary of the vow a special production was offered in the off-year of 1934, but World War II canceled the 1940 production and only now, five years after the end of the war, have the villagers been able to borrow the production money from the Bavarian government, thus, indirectly, from the United States.

This year's production has been haunted by the Nazi ghost. De-Nazification courts' clearance has been hard to arrive at, since many of the villagers were in the lowest category. Anton Preisinger, 37, who is this year's Christ, was adjudged a "follower," lowest of the categories, and his election to the role was not without strong debate.

Alois Lang, the Christus of 1930 and 1934, also felt that Nazi past. At his trial he said he joined the party to avoid persecution and financial ruin because a woman reported him for a minor violation of regulations in the sale of a cup of coffee.

A Non-Bavarian

IN A CAST of 800, where the name Lang is as common as the name Smith is to us, there will be one non-Bavarian for the first time, 6-year-old Johnny McMahan, of Boise, Idaho. Johnny's father is a U. S. Army major stationed in Bavaria. The lad speaks better Bavarian than he

But It Helps

You Don't Have to Be Hysterical

By Sonia Stein

YOU can look at the "Shop By Television" show on WMAL-TV historically or hysterically. Or you can just refuse to look at it at all.

Taking it historically, you might want to remember back to September, 1947, in the dark era almost Before Television when the National Association of Broadcasters first presented a code of standards of practice relating to commercials to its member stations. It suggested, since it had no power to coerce its members, that commercials be kept down to a dull roar—something ranging from approximately one minute out of each five-minute show, and approximately six minutes out of every hour show. (It's on a sliding scale, figured to the half minute, and varies for day and evening shows.)

It was then said that any mention of a sponsor—or indeed any mention of any other sponsor as in the giveaway shows where trade names are used—would be added up in the total. A woman commentator, hoping to reduce to the absurd the whole idea of holding a stop watch on commercial words and phrases, raised a point. On television, she wanted to know, would the presence of the sponsor's merchandise in the background—say a refrigerator on a cooking show—be considered a continuous commercial? It would.

So, looking at this thing hysterically, the "Shopping by Television" program on WMAL-TV is a half-hour commercial of unpardonable variety since the sponsor's produce, far from lurking in the background, are the sum total and whole point of the show.

Men Like It

BUT curiously, the very viewers regard it as a service and even thank the program personnel for the time and energy the program saves them. Men, who rarely get a chance to shop in the stores, seem to like the show almost as well as women do.

(The three models who take the phone orders on the show like to have the men call, because they always ask advice. The women sometimes ask for a better description of the colors, ask the girls if they would buy the item themselves. Of course, they say they would and often they do. Ruth Crane, who conducts the show, has already spent several hundred dollars on household items shown. Once she went down to the shop which sponsors the show to buy some two for $8 porch chairs whose praises she had sung—found she'd sung them so well they were sold out.

The information offered is exact about fabrics and uses and pennies involved. No time is wasted on romantic or fascinating legends about the merchandise. Pilsner glasses hold beer, sell for $2.99 the dozen and to heck with how they ever got to be that strange shape. Not unless you can do it in a word—since approximate 17 items are modelled, opened, closed, collapsed, squeezed, punched, pinched, smoothed, banged, stepped on, put together, taken apart or otherwise shown in a half hour period.

But back to the NAB. Now fully aware that radio standards are not always applicable to TV, it is currently studying a suit-

Music After Dark

The International Spirit Will Reign at Watergate

By Paul Hume

JOINT sponsorship of the coming series of National Symphony concerts at the Watergate promises a summer of unusual interest.

The National Sesquicentennial Commission has arranged, with the orchestra, a list of six guest conductors, and at least a dozen and a half soloists. Music will be presented in international spirit, with half the concerts given over to music or musicians from foreign lands.

The governments of Belgium, Holland, England, Canada, Italy, and Latin-American nations are sending guest artists to perform at the Potomac concert landing.

Yet with all this internationalism, there will be a high percentage of American music on the programs. More than 20 native-born composers are already listed for hearings during the 12 concerts scheduled to begin one week from tonight.

Brazilians to Lead

MITCHELL conducts the first week's concerts, and three at the end of the month. The two middle weeks will bring the following conductors: Alfred Wallenstein, conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic and a frequent guest leader of the NBC Symphony.

From Brazil, Burle Marx is to lead the Latin night. Fernand Quinet is the envoy of the Belgian government, coming from Liege in that country. Holland is sending one of her youngest conductors, also a composer already known in this country for his new ballet score, "Jones Beach," danced by the City Center Company this spring. His name is Jurrian Andreisson.

One of the established leaders of the BBC Symphony, Clarence Raybould, will represent England; Italy is planning to send a group of artists for an opera night.

Each of these conductors will have a guest soloist. Some soloists come from the same country as the conductor—others are American and will share honors with the guest leader.

Jorge Bolet to Play

FAMILIAR names from this country include Dorothy Maynor, Gladys Swarthout, Alec Templeton (now an American citizen), and Earl Wild.

Another adopted American is Jorge Bolet, one of five pianists slated for the Wategate in July. He and Wild will be followed by Fania Chapiro, Evelyn Swarthout, and Sherman Frank.

Canada is sending soprano Lois Marshall, and England has selected Leon Goossens for her soloist. There are those who maintain that Leon Goossens is the most musicianly, perfect oboe player in the world.

Still more soloists include the singers for Gershwin night, when Muriel Rahn and Edward Matthews take the name roles in music from Porgy and Bess. Jacob Barkin, who sang brilliantly with the orchestra in a special concert this spring, will sing again this summer, and a Hollywood star is coming to do the narration for the Lincoln Portrait.

Festival Nature Seen

ALL this and a special large chorus, too, will make the Watergate this summer the most solo-laden, special featured affairs in their history. It is appropriate that our birthday year should bring us something of a festival nature.

The chorus will sing several times during the regular July programs, in addition to the Berlioz early in August.

Next Sunday we will speak of some of the music listed for the month.

IN MARYLAND TOBACCOLANDS: Patricia Neal, who made her stage hit as a lady of the deeper South in "Another Part of the Forest," goes to the tobacco country of southern Maryland for her newest Warner picture, "Bright Leaf." With Gary Cooper starred, the film opens Thursday at the Warner

Eve Arden Opens Tuesday At Olney in 'Over 21'

SCENE-STEALER IN PERSON: Eve Arden, who has saved more movies than the Bank of America, takes over the starring spot at the Olney Theater this week, opening in Ruth Gordon's "Over 21" Tuesday night

EVE ARDEN, whose caustic comedy has made her perversely beloved on stage, screen and radio, is the Olney Theater's second star of the summer, opening a week's engagement Tuesday night in "Over 21".

This is Ruth Gordon's wartime comedy about a wise wife who pushes her husband efficiently through OCS. The setting by Syrjala will depict one of those typical wartime apartments for official wanderers, including an icebox that explodes and a light whose switch is outdoors, all complications of modern life that should draw out well the frenzied, combustible style of the star.

Miss Arden's latest conquest has been radio. Over the CBS-WTOP chain she's been heard as a resourceful schoolteacher, "Our Miss Brooks." Before coming East for the summer, she completed roles in two new pictures, "Tea for two," with Gordon MacRae and "Curtain Call at Cactus Creek." Her last stage hit was with Danny Kaye in "Let's Face It." Before that she's appeared in "Very Warm for May," "Two for the Show" and the "Ziegfeld Follies," as produced by the Shuberts.

The Olney's supporting cast this week will be headed by Brooks West, Donald Foster, John Becher, Sallie Brophy, Wanda Lyon, Marjorie Peterson, Bert Thorn and Porter Van Zandt. And in the brief, but no doubt efficient, role of a movie tycoon's secretary will be Olney's co-producer, Evelyn Freyman, a lady who usually confines her acting talents to radio scripts.

With Miss Arden's engagement, the Olney will resume its regular weekly pattern of performances Tuesday through Sunday evenings with Saturday and Sunday matinees. The downtown box office is at Jordan's, 13th and G sts.

Church Group Doing 'Change of Heart'

The Young Adult Fellowship of the National City Christian Church will present "Change of Heart" Thursday night in the social hall at 1306 Vermont ave.

The comedy by Marrijane and Joseph Hayes concerns a professor's model child who stops being model just as his father is completing a book about his marvellous offspring. Anne Prentice has directed the cast of 14. Curtain time will be at 8:30.

Opportunity at 'Met'

The Metropolitan Opera will train an American musician, not over 25 years old, as assistant conductor during the coming season. Applicants should write to the Metropolitan Opera Association, 147 West 39th st., New York, 18, attention Max Rudolf.

'Tovarich' Due Tuesday At McLean

THE McLean Summer Theater in the Virginia town's old town hall will open Tuesday night with "Tovarich."

The Straw Hat Players, under direction of Tommy Brent, have set up shop at the old civic center, after lending thespian hands at painting, sawing, scenery-building and polishing.

Members of the company tote up considerable experience on the first rungs of the professional ladder. They include: Frances Keiran, former leading lady for the Barter Theater; Gordon Stern, who spent last winter with the Cherry Lane Players in New York; Karen Leslie, a graduate of London's Royal Academy of Dramatic Art and a member of Margaret Webster's touring company last winter; Elva Meehan, a television actress whose also had stage stock engagements in Maine and Jersey summer theaters, and Frank MacIntosh, another TV and radio veteran.

"Tovarich" is a French comedy about the old regime and the Bolshies. Reservations may be made by phoning ELmwood 510.

'See How They Run' At Braddock Heights

Philip King, whoever he is, seems to have written one play of the summer, "See How They Run." The Mountain Theater at Braddock Heights, Md., on Route 240 to Frederick, will present the farce Wednesday through Saturday night.

MISS DIEM

The play is a new one, but a glance at the schedules for summer theaters on the Eastern seaboard reveals it's to be one of the most widely acted this summer. The Collingwood Players on the Mount Vernon hwy. conclude a two-week run in it tonight.

The Braddock Heights cast will be headed by Peggy Diem, who began her acting career in the popular children's radio show, "Let's Pretend." She's a television artist who's appeared on the Ford and Philco theaters and last summer was a resident feature player at New Jersey's Hunterdon Hills Playhouse.

Eunice Wheaton, John Munson, Richard Woods, John Weaver and Newton Arnold complete the cast for this comedy about strange characters adrift in an English vicarage.

'Lost Colony' Opens 10th Season July 1

Manteo, N. C., June 24.—There'll be a new "Old Tom" for "The Lost Colony" when the Paul Green tribute to North Carolina's first settlement opens its tenth season July 1.

Warren Lee Terry will succeed Donald Somers as the philosophical fool and Director Samuel Selden reports that the experienced character actor will fill the bill to perfection. Terry's light opera repertoire includes 54 roles.

Green's internationally famous symphonic drama concerns England's attempts to colonize the New World at Roanoke Island during the sixteenth century.

Radio Seminar Slated

The University of Illinois will conduct a seminar on the problem of making better use of radio for educational purposes. Leading experts in the fields of planning and production of educational broadcasts will attend the conference, to be held at Allerton House, the university's country conference center, from July 2 to 18.

AND TWO MORE MARXES: Ilona Massey seems to be givin in a rough time to Groucho in "Love Happy," wherein Groucho, Chico and Harpo will be reunited Wednesday morning at Keith's

'Peck's Bad Boy' Is Next At Cross Roads Theater

THE youngsters get their acting turns this week and next at Virginia's Cross Roads Theater, where "Peck's Bad Boy" will open a two-week stay Tuesday night.

In the title role for the Virginia amateur group will be Peter Barash, who was seen in Washington last year as Tom Sawyer. Elliot Denniberg plays the mischevious Jimmy Duffy and Carolyn McKnight will be Minnie.

Director Gertrude Turnburke is a newcomer to Cross Roads. She is head of the St. Mary's Junior College drama department and is a technical director of the Sesqui symphonic drama of Paul Green.

This afternoon and next Sunday afternoon the Cross Roaders will hold tryouts for their two next plays.

Today's auditions, starting at 3 o'clock, will be for roles in "Rain," to be directed by Cecil Willis.

Next Sunday's tryouts will be for a triple bill to be presented in mid-summer, from the works of Tennessee Williams.

Information about the theater can be had from EMerson 0095.

ways of New York or in the hidden nooks of other American cities. These people who are living in the underground are threatened by an "invasion" of "promoters" who are going to drill for oil in the center of Paris and thereby destroy all that lovely city.

With Martita Hunt, John Carradine, Estelle Winwood and Nydia Westman still playing the leading roles, this delirious and delightful play is one that should be revived every season like "Hamlet"—and will be just as mad and entertaining as that one. Revival or not, it has completed a successful tour and now has come come to triumph on Broadway.

New York Composer Invited Abroad

The International Music Institute of Darmstadt, headed by Dr. Wolfgang Steinecke, has invited Edgard Varese, the New York composer, to teach and lecture in August; Varese will be a guest of the city, and will be sent abroad by the State Department.

Dame Myra Hess, who had to cancel her American tour this year because of illness, has returned to the concert platform. Among her engagements this month are appearances with the London Philharmonic and the Concertgebouw Orchestra in Amsterdam and Scheveningen.

Radio Show Draws Records

More than 5000 albums of recordings on ABC's Biblical dramatic series, "The Greatest Story Ever Told," have been turned over to the Protestant Radio Commission and the National Council of Catholic Men, Robert Saudek, the network's vice president in chage of Public Affairs, has announced.

Presentation of the albums, which were distributed equally between both organizations, will extend the program's public interest use by broadening its listener audience, Saudek said.

ON RECORDS

I STILL GET A THRILL—Dick Haymes, Decca: I'll be seeing Dick Haymes on Wednesday night, when we'll both be appearing on the Chesterfield summer show, "The ABC's of Music." Dick is a busy boy these days, commuting each week between New York and Hollywood. It seems that he is in New York for the shooting of his new picture "St. Benny the Dip." At the close of work on Friday, he flies to the Coast, broadcasts the Contented Hour on Sunday night, and is back in New York on Monday. Haynes is a pilot himself, but this new routine of his is a little too tough for him. So far, he's lost 17 pounds.

Dick may be weary from his present schedule, but he doesn't sound it in "I Still Get a Thrill." The song was originally popular in 1930, and as recorded by Dick with the same gang who made "Little White Lies," namely Gordon Jenkins' Orchestra and Four Hits and a Miss, it will probably be the revival hit of the summer season.

THESE warm weather months remind me that it was just about this season a few years ago that Perry Como got his first big network break. CBS had some extra time open during the summer months and decided to devote it to building up an unknown singer by the name of Gordon MacRae. Frank Sinatra had previously occupied this summer spot on the schedule, and it had resulted in his becoming a national celebrity. MacRae was to be next. Hardly had the series started, however, when Gordon was drafted, and CBS was hard put to find somebody to replace him. Then somebody suggested Perry Como.

Up to that point, Como had been the featured vocalist with Ted Weems' Orchestra, a position he had occupied for years. He made records with Weems; sang on commercial radio shows with the band, and appeared in theaters and night spots; but nothing seemed to happen. Como had his admirers, but it was commonly said that he sounded too much like Crosby to be a success in his own right.

When the war came and Weems gave up his orchestra to enter the Coast Guard, Perry was so disgusted with the entertainment business that he had about decided to go back to cutting hair. Then came the CBS offer, and soon after, a Bluebird record contract. Given a chance to go on his own, Como decided to squelch once and for all any opinions that he sounded too much like Crosby, by changing his style. The result was that radio and record listeners heard a Perry Como who was so deliberately unstylized that he sounded like any of a hundred run-of-the-mill vocalists.

THIS decision of Como's might have been the big mistake of his life, if an RCA Victor recording director hadn't persuaded him to change his mind and revert to his old style for one record. That record was "Till the End of Time" which sold more than a million copies.

Since then, Perry has been singing in exactly the same manner as he did when he was with Ted Weems. In fact a comparison of the Weems records with the latest RCA Victor releases will show that few voices have changed as little with the passing of the years as his.

And now that practically all music lovers are familiar with the Como voice, one fact is very, very clear. The critics, whose opinions nearly caused Como to muff his big opportunity, were dead wrong. Perry Como never sounded much like Bing Crosby in the first place.

Eddie Gallaher is heard on WTOP every day except Sunday on the Sundial, 7:45 to 9 a. m.; Moondial, 11:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.

The Record Player

Fine Set Done With Music By a Forerunner of Bach

SCHUTZ: THE CHRISTMAS STORY (Weinachts Historie). The Cantata Singers, with William Hess, tenor, Paul Matthen, bass, and Charlotte Bloecher, soprano, and chamber orchestra under Arthur Mendel. R. E. B. 3. $4.95.

Heinrich Schutz, one of the great German forerunners of Bach, left many volumes of music attesting to his own mastery of the music of the 17th century. Here is a first recording of one of the most ingratiating of these. It is a fairly short oratorio version of the birth of Christ.

Typical of the music of that period in this form, it has narrative passages told by one singer, comments from the chorus, and arias about the situation from other soloists.

Mendel and his Cantata Singers have given outstanding accounts of such music for several years. Their New York concerts are stamped by an authenticity of sound and approach that is now completely transferred to records.

Since we know precisely what instruments Schutz used in this music, and because there is extant a picture of a performance of this work as given by Schutz, the present version can be considered an accurate duplicate of the kind of tone and balance the composer intended.

Old instruments, including such unusual items as violettas, are used.

Two of the soloists are well known here. Miss Bloecher has sung here frequently, and Hess has appeared several times with the Cathedral Choral Society. Their singing in this set continues the standards they created here. Paul Matthen is one of the finest basses in the field today. The results, from chorus, orchestra and soloists are remarkable.

Here is beautiful music with a new flavor and sound. The recording is equal to any in its clear fidelity.

ORGAN MUSIC of the 16th and 17th Centuries. Robert Noehren, organist. Allegro AL 36. $4.95.

Noehren, now head of the organ department of the University of Michigan, played in Washington Cathedral two years ago. His technical skill is of the assured kind where no problems disturb him.

In this music, drawn from the works of Scheidt, Sweelinck, Frescobaldi, de Cabezon, Pachelbel, and Schlick, he hardly penetrates the music stylistically, leaving it with little expression or emotional content.

He plays a Schlicker Baroque organ, located in the Kenmore Presbyterian Church, Buffalo, N. Y. The tone is bright, unmuddy, but a bit lacking in solid diapason sound. The record gives fine reproduction of the tone, but will interest chiefly those who study older music, or the organ.

BIBLICAL: The Sermon on the Mount; and, a commentary on it. Stewart Robb, narrator. Pyramid Records. $4.95.

Robb reads the greatest of all sermons with simple style and good feeling.

To us, background music seems impertinent, and commentary, such as the one on the other side of the record, not only unnecessary but vapid in its attempt to explain some of the clearest utterances in the history of mankind.

The commentary is taken from a book called, "Our Friend from Bethlehem" by Harriett Dallas. And finally, to complete the inappropriate picture, music by the Gregorian Three, is added to the commentary. It is in the worst taste and rendition.

Watergate Series Opens Next Week

THE Sesquicentennial-National Symphony Watergate concerts open next week.

But with the final concert of that series on July 28, the summer's great musical events do not come to a close.

On August 2, the Sesquicentennial Chorus under the direction of Paul Callaway, will present the first Washington performance of the Berlioz Requiem. This great work, requiring large numbers of instrumentalists and singers, has been given relatively few hearings in the United States.

On August 2, Callaway will have under his direction an augmented orchestra of 140, with a chorus of 200. Only one soloist is called for in Berlioz' score, a tenor. David Lloyd, frequent soloist at the Tanglewood Festival, and recently heard in Washington in performances of Bach and Verdi, will sing.

Recorded concerts will be played on Tuesday nights at the Jewish Community Center, throughout the summer. The second program comes this Tuesday evening.

A Montgomery Opera Association has been formed, to operate with the Montgomery Symphony under Chester Petranek. Kai de Vermond will handle productions. All operas will be sung in English. Auditions will be held tomorrow night for Tosca, Traviata, and Faust. Further details are available from Jacqueline Lynch, WI. 7964.

Student recital: Thursday evening at 8:15, in the Second Baptist Church—pupils of Edward Carey.

New Players Are Engaged For Symphony

HOWARD MITCHELL has completed his selection of next season's new members of the National Symphony.

Werner Lywen, violinist, will replace former concertmaster Jan Tomasow who resigned to join the Peabody Conservatory and Baltimore Symphony. Lywen is at present concertmaster of the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra under Alexander Smallens, and former concertmaster of the New York City Symphony under Bernstein. He also served as assistant concertmaster of the Metropolitan Opera.

Julien Balogh will become first oboe, taking the place of Marc Lifschey who has gone to the Cleveland Symphony. And from the Cleveland orchestra will come a new first bass player, Arnold Bernhardt, who replaces Peter Pauli, recently resigned.

Robert Marcellus, former second clarinet in the orchestra moves into the vacancy left by the departure, for Chicago, of Ignatius Genussa.

Theater Lectures

Under the leadership of Robert Stevens, the Agriculture Players are presenting a Monday night lecture series on the allied arts of the theater. They are held each Monday night at 6:30 in the Jefferson Auditorium. Stevens is on the faculties of the Catholic U. and G.W.U. drama departments.

The Play at Oberammergau

does English and he's part of the large group of children appearing in the crowd scenes.

One more specter haunts the village, the same that bothers Hollywood, television. There's a proposal afoot to sell the film-television rights and, according to Variety, there seems to be a chance it will come off.

This seems to me a real pity, for not only would the play, removed from its surroundings, make a poor and static TV attraction, even split into half-hour installments, but it's also thoroughly against the traditions and spirit of Oberammergau.

Naturally movie offers have been made many times, but Anton Lang was surely in the spirit of Oberammergau when, during the low financial ebb of the early 20's, he led the battle against filming.

"If the play," he said, "is allowed to be filmed, I will go up to Ludwig's monument with chisel and hatchet and efface the inscription."

The monument he referred to was erected by Ludwig II, that mad but beloved king of the Bavarians, who wrote in stone: "To the art-loving Oberammergauers, faithful to the customs of their fathers."

Spiritual Rite

FOR THE PLAY is best appreciated as the religious, spiritual rite it began as 316 years ago and though there are the inevitable traces of modern commerce in the village—souvenirs by the woodcarving villagers, pottery, books and pictures—these are no worse than one finds in the cathedrals and other historic spots of Europe.

Travel experts say that hundreds of Washingtonians will be visiting Oberammergau this summer and they'll find much to fascinate them in the neighboring Bavarian Alps, as the leave-minded GI's did during the war.

Within a few miles are two of Ludwig's great castles, Hohenschwangau, where Wagner first imaged the swan of "Lohengrin" and Neuschwanstein, as monumental a crag as Hitler's old hangout. Ludwig was Wagner's great protector and in the courtyard of his eyrie he used to order the singers of the Munich opera to come up and sing for him. They put on full performances of the Wagnerian operas for a one-man audience, the king.

But not even Ludwig's tortured, fertile imagination foresaw the villagers selling their ancestors' vow for the money of television. Let's hope they won't do it.

Cherokee Play to Open

Cherokee, N. C., June 24—"Unto These Hills," a drama about the Cherokee Indians, will open a summer run Saturday night in the new Mountainside Theater. The play will be presented Wednesday through Sunday evenings through Labor Day, September 4, at this mountain resort at the edge of the Great Smokies.

Melodrama at Collingwood

SWITCHING from the holdover farce of the last two weeks, "See How They Run" (which closes tonight), the Collingwood Theater moves into melodrama with "The Two Mrs. Carrolls," opening a week's run Tuesday evening.

The play served Elisabeth Bergner for four seasons, the story of a wife who discovers that her husband is planning to murder her and to marry another woman. Natalie Priest, leading lady of the company, has Miss Bergner's old role, with Lee Bergere as the evil husband.

Others in the Collingwood cast will include Fran Benton, Eugene Marlo, Robert Gibbons and Nadine Drake.

The open air theater is on the banks of the Potomac just off the Mount Vernon highway and is run as an adjunct of the Collingwood Inn. Seats are on sale in Washington at Mrs. Stabler's in Brentano's and at the National Pipe Shop on E st.

Art Stays Awake This Summer

Benjamin West's "The Death of General Wolfe at Quebec," on loan to the Corcoran Gallery from the Royal Collection at Windsor Castle for show, "American Processional," opening July 8

By Jane Watson Crane

SUMMER is no longer the sleepy season in the art world. Most of the big museums and galleries have special exhibitions either installed or soon to open. Much has been said about the summer theaters which have spread rapidly in recent years, far less about the summer art shows which dot the countryside from Maine to California. Artists who turn the keys in the doors of their winter studios are in many cases merely leaving them to keep engagements in the summer art schools which flourish from coast to coast.

In your summer travels do not miss the local shows, for your favorite painter is as apt to be exhibiting by the Great Lakes or in the Great Smokies as in New York.

In the larger cities there is greater diversity than usual in the visual fare, and while New York is going all out for American art, San Francisco is enjoying the Vienna paintings. In Los Angeles, Chicago, and elsewhere the big regional annuals are in progress. Several of the one-man retrospectives, such as the Edward Hopper show which opened earlier at the Whitney Museum in New York, are now on the road. There is a revival of interest in regional background material. If you are traveling through the Southwest, you may run across a show revealing Indian lore or Spanish American folk art, or in New England a display of textile designs or other arts relating to local industries.

HERE in Washington, in deference to the Sesquicentennial, the emphasis is on the historical. Opening on Thursday, the twenty-ninth, at the National Gallery is a portrait show, ranking in time from George Washington to the contemporary, entitled "Makers of History in Washington, 1800-1950." Loans have been made from museums, historical societies and private collections, as well as agencies of the Government. The recently completed new galleries upstairs will be used for the first time, and a special room devoted to portraits of artists, architects and planners who contributed to the development of the Nation's Capital. Included are paintings of Alexander Graham Bell of telephone fame and John Philip Sousa, band leader extraordinary, and other figures who contributed to Washington history as well as occupants of the White House and former heads of Government agencies.

"American Processional" is the title chosen for the Sesquicentennial exhibit at the Corcoran, scheduled to open July 8. Sources of material include several other nations, which have lent works of art bearing on American history. Nearly all of the items for the exhibit, numbering over 300, have arrived in Washington. Among outstanding loans are Benjamin West's painting of the death of General Wolfe, a water color of the Revolution sent from the Royal Collection at Windsor Castle, and several scenes of the Mexican War from the Mexican National Museum in Chapultepec Castle.

Besides the Sesquicentennial shows of historical material at the Library of Congress and the contemporary American print annual, the Phillips Gallery has also assembled American material from the permanent collection in a special display opening this afternoon and continuing through the summer.

THE big show in New York at the moment is the Metropolitan's exhibit of American art since the turn of the century, which opened June 14 and will continue through the summer. All works included are part of the permanent collections of the Museum, and since only a portion of the whole may be shown simultaneously, substitutions will be made from time to time. It will be followed by "American Painting Today," a competitive exhibit opening in December.

For this last, Washington artists are reminded that Saturday, July 1, is the last day to file entry blanks. Works from this section will be received in Richmond at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts between September 4 and 22. Acceptable are paintings in oil, tempera, or encaustic.

While the progressives are bitterly assailing the Metropolitan as a stronghold of the conservatives, it is they who will represent the United States at the International Exhibit in Venice this summer. The seven artists whose work will be shown are John Marin, Jackson Pollock, Willem de Kooning, Rico Le Brun, Lee Gatch, Hyman Bloom and Arshile Gorky. The United States contribution to the Venice exhibit is privately financed and was arranged by the Museum of Modern Art in New York in collaboration with the Cleveland Museum.

$500 Is Offered for Studies By A. U. and Arts Chapter

THE Washington Chapter of Arts and Letters and American University are jointly offering a scholarship of $500 for a year's tuition to a fine arts major at the latter. Eligible are students who have their established residence in Washington or are living here temporarily. Deadline for receipt of work samples and application blanks is July 5-6, between 2 and 5 p. m. For full particulars phone WO. 6800 and ask for the art department or the dean's office.

The Division of Graphic Arts of the Smithsonian will show until September 4 an exhibition of etechings by Mary Nimmo Moran. The show is a memorial to the artist, who died in 1899. Mostly landscapes, the etchings have unusual freedom for a period when the sentimental and stilted was the order of the day. Mrs. Moran, who was the wife of the painter, Thomas Moran, drew out-of-doors directly on the copper, again a departure for the period.

Mary Nimmo Moran, 1842-1899 . . . a memorial exhibition of her etchings will be on view in the Print Gallery of the Smithsonian Building beginning tomorrow

'Art Structure' Sincere Work

Art Structure, a textbook of creative design, by Henry N. Rasmusen, University of Texas; published by McGraw-Hill Book Co., New York, N. Y., $4.00. 108 pp., 4 color plates, 150 illustrations; 59 Exercises.

IF THE formidable word "textbook" in Rasmusen's subtitle has frightened off any readers seeking understanding of art, let them be reassured, Rasmusen's ART STRUCTURE is lucidly written, a sincere and thoughtful definition of plastic form or creative unity, the universal test by which one may judge art works as far apart as those of Breughel and Picasso; of Rubens and Klee. Having understood this new treatment, simplifying as it does much of the aura of mystery about modern art; layman, art student, art hobbyist or artist may better appreciate what any true artist is striving to attain whether his approach be ultramodern, nonobjective, expressionist or that of creative realism.

By text, illustration and analyses, ART STRUCTURE explains the "character and dimensions" of the artist's means, first treating line, space, tone, color and texture, each as a separate element of form or unity. Rasmusen then brings together all of them in relationship to the others to achieve unity of the means and three-dimensional plastic form and demonstrates how and why the artist uses them in creating volumes and planes, theme and expression. Technique is touched upon and an excellent bibliography lists references for those who would explore farther. There is a chapter on practice theory followed by a series of exercises, each illustrating points made in the book.—LYMAN H. WOLFF.

Concert Artists Take Engagements in Israel

Tel Aviv, Israel (AP).—Internationally known concert artists are coming to Israel in increasing numbers. Conductor Leonard Bernstein of New York has started a two months stay here as director of the Israel Philharmonic orchestra. Jascha Heifetz, the noted violinist, is soloist for Bernstein.

Sigi Weissenberg, 20-year-old pianist, will be soloist later. Weissenberg has been playing with the New York Philharmonic and the Philadelphia orchestras. Jennie Tourel, mezzo-soprano of the New York Metropolitan opera, is to appear with the Israel Philharmonic this summer.

Where the Commercial Is All

able code for television. It still regards the "Shop by Television" type of show as a half hour commercial and doesn't necessarily recommend it, but NAB so far frowns upon these shows that it has just published a report on this one.

The report, prepared by the Broadcast Advertising Bureau of the NAB is the first in a series of studies of shows which are used successfully for retail advertising, a side of advertising radio was able to cope with only in part. Radio can make the name of Gummo toothpaste known from coast-to-coast but selling clothing, for example, is a problem for radio in spite of all the documented evidence that the radio listener wishfully imagines himself in the well-tailored, slenderizing pin stripe suit if he didn't see it on anybody else.

The Washington program, although it is not the first of its kind, seems to have been singled out for the study because it is wallowing in commercial success.

Ruth Crane (center) hasn't even finished describing the details of a dress on "Shop by Television" over WMAL-TV before a customer is on the phone ordering it from one of three models who appear on the show as salesgirls, or one of the numerous girls who cover the phones at sponsoring store

You Need Models

THE first of the shopping shows to have a bevy (a little bevy of three) models answering phones and taking orders on screen, the show also requires the services of a group of phone girls at the store. (When the show was being telecast simultaneously on WMAL-TV and WOIC for a while, it took a total of 40 girls.)

The talking up of the merchandise is done by Miss Crane, an attractive, authoritative person and Jackson Weaver who provides the man's angle and the comedy relief. They've worked hand-in-glove on a WMAL radio show heavily laden with commercials for a number of years. Miss Crane, a veteran of 22 years of broadcasting, may never win the loving cup for the entertainment side of her show, but she's the one the Women's Advertising Club of Washington chose as its candidate in a Nation-wide contest for women who'd done things in the advertising field. She's a hard-hitting commercial broadcaster, and while the BAB report doesn't make much of it, that's probably part of why the program sells merchandise. Dollar volume mounts. On January 31, 74 orders brought in $582.82. A month later, the broadcasting brought in $2600 from 646 orders.

It's So Easy

FOR EVERY shopper who finds it easier to refuse to buy an item when there's no salesgirl involved there's one who has either seen "just the thing" she never knew she needed or who can't resist the simplicity of the system. You don't even have to write a letter. Who could resist?

(Nobody knows for sure how much business in the store itself is stimulated by the show. Women will risk buying a $3 dress by phone but they like to try on a $16.95 frock. A chair at $49 was the top priced item ordered by phone.)

So it's easy to see why the sponsor and the station are happy. The viewers listen to this straight commercial in such numbers that it outpulls all but one other TV show Tuesday nights at 7:30, and actually seem to enjoy it. This phenomenon startles men but not women who often toil hotly through the sun from store to store, carrying babies and bundles, for the sheer enjoyment of shopping. Doing it from an easy chair with a tall drink in hand is better.

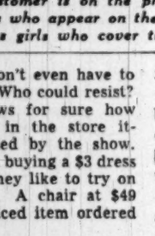
(Note, if you will, that Esquire Magazine for men runs a frustrating picture column of new items but prints no price information and no clue as where you can get them, whereas women's magazines running similar columns give price and place data. Fundamental difference between the species, evidently.)

Suppose It Speaks

THERE'S nothing really horrible about this little show itself (now seen Wednesdays as well as Tuesdays at 7:30 p. m.) but suppose the idea spreads out of bounds? Washington already has similar ones on different stations. I suspect they'll crawl all over the channels until they make such a nuisance of themselves they have to be publicly chastized like the giveaway shows. Not that it'll do any more good than that did. The Federal Communications Commission, which spanked the giveaways to no immediate avail, cannot control the amount of commercials on the air. All they can do is refuse to renew a station's license come renewal time if it's been blatantly unbalanced in its programming.

Mark my obvious words—it'll be a lot worse before it'll be better.

Greenbelt Mother Captures Lowe Song Contest



MEREDITH

Mrs. Sally Meredith, 30, 4-A Crescent rd., Greenbelt, Md., is now a professional song-writer and under contract to the Acme Music Corporation.

She lost her amateur status by winning a song-writers contest conducted by WWDC disk jockey Jackson Lowe.

Mrs. Meredith's song — "Baby, Say You Love Me (In 25 Words or Less)"—was judged the best of 473 entries submitted by potential song writers in the Washington area.

The Acme Music Corporation, an affiliate of Broadcast Music, Inc. of New York will publish the song and has already signed Mrs. Meredith to a contract with the usual royalties.

The mother of three children, Mrs. Meredith says she has been writing songs ever since she can remember. Although she does not play any musical instrument, Mrs. Meredith writes music by humming a tune and then setting down the melody on paper.

'Democracy' Winner On Radio Tuesday

The life story of Gloria Chomiak, one of four 1949 winners of the Voice of Democracy Contest for high school students, will be dramatized by the Cavalcade of America program on WRC-NBC at 8 p. m., June 27.

Starring in the role of the 17-year-old Wilmington, Del., high school sudent, born in Canada of Ukrainian parents, will be Peggy Ann Garner, motion picture actress who was raised in Washington.

The story will trace the life of the talented winner of the annual broadcast script contest from childhood through her trip to Washington and Williamsburg, Va., to receive her scholarship award last February as one of the four national winners.

Basin Street Show Due Back July 8

NEW YORK (AP).—It's had a "short" layoff of 496 weeks, announces the Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street as it gives more details about its planned revival as a network program.

Off the air nearly six years, in coming back it will have the same old format, the one which presents jazz music as though it were a Metropolitan or Chicago opera broadcast. Otherwise an almost completely new cast will be on hand. Even the network will be different.

The lone survivor is Announcer Gene Hamilton, who as "Dr. Gino," conducts the program with all the dignity of a classical music annotator.

The revived series will be on NBC Saturday nights at 10 in the vacation time of Judy Canova beginning July 8. The original Basin Street ran from February, 1940, to October, 1944, on the Blue, later ABC, Network. The conductor then was Paul Lavalle and Singers Dinah Shore and Helena (Lena) Horne, were a couple of regulars. Alec Templeton was a guest on numerous occasions.

This time the music will come from the Dixieland Octet under the direction of Trumpeter Henry Levine. Jane Pickens, working with the Escourtiers, a male sextet, will do a lot of the singing. Again there will be guests.

What might be noted as a reversal in the transfer of programs comes in the announcement that a former ABC series, challenge of the Yukon, is to shift to MBS effective June 27. Heretofore it has been MBS programs moving either to ABC or NBC.

Because of his need of continuous hospital attention, Dennis James is away from his television and radio assignments which include wrestling and the Ted Mack Amateur Show. He hopes to be able to return within a week.

Gene Autry is to take a month's vacation from his CBS radio program so that he will have plenty of time to make the films for his first television series set to begin July 23.

While Lowell Thomas takes a seven weeks' vacation beginning July 3, his CBS daily commentary will be handled by Bill Costello of the network staff.

Nancy Coleman, right, is appearing Wednesday at 9 p. m. on NBC-WNBW in "The Wind Is Ninety." And Olive Deering will be featured with Charlton Heston tonight at 9 in "Hear My Heart Speak" on WNBW

Nine Million TV Sets Is Latest Prediction

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, June 24 (AP).—An Industry official predicts this year's television production will reach between 7,500,000 and 9,000,000 new sets.

This forecast, by H. Ward Zimmer, executive vice president of Sylvania Electric Products Corp., is the highest yet from an official of a major company. It is about double the average of predictions made at the start of the year.

ZIMMER

It would mean this year's output alone would be twice as great as production in all prior years combined, as only about 3,800,000 sets were in use at the end of 1949.

"The whole program has gone at a rate beyond everybody's expectations," says Zimmer, who adds that his own company's sales of tubes for television sets are running double what they were a year ago.

Zimmer reports two strong trends in television sets: A continuing preference by the public for bigger and bigger pictures, and a fast swing from viewing tubes with round faces to rectangular-faced tubes.

Two years ago the 10-inch picture tube was the No. 1 in popularity because of its lower price. Zimmer says that by last year the 12-inch tube took over and now the majority of sets being bought have a tube 16 inches and larger.

"My personal opinion is that the 19-inch will be No. 1 next year," he predicts, adding that the big 19s now are selling within a couple of dollars of what it cost for a 12½-inch tube at the start of last year. His own company is coming out with a 24-inch picture tube and, he says, "I don't believe that's the end by any means on size."

Zimmer says that while prices of sets have been coming down sharply, there has been at the same time "tremendous recent progress in making sets" that give better pictures and are more reliable.

RADIO listeners probably will have to make a lot of changes in their dialing habits to keep up with their favorite programs next fall, and will find several shows missing.

As the annual summer vacation period for the big programs gets under way, plans are very much up in the air for a lot of them.

Fibber McGee and Molly, for instance, went off for the summer without a renewal from their sponsor and no indication whether they would have one in the fall.

Burns and Allen likewise lost their sponsor and their radio plans for fall are uncertain, although they are expected to make their television debut then.

The radio version of the Goldbergs has been dropped by the sponsor and may not be back, although the television version will continue.

Fred Allen has given no hint whether he will end his year-long retirement from radio.

Buddy Rogers' network program will be missing, as he does both radio and television for local stations.

Groucho Marx will switch networks, from CBS to NBC, and may not have his old Wednesday night time.

Ralph Edwards' Truth or Consequences will switch the other way, from NBC to CBS, and be on Tuesdays instead of Saturdays.

Screen Guild Theater, on NBC the past season, will be on ABC in the fall and expand from a half-hour to a one-hour show.

A number of other regulars will be back at their old stands. Among them will be Jack Benny, Bob Hope and Edgar Bergen, although Hope will have a new sponsor, and all three plan to do television shows as well.

Stickers to Identify Visitors to Maine

Augusta, Me.—Two stickers that will identify Maine summer visitors so that citizens of the State can extend hospitality to them, are still being distributed by the Maine Development Commission to public places frequented by visitors.

The stickers, one for luggage and the other to be attached to the rear windows of automobiles, bear the message, "Guest, State of Maine Hospitality Board."

Whistle Stopping

They're Showering Me With Presents

By Orval Hopkins

AN AIRPLANE transportation outfit which I shall call Trans World Airline has been showering me with gifts. First came a small brass shoe, fetchingly inlaid with "TWA" in blue, and reputedly imported from Bombay or some such far-off port. Then came a Father's Day necktie run up by Arrow and showing outline maps of things and airplanes flying over them. My wife dared me to put it on. Then came a little card, bearing my name and place of employment, with "TWA" in flashing white letters on a red border. The whole thing is then laminated in lucite (anyway, that's what a hep friend told me had been done with it) and attached to a little metal key ring.

Obviously these are priceless gifts, and maybe useless as well. I just think maybe TWA isn't really digging. I know a guy, for example, who got a box of ants once from an outfit that was whooping up a movie. Same guy got a perfectly atrocious papier-mache figure of a screen actress. Horrible thing.

On the other hand, Miss Skillet, our food editor, gets wonderful gifts. Once she got a can of whipped cream with a gadget on it which you press it and whipped cream shoots all over everybody. Somebody else here got a pen which would write under water and no place else. Natalie Cladd, the fashion editor, once got a combined compact, lipstick, cigarette case and lighter, handbag and lunchbox with a tiny popup toaster attached. She laughed so hard we nearly had to pump her up.

ALL AMERICAN Airways has made new arrangements to transport passengers by bus from Salisbury to Ocean City, Md. Salisbury is the stopping off place on AA's flight from Washington . . . The Orkney Springs Hotel in West Virginia is again open for the season, according to a note I've received. The Rural Letter Carriers Association is holding its convention there July 6, 7 and 8 . . . Pennsylvania-Reading Seashore Lines has begun direct-to-Atlantic City service operating daily except Sundays. Trains leave Washington at 10 a. m. (EST).

MAN NAMED Henri M. Hall writes in to say we incorrectly identified a picture. Says that under a picture of some girls on a boat we had "Boating Off Ocean City, Md." when it should have been "Enjoying the soft lake breezes on Chautauqua Lake, near Jamestown, N. Y." or something similar. Fact is, Hall's right as rain, and I couldn't begin to explain how it happened. Apologies to New York. And to Ocean City, Md., for that matter.

SEE YOUR TRAVEL AGENT for this one: Fourteen-day air cruise to Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico and Miami Beach. Leave June 30, return July 14. Seven days in the Virgin Islands, two days and a night in San Juan, six days and five nights in Miami Beach. Total cost—$239.50, including tax.

THE LARGEST number of Americans in history will visit Rome as members of official Holy Year pilgrimages during 1950, the American Express-Catholic Travel League . . . Third edition of the Massachusetts Salt Water Fishing guide is now available free at the Massachusetts Development and Industrial commission, 20 Somerset st., Boston 8. It's a pocketsize listing 157 charter boat skippers and boat liveries, charts telling what fish will be running where and when and what bait to use. There are also lists of bait shops, information on fishing derbies, and a map of the coast.

AN OUTFIT called Time, Inc., is issuing a little booklet of 10 tips for travelers overseas. Needless to say, 10 percent of the tips is to read Time . . . Godfrey Davis, Ltd., Hertz Drive-Ur-Self licensee in England, says doubling of the British gasoline tax will not affect auto rental fees in England. Davis, Ltd., will absorb the increase.

If this young lady would move over, you'd get a view of the beach at East Hampton, Long Island, N. Y.

First Horses in 1540

Horses were first introduced in the Southwest in 1540 by the Spanish explorer, Coronado. Cattle and sheep were brought by Spanish colonists in 1598.

Rhododendron Now At Its Peak

Asheville, N. C.— The purple rhododendron in western North Carolina's mountains is at its bloom peak, according to national park and forest rangers.

The time to see the rhododendron in western North Carolina runs from the last week in May until as late as mid-July—but that late you have to do some climbing to catch up with the disappearing spring. White rhododendron blooms from two weeks to a month behind the purples and the flame azalea, closely related in its habits to the rhododendron, will flower along with them. Along with mountain laurel, no section of these highlands are free of them but there are especially good displays on the Roan, Mitchell, Andrews Bald, Craggy Grandfather and Pisgah.

This is one of the "growing" years for rhododendron and bloom is expected to be at only about 30 percent of normal but there will still be good displays. Every third year is a "blooming" year which means that the summer of 1951 will see areas as large as 600 acres a solid mass of color.

Golf All Year 'Round

Many playground sports as well as tennis, golf and swimming may be enjoyed all year in Miami Beach at facilities maintained for public use by the municipality. Two 18-hole golf courses remain open the year-'round.

Miami Beach's Low Hotel Rates and Cool Breezes Attract Summer Vacationers

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.—A mild climate, greatly reduced hotel and apartment rates and a full choice of entertainment facilities make Miami Beach an exceptionally inviting resort for summer vacationers.

Despite the city's southerly location, the cooling effect of oceanborne breezes makes for comfortable living. Weather bureau records give Miami Beach an average temperature of 81 degrees in summer and show that it is rare for the thermometer to climb above 89. Extremes of heat, as well as of cold, are not known here.

Approximately eight miles of beach form the city's Atlantic shoreline. Nearly two miles of these surf-laved sands are maintained for public use in six municipally maintained parks. More miles are used by the oceanfront hotels and cabana clubs, where visitors may find every refinement for leisurely days in swimming and play toss along the shore.

MIAMI BEACH, FLA.—Summer time is play time at Miami Beach, where architects have improved on the natural sands, surf and palms with the luxury of swimming pools and cabanas. The city has eight miles of sandy beach, with nearly two miles reserved for public use in municipal parks.

The city's program of supervised play, open to children of visitors as well as of year-'round residents, has been started on the usual six-day-a-week summer basis. Youngsters may enjoy tennis and other playground games, chess and checker, may study crafts and Spanish and may participate in folk dancing. Story hours are held for the very young. Members of the Miami Beach recreation department supervise all playground activities.

Grown-ups have here their choice of numerous diversions in addition to the ever-popular swimming. Night clubs, theaters and restaurants present afternoon and evening entertainment, while baseball fans may watch play in the Class B Florida International league. Boating on Biscayne Bay and in the ocean has many devotees.

Sightseeing is a pleasant experience for most visitors. In addition to the beautiful homes and estates of Miami Beach winter residents and the luxurious hotels, vacationers may cross to the mainland to view many points of interest. Among these are the landscaped race tracks, the natural beauties of the Everglades National park, the groves of tropical fruit and the displays of colorful tropical bird and animal life.

Miami Beach hotel and apartment rates in summer are one-third or less of those of the mid-winter season. Because more than two-thirds of the city's vast hotel and apartment establishments remain open the year-'round, the summer vacationer will find a wide range of accommodations and prices, and may choose just what fits individual taste and purse.

Vacationers to Miami Beach are advised to bring their golf clubs and fishing rods. These two sports top all others in popularity here in summer, with exception of swimming.

Visitor will find excellent facilities available to them at either of the two 18-hole city-operated golf courses, Bayshore and Normandy Shore. Bayshore is in the heart of the city, its fairways stretching along Alton Road in the Twenties and Thirties.

Normandy Shores dominates one of Miami Beach's 30-odd islands and is in the north section along Biscayne Bay. Both courses have complete clubhouse facilities to which vacationers are welcome.

The sports angler who has never fished in Miami Beach waters has an experience with a capital E awaiting him.

It is agreed generally that fishing is best here in summer, with the sport usually divided into three categories.

The first of these is Gulf Stream trolling. Visitors usually charter one of the many sports cruisers available here for expeditions into the Stream, and have furnished with the boat all tackle required. Sailfish, marlin both white and blue, dolphin, wahoo, bonito are a few of the game fish that may be taken from the blue waters of the Stream. Sails and marlin are considered the prize game fish in this category, because of their spectacular fighting abilities. They make spectacular trophy mounts too and thousand now adorn offices, clubs and dens throughout the United States.

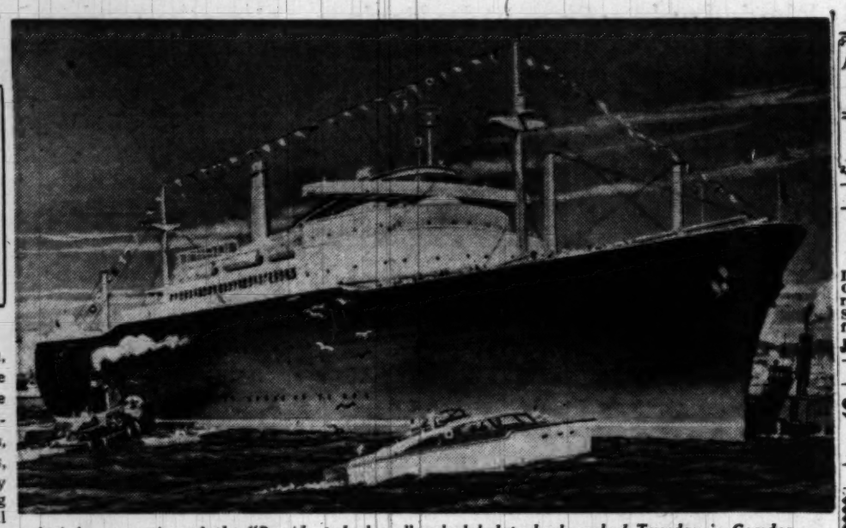
Short Story

LINCOLN, NEBR., (AP).—The monthly bulletin of the Nebraska Resources Division, "Nebraska on the March," contains an article on Nebraska's attractions as a vacation land. L. J. Bible, editor of the publication, is on vacation—in Minnesota.

Portuguese Riviera

Estoril, a suburb of Lisbon, situated at the mouth of the Tegus River on the Portuguese Riviera, and blessed with a semi-tropical climate, sandy beaches, splendid casino and fine hotels, is rapidly gaining in popularity as an all-year resort, according to Thos. Cook & Son. Estoril offers a rich variety of activities to visitors, including sailboating, swimming, golf and fishing, in addition to the nightly glitter of the casino.



Artist's conception of the "President Jackson," scheduled to be launched Tuesday in Camden, N. J. She'll join the American President Lines' fleet next January. The new ship, built at a cost of approximately 12 million dollars, will accommodate 204 passengers, all first class, and will call at 25 ports in 14 countries on each of her 86-day world cruises. Boston, New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco are scheduled U. S. stops

Nova Scotia Lures Travel Amid History

NEW YORK.—The colorful influence of French, German and Colonial American cultures highlights a new series of American Express 9-day summer cruise-tours of Nova Scotia, starting from New York today.

A sightseeing program in Boston and an overnight cruise via Eastern Steamship Lines is followed by six days of motorcoach exploration, with visits to Old Acadia and the Land of Evangeline, the county of Lunenberg, founded by Hanoverians, and numerous towns settled by New Englanders.

Following the cruise from Boston, tour members reach Yarmouth, named by settlers from Yarmouth, Mass., in 1759, where aspects of architecture and old stone fences give a distinctive colonial flavor. Along Nova Scotia's rugged South Shore, is Barrington, settled by Cape Cod and Nantucket residents and noted for its Old Meeting House and Stockades.

Shelburne, where tall clocks, numerous objects of pewter and carved chairs and secretaries of the finest walnut reveal the full flowering of Yankee crafts, was settled in 1783 during one of history's great migrations, when more than 10,000 persons arrived from the United States.

The tour party passes one of the country's oldest covered bridges of colonial style at Horton, where residents of New London, Stonington and Saybrook, Conn., arrived in 1760. Nearby is Greenwich, founded by 7000 persons from Lynne, Norwich, Saybrook, Hebron, New London, Lebanon, Colchester, Hollingsworth, Stonington, Windham and Windsor. Colonial American influence also lives in the cities of Weymouth (named for Weymouth, Mass.) and Windsor, where the phenomenal tides of the Bay of Fundy are seen. A visit is made to Wilmot, where many thousands of New Englanders arrived in 1783, among them the decendants of John Alden and his wife Priscilla.

Hanoverian Influence

IN the dialects of many of its people and in their daily living habits tour members will see the influence of the Hanoverians who settled the county of Lunenberg in 1751-53. Home of one of the world's greatest deepsea fishing fleets, the colorful port of Lunenberg strongly reflects in numerous relics the early life of the pioneers from the Palatinate.

Make Visit to U. N. a 'Must'

By A. I. Goldberg

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., (AP). If you're coming to New York on your vacation, a visit to the new United Nations headquarters here is a must on your sightseeing list.

The building of this new international capital are handy to the center of town, right on the East River banks, and when the sun comes up over East 42d st. and slants through the 5400 windowwalls in the 39-story Secretarial Building, it's a sight to remember.

The structure is an artichectural eye-smacker, a huge glass-paneled box rearing high over the 17-acre headquarters site that used to be New York's slaughterhouse and meat packing district.

Its 39 stories are no record, but there are only about 30 taller buildings in the city. It towers over a plaza as big as the Place de la Concorde in Paris and is surrounded by walks along the East River like the embankment in London. That makes the building a piece of dramatic architecture which appears taller than it is.

Strong Lure

FOR the main tourist attraction, the buildings will house men and women from three-score nations—as well as more than 3000 U. N. secretariat workers.

This polyglot mixture of the world's people and the way they tackle world problems always has been a strong tourist lure. Visitors stream out to the temporary U. N. headquarters at Lake Success, 18 miles out of Manhattan, at the rate of 1000 a day. The rate should rise greatly with headquarters so handy to hotels.

The Secretariat building will be occupied and operating by 1951. A little later, the auditorium housing the General Assembly and the meeting hall for U. N. councils and committees will be ready for tourists.

You may think that the outside of the assembly hall looks like a hot-air conduction vent, a wind-tunnel, or the soundbox of an old-style graphophone.

Wallace K. Harrison, chief architect of the internatonal board that designed the buildings, isn't disturbed by such descriptions.

"Contours of a sound box," he mused. "Is that bad?"

He Worked Up

HARRISON is a rangy 54-year-old native of Worcester, Mass., who worked up from architect's office boy and helped build Rockefeller Center. He's old enough to vow that this is his last big job and to develop a philosophy. He says a lot of philosophy is mixed into the batch of concrete, steel, glass and marble going into the buildings.

"You can say this is the first monumental skyscraper ever built," he says. "It's also the first government grouping in a metropolis which provides all the services of a city except living quarters.

"Those solid north and south walls, all Vermont marble without a single glass opening, make it a monument.

"It's something new in building—technics developed during the war were used in putting up its walls. What we did was to put up glass walls prefabricated in 4 by 12 foot panels, hanging them on the structure, instead of building a structure stone by stone."

Harrison stresses the newest thing about the building is that it was built on the concept of a single man—"how he moves, sits, works, eats."

Harrison said, "We built out and up from this single human being. We figured the distance he has to sit from a window to make the best use of light. We figured that he is six feet tall and has a seat two feet wide. That determined not only how he sat down but how we had to move him in elevators."

For a Buck You Can Go in Berne

BERNE: John D. Smith from the United States had been told that Switzerland, owing to the fact that no devaluation took place here, was an "expensive" country. Well, he realized that this is not true when he spent a lovely evening at Berne, federal capital of Switzerland, on a budget of Fr. 4.30, exactly one American dollar. He saw a brand-new American movie, went to a cafe, listened to a gypsy orchestra, had a beer and a delicious Swiss "light" supper, tipped the waiter just as he had been told—10 percent—and went to his hotel by streetcar, passing Berne's famous Clock Tower at the stroke of midnight, which gave him a chance to see and hear the carillon—for free, of course.

Admiral's 11th Year

Cape May, N. J.—Fronting on the ocean, the 300-room, fireproof Admiral is now open for the eleventh season under the same management. Keynoting its 1950 season with the slogan, "Economy at the Seashore," the Admiral offers many facilities. Huge verandas overlooking the ocean, private swimming pool, cocktail lounge, surf bar, tennis court, bowling alleys, golf, fishing, cycling, boating, music, dancing and theater.

110 Bedroom Suites

Biltmore House, George Vanderbilt Estate at Asheville, N. C., contains 110 bedroom suites. It requiries around five hours to visit all the rooms in the house.

There's more than the wild waves a-callin' vacationists to Ocean City, N. J. The above is a typical mermaid in native costume

Two 7-Day Tours To Canada Set

AN all-expense, seven-day Pilgrim Tour to theSaguenay River, as well as to Montreal, Quebec, Ste. Anne de Baupre and the Larentian Mountains, at a cost of $141, plus tax, has just been announced by the New Haven Railroad.

This tour, which is of marked interest during Holy Year because of the visit to Ste. Anne de Beaupre and Brother Andre's Shrine, is scheduled twice during the summer. Parties will leave New York at 9:30 a. m. on Saturday, July 15, and again on Saturday, August 19, arriving back in New York on the evening of the following Friday.

Vacationists will stay at the Mount Royal in Montreal and either the Chateau Frontenac or the Clarendon in Quebec.

American Mountains Favored As No. 1 Vacation Attraction

UNCLE SAM'S National Park System expects to play host to 13 million tourists this season. That is to say, one out of every dozen Americans.

Most popular of the scenic attractions offered are the mountain reservations which alone look for almost eight million sightseers, notes the National Geographic Society.

Judging by 1949 records, more than a million visitors will journey through the Great Smoky and Shenandoah sections of the Appalachian Mountain chain, while Acadia National Park in Maine will draw about a half million to enjoy the rugged granite beauty of Mount Desert Island.

For the rest of the mountain vacationers it will be westward ho. The big drawing cards there, in order of popularity, are the national parks of Rocky Mountain, Colorado; Yellowstone in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho; Mount Rainier, Washington; Yosemite, California; Glacier, Montana; Lassen Volcanic, California; Grand Teton, Wyoming, and Big Bend, Texas.

Springs Preferred

OFFICIAL figures disclose, however, that the mountains have not always been as popular as they are now. During the horse-and buggy days of the century's first decade the American people seemed to prefer the milder attractions of such spas as Hot Springs, Ark., and Platt National Park in southern Oklahoma.

The reputed medicinal value of the Government-controlled Hot Springs waters drew more visitors than all the national parks combined in 1910. But, as President Taft pointed out at the time, Yellowstone National Park was then the only park—among the Nation's many "wondrous manifestations of nature"—that was adequately prepared to accommodate the public.

With the creation of the National Park Service in 1917, Rocky Mountain National Park leaped to the front of the popularity list, followed closely by Yellowstone and Yosemite. The boom years of the 1920's ushered in a new era for all the national parks.

Forests Popular

THE AUTOMOBILE, improved roads and ready cash drew millions instead of the previous thousands to the parks. Despite the economic depression of the thirties, their appeal as vacation spots continued to grow. Attendance more than doubled between 1931 and 1940, with two new parks—the Great Smoky Mountains and Shenandoah—drawing the lion's share of the visitors.

Second in popularity to the mountains are parks featuring primeval forests and lakes, among them Crater Lake, Oregon; Olympic, Washington; Sequoia, California; Isle Royale, Michigan; Everglades, Florida, and Hawaii, Territory of Hawaii.

Hot Springs and Platt are expected to draw a million and a half visitors; and so are the four canyon parks—Grand Canyon, Arizona; Bryce Canyon and Zion, Utah, and Kings Canyon, California. The three cavern parks—Carlsbad Caverns, New Mexico; Mammoth Cave, Kentucky, and Wind Cave, South Dakota—with unique Mesa Verde in Colorado, complete the top list of vacation magnets.

Go Get the Key

The restored one-room schoolhouse where Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross, taught, may be viewed by visitors who go to 124 East Burlington st. in Bordentown, N. J., to obtain the key.

Young Anglers Get Tarpon Stage

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., June 24.—Adult anglers in the St. Petersburg Tarpon Round-up on June 27 will yield to young fry when the Jaycees stage their annual Kids Day.

On that day no adult entries will be accepted, and all guide boats wil be free to youngsters between 8 and 13 who want to fish for tarpon. Prizes for the children will be awarded on same basis as all Round-up awards.

As the tarpon rodeo goes into the eighth of its 11-week run, Pete Petry is leading the open division with a 153-pound entry; H. T. Willard of Hopewell, Va., was leader of the seventh week; H. A. LeMasters led the light tackle division with a 90-pound tarpon; Rex Cole, jr., headed the light-light division with a 119-pounder; Jim Kelly had a 2.11 tarpon to lead the flyrod division; Jimmy Mastry's 128-pound tarpon scored in the rowboat entries, and Dorothy Kelly's 131-pounder held top billing in the women's division.

A New Way to Reduce

FOR GENERATIONS, figure-conscious women have been fighting their never-ending Battle of the Bulge. Latest weapon in this fight was introduced recently by Bill Allen, a champion drum major who is working his way through the University of Miami by teaching Florida women how to fight fat by twirling a baton. This, says Allen, will reduce waistlines more effectively than a week-end in a Turkish bath. Here, with Marjorie Hunter, he shows how it's done.

This basic split will develop legs, take excess poundage off waist.

The Turning Point

Bob Smithdas matches Helen Keller's record

A SLENDER YOUNG FELLOW named Robert J. Smithdas walked firmly down the center aisle of his college auditorium a few days ago, and reached out for a brand new Bachelor of Arts diploma.

Nothing exceptional in that scene.

But Bob Smithdas wasn't like other college students ending four years of academic toil.

In the first place, he's totally blind and completely deaf.

In the second place, the A.B. degree handed him by St. John's University in Brooklyn, N. Y., is the first college degree won by a deaf and blind person since Helen Keller received hers just 50 years ago. (Miss Keller's 70th birthday is this Tuesday.)

He's a Poet, Too

Those two reasons alone make Bob Smithdas' graduation a personal triumph. And even they don't include the fact that he's a qualified Red Cross swimmer, a member of the wrestling team at St. John's, something of a poet, and the author of at least one article published by a national magazine.

Nor do they tell anything of the years-long struggle Bob Smithdas has had to win his degree.

"As a child, I could see and hear normally," he said recently. "But when I was six, spinal meningitis left me blind and deaf. I was too small at first to know what that meant. But before long I could tell that I was going to have to fight if I were going to be like other boys —the boys I could dimly remember having seen and talked to."

What's next for Bob Smithdas? "First, a speaking tour to help other people handicapped as I am," he says. "After that, I don't know—except for this: my life's great ambition is to be a leader in rehabilitation of the deaf-blind."

Battle against Hunger

By KARL KOHRS

ONE THOUSAND five hundred miles due north of Chicago, a primitive Eskimo tribe was emerging this week from a desperate battle for life.

From November to March, some 300 Padlemuits, the most primitive people on the North American continent, fought a battle against starvation. Reason: this year, the caribou migration bypassed Padlei, the Eskimo community in the Canadian Northwest Territories.

The pictures of the Padlemuits on this and the following pages are the first to come out of the Arctic. They were taken for PARADE by Richard Harrington on a 700-mile trek during which he almost lost his life in a blizzard.

When the caribou did not come to the Padlei country, natives had no meat for themselves and their dogs. There were no skins to replace tattered parkas, mittens and boots. Lack of warm clothing brought on sickness. When dogs weakened, died, Eskimos could not reach the trading post (see next page) many miles away.

Help finally came when the Canadian Government flew plane-loads of food to the Padlemuits. Best news came recently: the June caribou migration at last is moving into the Padlei area.

AT 50 BELOW, two Padlemuits struggle home over wind-scoured snow with last of caribou cache on sleds.

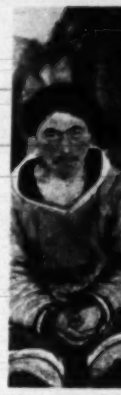
1. All meat from his caribou cache eaten, this Eskimo hoards picked-over bones.

2. All dogs dead, native reaches Padlei trading post on foot in blizzard.

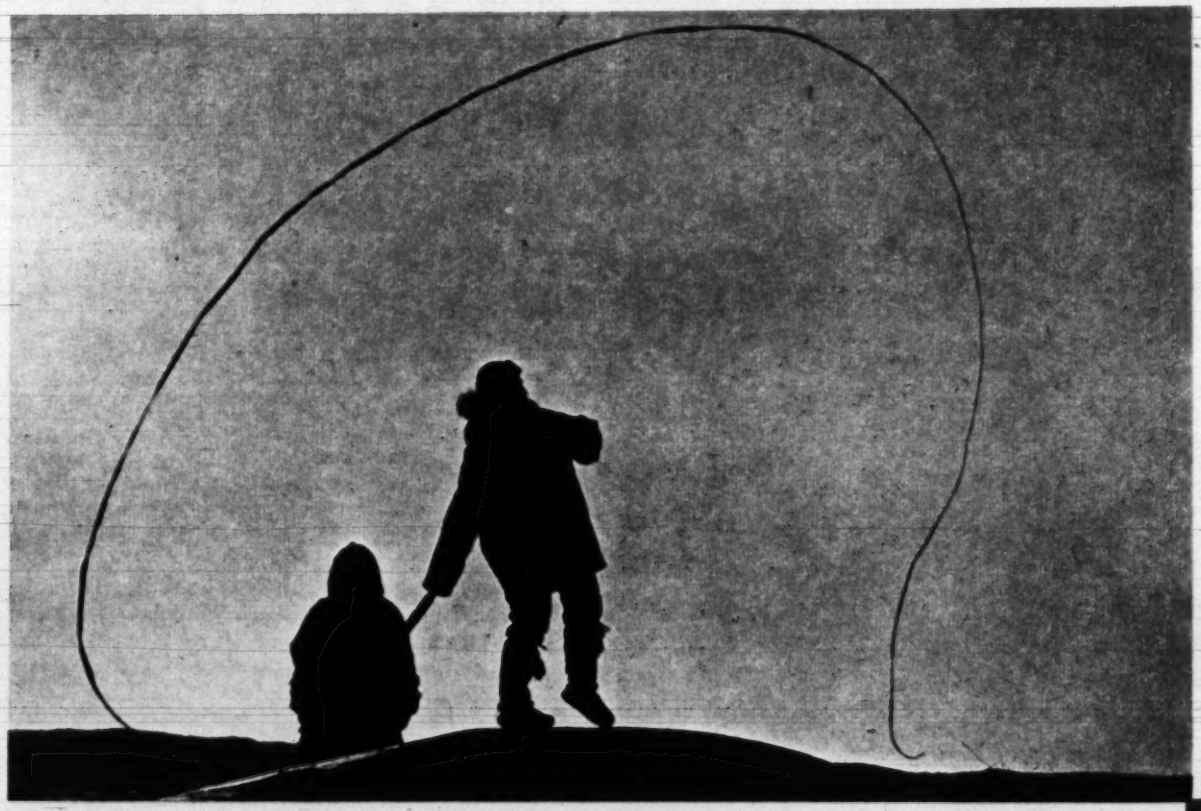
3. Barehanded in cold (mittens are worn out), girl gnaws bone.

4. Starving dog fell in harness, died on trail. Eskimos never shoot dogs.



5. Wan … had s…

Starvation plagues the Eskimo . . .



A 38-foot dog whip! With it, Eskimo standing on back of sled can clip lead dog's ear.

IT WAS SO COLD when Photographer Harrington mushed into the Padlemuit country from Churchill, Man., that he nearly perished. His dogs kept going however and brought him through. For days the thermometer hovered between 50 and 60 below zero, while 25-mile-an-hour winds scooped up clouds of snow.

As Harrington neared Padlei, signs of starvation were grimly apparent.

"Reached the tiniest igloo yet," he noted in his diary. "Outside, a single, mangy starving dog. Inside, a small woman with baby in clumsy clothes, some caribou bones in a corner. She speaks to me. I believe she said they were starving . . . they were out of nearly everything. We left tea, matches, kerosene, biscuits, and went on."

A Caribou at Last

He found other Padlemuits (pronounced pad-luh-mewts) suffering in the same way. Harrington later wrote:

"One woman was delousing her baby and eating the lice. She and her husband

5. Wan with hunger, this Eskimo family was lucky, had slim caribou cache, fed their neighbors.

6. A caribou shot at last! When first one seen in weeks came near Padlei, natives pounced on it.

7. On windy burial knoll, Eskimo visits grave of an old woman. Rocks are piled on grave to keep wolves away.

but he is happy in sub-zero world had been through an ordeal . . . for days without food, without warmth, wearing grimy, greasy caribou clothes which have lost all hair . . . last dog died . . . Husband is a young man, but looks haggard now, hardly moves . . ."

Finally, though, the husband saw and frantically shot a caribou (see photograph above) and the family gorged for several days.

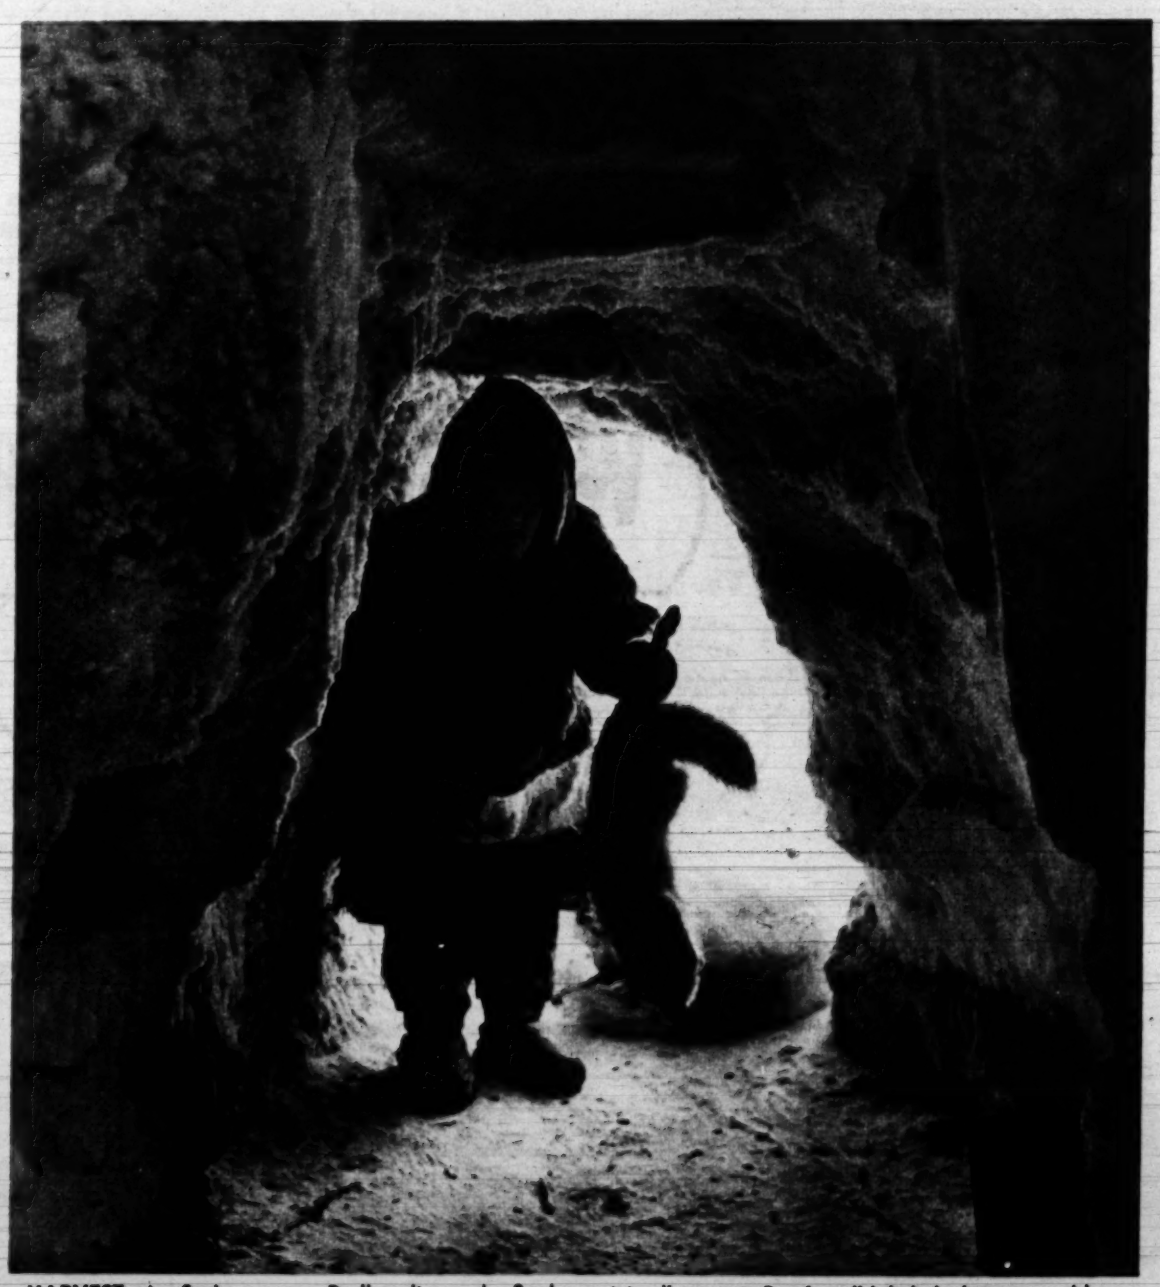
Each Family Needs One Caribou a Day

Canada has helped by decreeing that natives may shoot all the caribou they need. Normally, a family of six, with five dogs to feed, needs one caribou a day!

Despite hardships, the Padlemuit remains serene and unworried. He has starved before and survived – and will again.

"To the Eskimo," says Photographer Harrington, "the Arctic isn't a cold, desolate wasteland. It's home. He's happy because he is adjusted to the country. He has no neuroses, no ulcers. I don't think a Padlemuit knows how to worry!

ESKIMO TOY: Boys lashed kayak frame together with caribou sinew, later made hull of caribou skin.



HARVEST: As Spring came, Padlemuits made final round of traps, collected Arctic fox, Eskimo "money" at trading post. But fox didn't help hunger problem. It is inedible, even dogs shun it unless starving.

HOOSIER LEGISLATOR: Philip Willkie resembles his father as he sits in the still, empty chamber of the Indiana House of Representatives.

There's a new

No strict GOP "party-liner," Wendell Willkie's son

LAST WEEK, PARADE reported on the career of the son of a famous Democratic father, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. Here's a close-up of a Republican son, Philip Willkie.

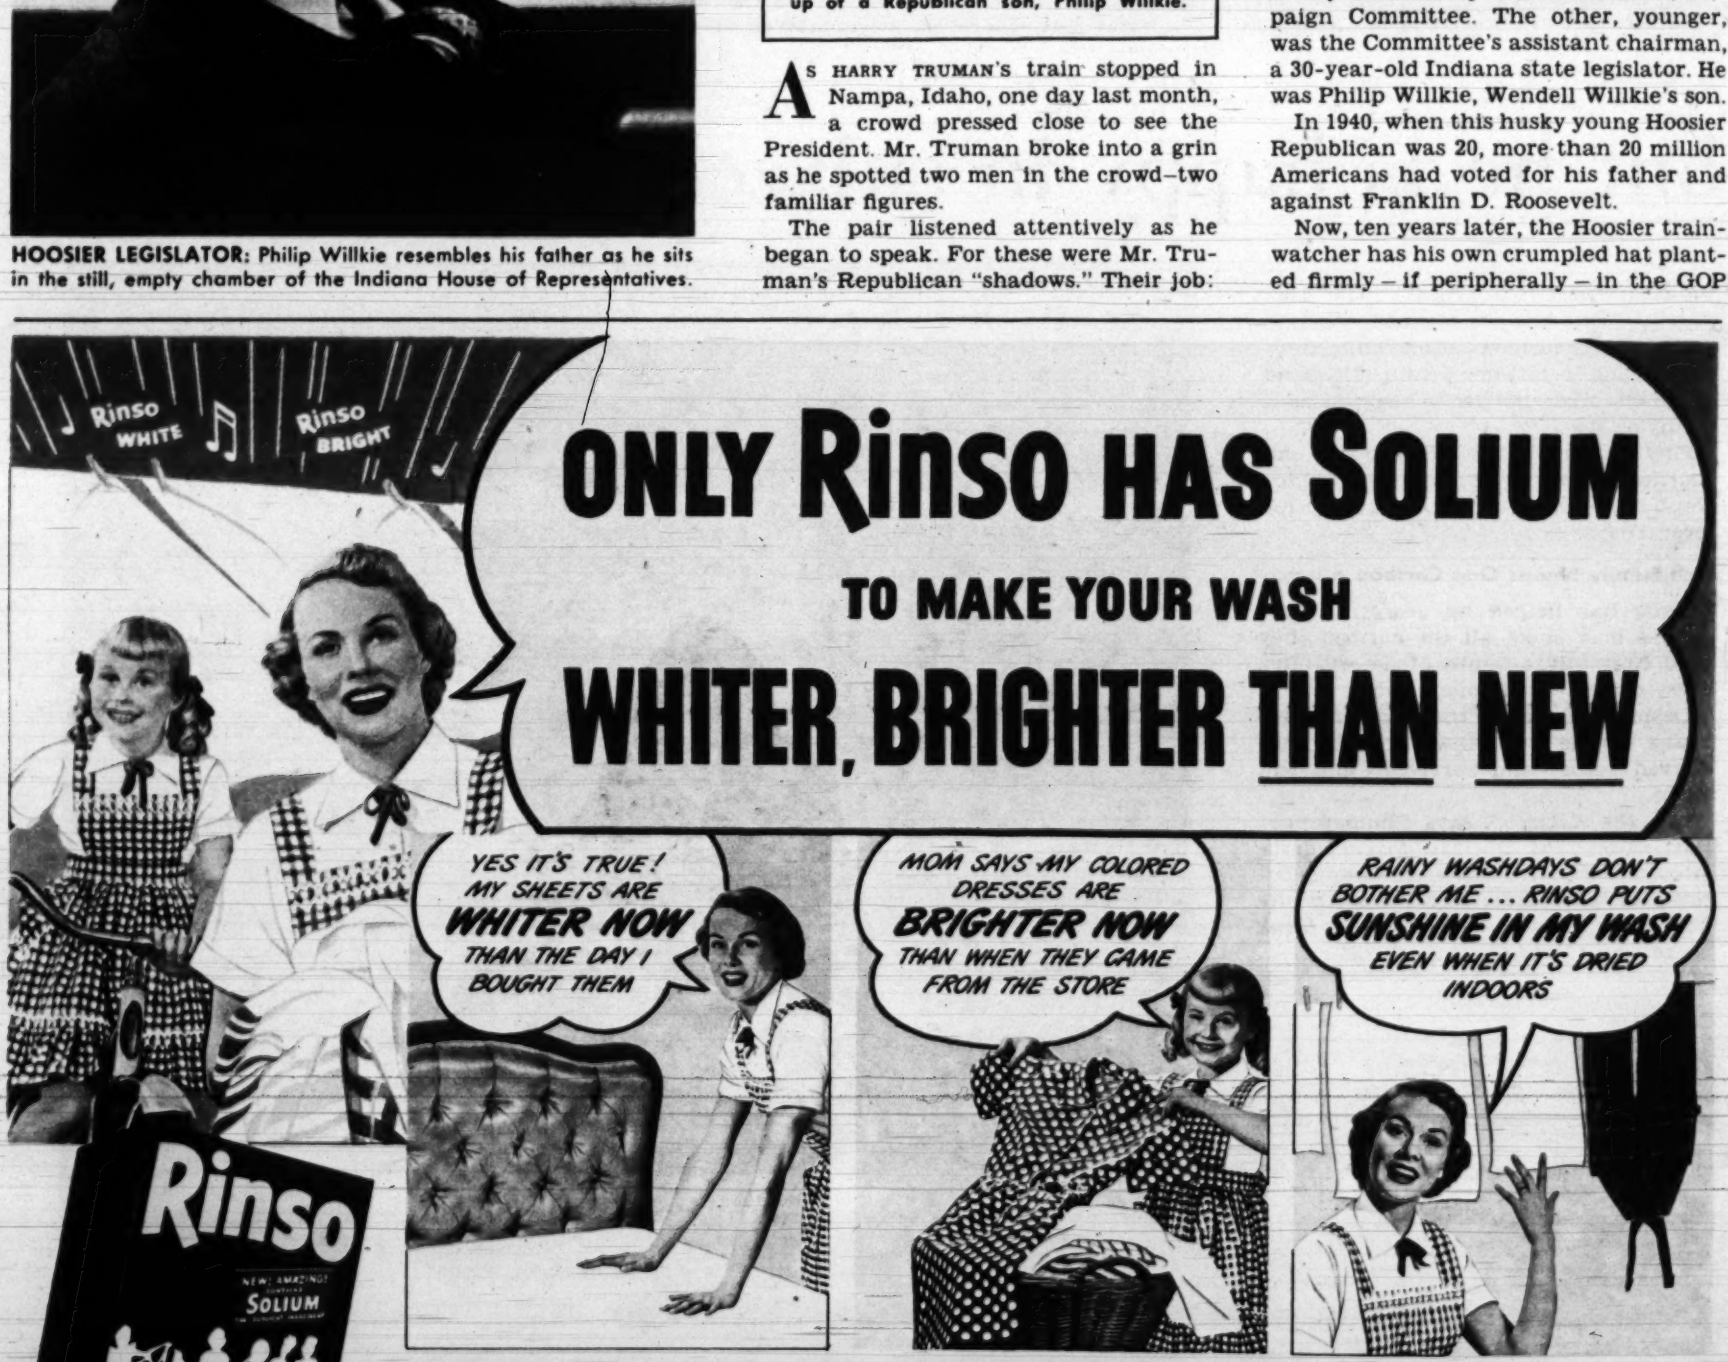
As HARRY TRUMAN's train stopped in Nampa, Idaho, one day last month, a crowd pressed close to see the President. Mr. Truman broke into a grin as he spotted two men in the crowd–two familiar figures.

The pair listened attentively as he began to speak. For these were Mr. Truman's Republican "shadows." Their job: to look, to listen–and to report on his tour to GOP headquarters in Washington.

One was Victor Johnson, executive secretary of the Republican Senate Campaign Committee. The other, younger, was the Committee's assistant chairman, a 30-year-old Indiana state legislator. He was Philip Willkie, Wendell Willkie's son.

In 1940, when this husky young Hoosier Republican was 20, more than 20 million Americans had voted for his father and against Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Now, ten years later, the Hoosier train-watcher has his own crumpled hat planted firmly – if peripherally – in the GOP



BY ARTHUR SHAY

Willkie in Indiana

Philip has a political future—if he wants one . . .

ring. It's a long political climb from the Indiana capitol at Indianapolis – and a station platform in Idaho – to the national scene. But it's a climb friends believe Philip Willkie can make – if he wants.

It was no accident that he quit the bright lights of the east to cut his political teeth at the grass roots level in the Indiana legislature.

"A man," Wendell Willkie once told his son, "has to succeed in state politics before he can be of consequence in the national picture."

Philip took the advice. In 1948 he went from New York back home to Rushville to seek the GOP nomination to the Indiana legislature. His opponent was an 80-year-old Republican wheelhorse, popular Raymond C. Morgan.

Willkie's door-to-door campaigning, his handshaking, dog-patting and back-fence chatting paid off. Republican voters of Rush and Henry Counties gave him better than 84 percent of the primary vote. Even Morgan was impressed.

"Half the places I go," he said during the campaign, "he's been there. The other half – he is there. I'm afraid to go to sleep tonight for fear I'll find him under the bed!"

"If We lose the Farm Vote . . ."

WHEN THE ELECTION rolled around, Willkie beat the Democratic entry by 5,000 votes.

As legislator, his record has been about par for the course: newcomers aren't expected to hog the spotlight, and he has shrewdly refrained from sowing political wild oats. A Navy veteran, he was one of six members of the Indiana House to vote against the veterans' bonus. He has yet to introduce a bill of his own.

But if he hasn't made brash noises, that doesn't mean he has nothing to say.

When he speaks, it's in a low key, with a natural twang and drawl. "I'm a Rushville farmer from the streets of New York," he likes to say.

As a politician, he is about the most indefatigable luncheon club speaker most Hoosiers can remember. And, like his father, he's as likely to lecture his own party as dig at the Democrats. Typical sallies:

- Of the President: "I don't think we should call Harry Truman a man following an ideology. To hear some Republican speeches you would think Truman was a crusader . . . He is just a man trying to keep the best job he ever had."
- About the GOP: "If we lose the farm vote, all we'll have left is the social register."
- About Democrats: "Don't call them socialists. They aren't . . . Call them conservatives. That's what they are. Their only solution is government and more government."
- About "plain talk": "President McKinley talked about the full dinner pail and things plain people understood. Republicans then didn't talk like a convention of bankers."

"He'd make a Good Husband"

MORE AND MORE, young Willkie sounds like a man who wants votes. And if his penchant for GOP soul-searching has not endeared him to some party stalwarts – his prestige in his home counties has not been lost on local leaders. It's sufficient, observers believe, to send him to Congress any time he chooses to run.

Willkie goes to great lengths to point out that the ideas he propounds are his own. He discourages the thought that he's anyone's protege.

"My mother has taught me a great deal about getting along with people," he says.

He has called Senator Robert Taft "the ablest man in public life," and when he visits the east he usually drops in on Senator Owen Brewster of Maine. He also admires Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., of Massachusetts.

When he's not "politicking" Willkie oversees his mother's six Rushville farms. He's also vice president of the Rushville National Bank.

"Lots of people probably think I'm a millionaire, or that my family is," he says. "This farm land is most of what mother owns, and I have about enough money of my own to buy a good home in a good residential district."

To date, bachelor Willkie hasn't bought that home. He lives in two rented rooms in the Rushville house that was his father's headquarters.

His social life is a matter of fits and starts. "He'd make some nice girl a good husband if he'd stand still for a while," a woman acquaintance remarked recently.

Ten years ago President Roosevelt refused to debate Wendell Willkie. Not long ago, a radio network asked Philip Willkie to debate young FDR., Jr., now a Democratic Congressman from New York. Willkie accepted.

But the broadcast didn't come off, reportedly because young Roosevelt asked, "Why should I make him a big shot?"

And the blunt truth, according to Willkie's friends is that he isn't a big shot, outside Rushville, yet. But the day isn't far off, his closest supporters believe, when he may be!

SHADOWING the President (and learning?), young Willkie followed Truman on trip west.

REPUBLICAN Chairman Walter Norris of Rush County offers some advice to young Willkie.

LUNCHEON CLUBS are Willkie's best sounding boards. He's an indefatigable speaker.

WILLKIE supervises one of mother's Rushville farms. Tenant Joe Kramer does the farming.

MARY SLEETH, town's former librarian, is "second mother" to young Willkie in Rushville.

When Toddlers Entertain...

SET A CHILD'S TABLE with paper table mats, accessories and dishes; a toy at each place. Skip flowers, substitute balloons and provide a paper hat for each child.

By BETH MERRIMAN PARADE'S FOOD EDITOR

MOTHERS of the toddler set will bless you if you serve party food that won't upset small stomachs! You can feature strained baby fruits prepared in party style, served in individual portions. Arrowroot wafers and animal crackers are a popular accompaniment and much more desirable than a rich cake.

Molded Fruit Salad

1 envelope unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
1 (4½ oz.) can strained peaches
1 (4¼ oz.) can strained apricots-with-farina
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ cup orange juice

Soften gelatine in cold water 5 minutes. Combine fruits; heat gently; stir into softened gelatine until dissolved. Stir in fruit juices. Pour into 5 individual molds; chill until firm. Store in refrigerator until serving time. Unmold, top with animal crackers.

Party Fruit Sherbet

2 cans strained apricots-with-farina OR plums-with-tapioca
2 tablespoons orange juice
¼ cup sugar
2 egg whites

Blend fruit, lemon juice and sugar. Fold in stiffly-beaten egg whites. Blend well; spoon into paper cups, set in refrigerator tray which has been lined with waxed paper. Freeze until firm. Yield: 6 to 8 servings.

No odor, no scouring.

AUTO-SCREEN: A window screen that fits any car window is designed for the sportsman, camper or motorist who sleeps in his car overnight while on vacation trips. It snaps in and out readily without bolts or nuts. $3.95.

Shaped like a barrel, a new ICE CONTAINER of spongy rubber keeps cubes from melting for several hours. Its flexibility allows you to separate cubes that stick together. About 7" high, it holds 1½ trays of cubes. $4.95.

TRIKE-HITCH: Fun for tots who own tricycles is a device easily attached just above the rear axle so wagons and wheeled toys can be hitched on back. It's said to avoid broken spokes and damaged wagon handles that result from home-made string or rope hitches. 89¢.

Novel innovation is a HARMONICA that sounds like a whole band. Secret: a built-on amplifying horn perks up volume, lets even a beginner produce tone blends. 89¢.

COMPACT ALUMINUM COT for campers and sportsmen, good too for beach and lawn use, is similar to usual wooden cots but weighs only 8 lbs., does not split, warp.

NOTE: Prices quoted above are approximate, may vary somewhat in different localities. Send no money to PARADE. For names and addresses of manufacturers, send inquiries with stamped, self-addressed envelope to Parade of Progress, PARADE, 405 Lexington Ave., New York 17, N. Y.

RHODA MANN, 22, "only girl in Howdy Doody's life," pulls strings for impish pal.

Howdy Doody's Mama

By KAY SULLIVAN

SMALL-FRY studio visitors to the Howdy Doody television show (NBC-TV, Mon.-Fri. 5:30 to 6 p.m. EDT) often spot pretty Rhoda Mann high on a catwalk operating Howdy's all-important puppet strings.

"That's Howdy's mama," they holler. Or, "Hello, Mrs. Doody!"

Miss Mann, who looks as though she should be a high school freshman instead of a major (if unknown) TV figure, acknowledges the calls proudly.

"Howdy may be the star of the show," she jests, "but remember, he never makes a move without me!"

To maneuver Howdy, Rhoda has to climb up a little ladder and stand on a platform about two feet wide and fourteen feet high. Down below, in the camera range, are Howdy, his puppet friends and his voice and master of ceremonies, Bob Smith. While Bob and the freckle-faced cowboy converse, Rhoda deftly works the twelve long strings that control Howdy's head, arms and legs. It's hard work but Rhoda has had 12 years of practice. She was 10 when her father brought her home a puppet doll for Christmas.

Rhoda, whose fingers are insured for $1,000, can work two puppets simultaneously but says Howdy is three handsful. On one show, Howdy was playing his piano and singing. Rhoda used one hand to operate his mouth, the other for his hands. The song was spirited; Howdy fell off the bench. Rhoda quickly reached down and pulled his back strings with her teeth to restore him to his bench.

Other Girl-Puppet Teams

Rhoda is just one of several young women who have successfully combined puppets and television. Fran Allison exchanges delightful banter with a wistful puppet named Kukla and a friendly dragon, on the "Kukla, Fran and Ollie" show (NBC-TV). "Judy Splinters" on the same network, is a vivacious little puppet controlled by Shirley Dinsdale.

Ireene Wicker narrates fairy stories with ABC-TV's "Suzari Marionettes," changing her voice for each marionette, and Doris Brown, for almost two years the narrator on CBS-TV's "Lucky Pup" show, says she has worked so long with puppets, she has stage fright in front of human beings!

Rhoda's expressions match Howdy Doody's activities

Now, Howdy, stand up straight.

Poor boy, did someone hurt you?

Howdy, please don't jump so!

Notes about notables, a nudist convention and some sign-writers' contributions to modern living . . .

MARITAL NEWS: Mr. Frank Sinatra, of Hollywood, should have no difficulty with that Spanish bullthrower vying for the hand of pretty Ava Gardner. Where Mr. Sinatra comes from, bull-throwing isn't an occupation – it's an occupational disease . . .

Those rumors in Washington that Speaker Sam Rayburn and Mrs. Pearl Mesta might marry were confusing right from the start. I always thought the Minister wanted to become an Ambassador – not the Speaker of the House . . .

I hate to mention this, folks, but in Portland, Ore., Mrs. Rowena B. Marriage recently won a divorce from Mr. Marriage . . .

THE NUDE DEAL: A nudist colony in Palmerton, Pa., has built a landing field so fellow nudists from all over the nation can drop in for a July convention . . . I didn't think nudists observed any conventions . . .

The accepted formal attire for an airborne male nudist, in case you care, is white tie and parachute . . .

The distaff member wears a birthday suit featuring the fashionable plunging neckline that plunges all the way down to the ankles . . .

Aside to radio editors: I've been assured the Nudist's Convention will positively NOT be televised!!!

VOLUNTEER workers sort out plastic frames. Metal frames, sold for scrap, pay for new glasses.

PARADE READERS have (1) generous hearts, (2) plenty of old spectacles around the house.

After PARADE's recent picture-story report on "New Eyes for the Needy, Inc." (an organization which collects discarded glasses for people who can't afford them), an avalanche of glasses flooded the Short Hills, N. J. headquarters of the group.

Ten thousand pairs of spectacles of every description—some very old, some brand new, some for children—came from all parts of the U.S.! Many were wrapped in PARADE's article.

More Glasses Needed!

Wrote one donor: "I was keeping these gold spectacles as a memento of my mother, but I know she'd want to help others, so here they are!"

A Montpelier, Vt., farm woman sent in 43 pairs of glasses which she rounded up from relatives and friends. Many people passed on glasses their children had outgrown, to help other youngsters.

"New Eyes" still needs glasses. Send them to New Eyes for the Needy, Inc., Short Hills 4, N. J.

"Fame Map" prepared by Prof. Gove of DePauw University shows predominant type of fame in each state.

Can you find yourself on this . . .

MAP OF FAME?

By ERNEST La FRANCE

MANY A PROUD new parent, sure of his offspring's rise to some sort of fame, has idly wondered, "What will he (or she) be some day?"

According to Professor George W. Gove, of Indiana's DePauw University and an organization called Biography Research Service, it may all be a matter of geography.

After 15 years studying the vital statistics of fame he feels he can predict, fairly accurately, what kind of famous people any state is apt to produce.

The Road from North Hero

Granting he is destined for fame in the first place, is a boy from, say Fossil, Mont., as apt to find it in baseball as a lad from Swanquarter, N.C.? Is a beautiful girl from North Hero, Vt., as apt to end up in Hollywood as her counterpart in Throckmorton, Texas?

Not according to Prof. Gove's statistics, which are based on his study of the birthplaces of 10,000 famous people. The bound-for-fame Tarheel has several strikes on the Montanan in baseball, and the Lone Star beauty is ahead for movies.

Theoretically, all Americans are born with an equal chance at fame. They can be poets or captains-of-industry. Actually, says Prof. Gove, a combination of factors, including climate, opportunity and precedent, upset the odds from state to state.

In the case of Texas, 41 Lone Star beauties, including Joan Crawford, Ann Sheridan, Linda Darnell, and Mary Martin have blazed a trail to Hollywood. A movie-mad Vermonter would get little local encouragement, if any. For fewer than one in 100 famous Vermonters goes Hollywood. In Texas the ratio is 27 in 100.

Climate, which gives southern states a far longer sports season, has made the South and Southwest a reliable source of baseball, golf, and swimming stars. Texas, most versatile sports state of all, has produced baseball's Rogers Hornsby, golf's Byron Nelson, tennis' Willmer Allison, track's Charlie Paddock, polo's Cecil Smith, and the great, all-around Babe Didrickson Zaharias. Some 21% of great Texans are great in sports, as compared to only 4½% in literature, 2½% in industry, 8% in politics, and about 11% in music.

To the west, the area around Long Beach and Los Angeles seems to produce great tennis stars (Vines, Kramer, Riggs, Gonzales, and the Bundy family). It also produced more child movie stars. California has contributed 74% of its great to some form of sport or entertainment.

Coaches from Minnesota

To the north of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas for some reason turn out a big crop of baseball pitchers (Allie Reynolds, Dizzy Dean, Preacher Roe, Harry Brecheen and Lon Warneke).

Farther north, Minnesota breeds college football coaches: Bernie Bierman, Gil Dobie, Dick Hanley, Stub Allison and Clark Shaughnessy (the last two from the same town, St. Cloud) are only a few of a dozen.

Iowa produces famous wrestlers (Frank Gotch and Joe Stecher). Florida and Akron, Ohio, produce champ swimmers such as Katherine Rawls and Keith Carter. New York suburbs produce fine golfers. New York City is a cradle of prizefighters.

New York's Broadway may draw stars from all over America, but many of them are born in the five boroughs. One-third of the big city's famous are show people.

Depending on where you were born, your avenues to fame may lead to movies, industry, politics, or baseball

It is no accident that Margaret Truman chose a singing career. Missouri has produced more Metropolitan Opera singers than any other state its size (for example, Helen Traubel and Gladys Swarthout).

Among individual cities, Buffalo, N.Y., Nashville, Tenn., and Marengo, Iowa, are strong in opera singers. Richmond, Va., is probably the nation's leading minstrel producer.

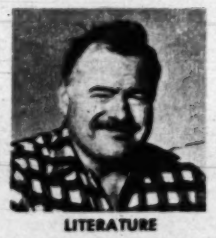
STAGE. Texas produced Mary Martin

Writers from Kansas

However, Pennsylvania, birthstate of Fred Waring, has a rich musical family (Stephen Foster, Ethelbert Nevin, Marian Anderson, the Dorsey brothers, Jeanette MacDonald, and others). Choral conducters, composers come from the mid-West.

MUSIC A Pennsylvania son is Fred Waring

New England, of course, produced classic writers: Longfellow, Whittier, Bryant, Poe, Holmes and others. But Indiana, with Booth Tarkington, George Ade, George Barr McCutcheon and Lloyd Douglas, has been a main source of fiction and humor. Kansas, partly through the individual inspiration of William Allen White, produces columnists and magazine writers. Maine, with its Frank Merriwell, Toby Tyler, Dotty Dimple and Old Squire stories, produces great children's writers.



LITERATURE Hemingway was a Chicago boy

How About Industrialists?

Native sons of New England helped build industrial partnerships that remain inspirations: Fairbanks and Morse (farm machinery), Wells and Fargo (express), Smith and Wesson (firearms), and Mason and Hamlin (pianos). A second cycle of industrial giants came from the mid-west to the auto and rubber industries: Packard, Crosley, Firestone, Seiberling, Ford, etc. A third cycle, contributing to the air age, have come from all over: Lockheed from California, Martin from Iowa, Boeing from Detroit, Douglas from Brooklyn, Ryan from Kansas, Bell from Indiana.

SPORTS Golf's Sam Snead is a Virginian

INDUSTRY Harvey Firestone, Jr., is from Ohio

In only three states (Virginia, West Virginia, South Carolina) has politics been the main road to fame. Virginia produced eight Presidents (Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, W. H. Harrison, Tyler, Taylor, and Wilson). The runners-up are Ohio, with seven (Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley, Taft, Harding), and New York, with four (Van Buren, Fillmore, Teddy Roosevelt, and F.D.R.).

POLITICS Will Presidents come from West?

Bringing Up Baby

Hints collected by Mrs Dan Gerber
(Mother of 5)

COOL COOKERY. Here's a short and sweet way to whip up a delicious new dessert for Baby and you.

SWEET POTATO CUSTARD
(5 minute recipe)

1 egg, slightly beaten
½ teaspoon sugar
1 container Gerber's Strained Sweet Potatoes
½ teaspoon butter or fortified margarine, melted

Combine all ingredients. Pour into 2 greased custard cups. Set in pan of gently boiling water. Cover and cook 5 to 7 minutes or until knife inserted into custard comes out clean. If it's not too hot a day, brown quickly under broiler. But you can skip this.

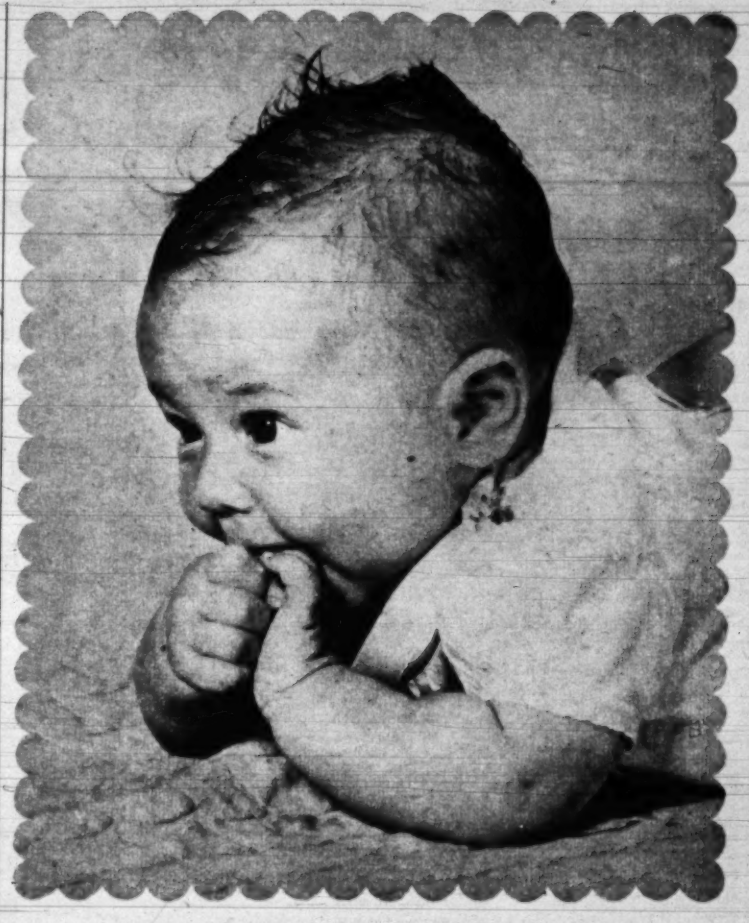
SUMMER COMFORT TIPS—collected from mothers here, there and everywhere who generously share their keep-cool hints with us all.

No noonday sun. Do your shopping and strolling with Baby in the cool of the morning or late afternoon.

Make light work of meals. Serve Baby those tasty, nutritious, ready-to-serve Gerber's Fruits, Vegetables, Meats and Desserts. They seem to have high appetite appeal even when the weather report reads "Heat wave due to last."

Plant a "sunbrella" in Baby's outdoor playpen. All you do is set up an ordinary rainy-day umbrella to shade sonny from too much sun.

MIDSUMMER GIFT! Samples of Gerber's 3 Cereals. Just write to Box 646A-0, Fremont, Mich.



She's ready to meet OUR Baby

Has your tot been introduced to our famous Gerber Baby on the gaily-colored boxes of Cereal Food, Strained Oatmeal and Barley Cereal? Ready-to-serve, each Cereal has a pleasant taste and smooth-as-silk texture that babies seem to like from the start. Each also contains added iron, calcium and important B vitamins. Your baby needs them all—from the very first day she or he starts on cereal. Your doctor will agree.

Watch that friendship grow as your baby re-meets the Gerber Baby on a wide variety of Strained Fruits, Vegetables, Meats and Desserts. From luscious purple plums to tempting, protein-rich beef, Gerber's have True-Flavor and Perfected-Texture. Both appeal to infant appetites in a big way.

When Baby graduates to Junior Foods, the Gerber Baby will still be the favorite mealtime companion (after mommy, of course). Such variety for tots with a few teeth. Such tempting, tiny, easy-to-chew particles! Of course, the Junior Foods, like the Strained, are prepared by a special Double-Protection Method. That's Gerber's way of giving your baby natural goodness galore and important nutritional factors—start to finish.

Babies are our business . . . our only business!

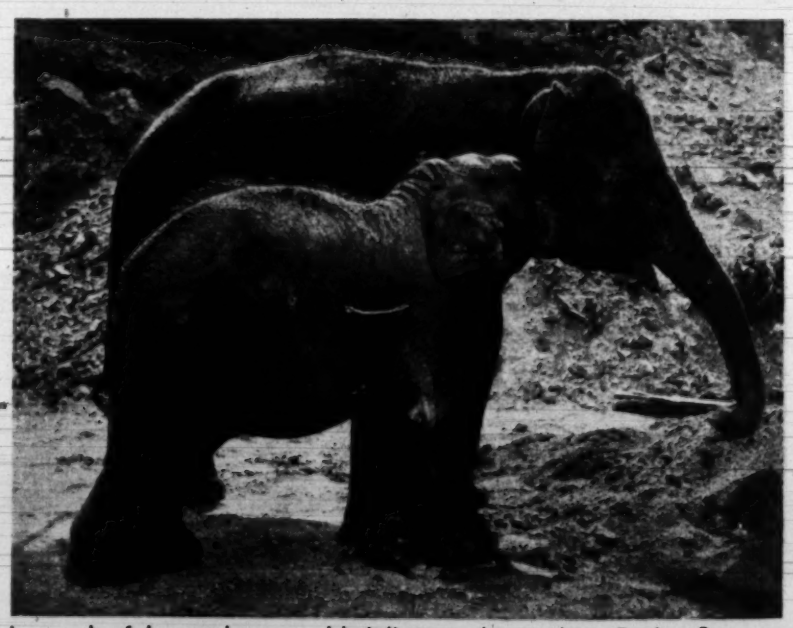
Zoo keeper leads happy elephants to 1,000-acre playground.

Playground for Elephants!

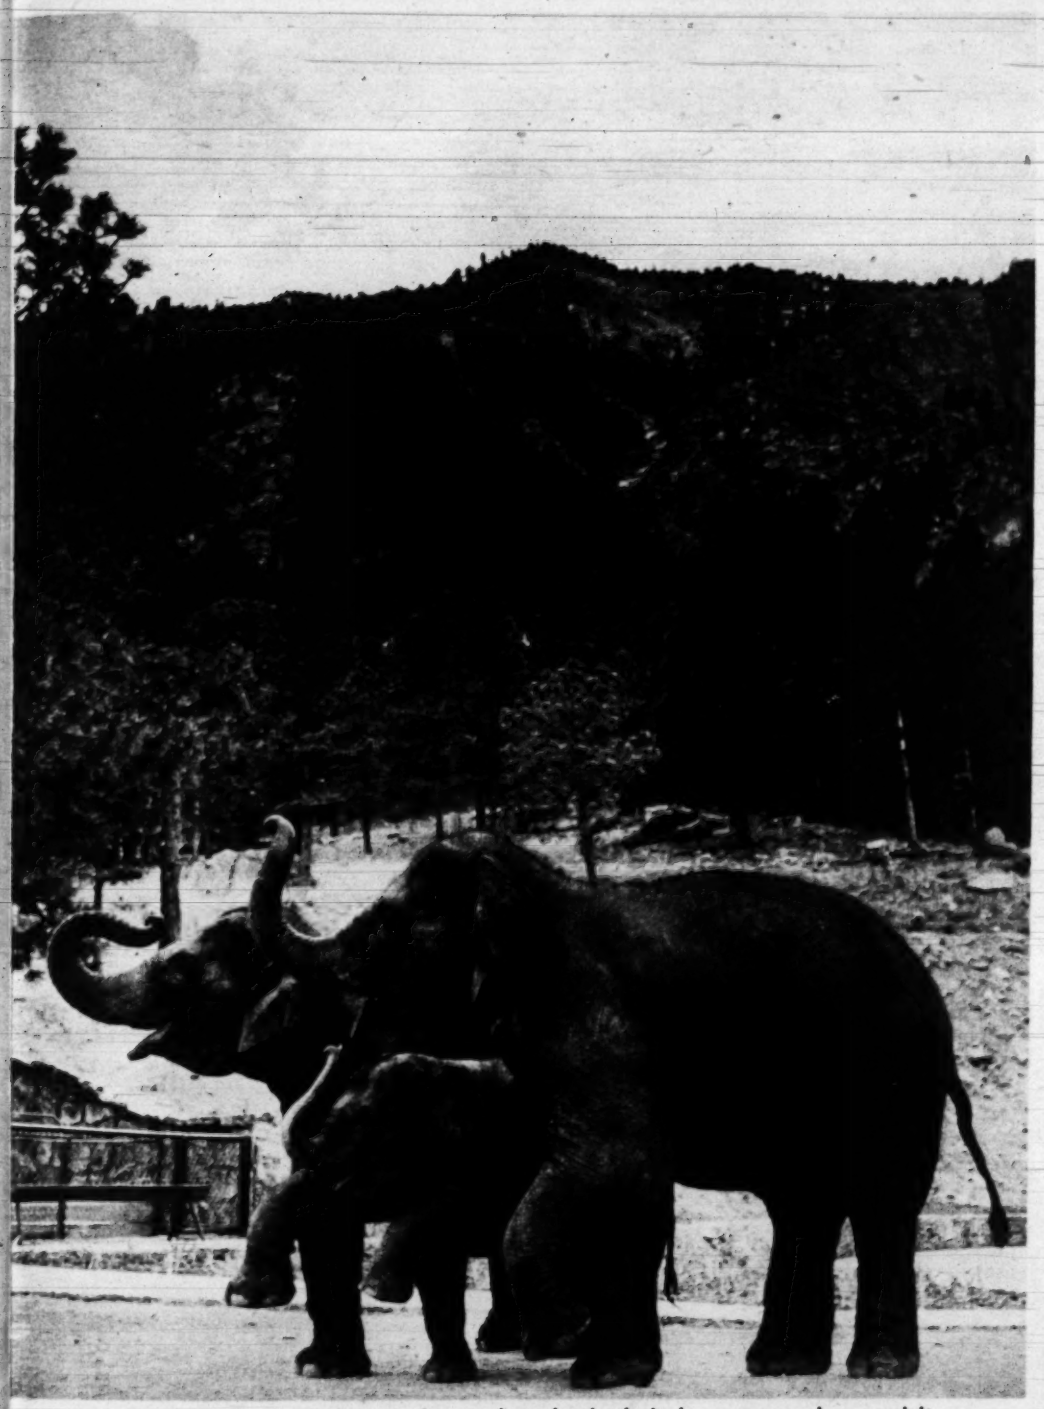
ON hill, they eat dirt. Keeper says it's good for them.

IF ROSIE, Penny and Julie could only talk, it's a sure bet that they'd tell you they're the three luckiest elephants this side of Bombay. At night they sleep in comfortable beds at the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo, adjoining Colorado Springs' Broadmoor Hotel.

By day, the three uninhibited beasts, hemmed in only by natural barriers, spend their time happily uprooting small trees, eating dirt and romping through a thousand-acre mountain playground. Visitors watch them from a safe distance. Born in India, Rosie, Penny and Julie seem to thrive in Colorado's climate.



In a playful mood, year-old Julie nuzzles sedate Rosie, 8.



Outside elephant house they salute both their keepers and zoo visitors.

ROSIE AND PENNY have a rousing good time playing around an uprooted tree.

AT DAY'S END, Julie follows Penny home. At the zoo, a hot supper is awaiting them.

"STOMACH UPSET" make you Tumble and Toss?

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative— REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

● When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative — do as MILLIONS do — chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon... right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy . . . you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

FEEN-A-MINT
FAMOUS CHEWING-GUM LAXATIVE

BRIMMS
PLASTI-LINER

One application MAKES FALSE TEETH FIT for the life of your plates

If your plates are loose and slip or hurt, refit them for instant, permanent comfort with soft Brimms Plasti-Liner strips. Lay strip on upper or lower plate . . . bite and it molds perfectly. Hardens for lasting fit and comfort. Even on old rubber plates, Brimms Plasti-Liner gives good results from six months to a year or longer. Ends forever mess and bother of temporary applications that last a few hours or days. Stops slipping, rocking plates and sore gums. Eat anything. Talk freely. Enjoy the comfort thousands of people all over the country now get with Brimms Plasti-Liner.

Easy to refit or tighten false tooth permanently

Tasteless, odorless, harmless to you and your plates. Removable as per directions. Users say: "Now I can eat anything." Money back guarantee. $1.25 for liner for one plate; $2.25 for both. At your drug store.

of these Top Hit

Full-Size, Full-Length, Hard-Bound Books!

Tops in Sea Action!

THE newest of the best-selling "Hornblower" adventure books; a rousing tale of the sea in the days when tall masted British frigates proudly sailed the world. Naval battles, sea chases and desperate duels mold a young midshipman into an officer who is the idol of the fleet. "Great stuff!"—Phil. Inquirer. Published at $3.

Tops in Spy Fiction!

IN ISTANBUL, cradle of international intrigue, the struggle between Turkish and American agents and a mysterious Moscow-trained American renegade began. Major North, the "ace of G-2," is in top form in this fast-action story of perilous intrigue against the Kremlin's toughest men! Published at $2.75.

Tops in Suspense!

PETER HOWARD remembered that a wooden horse had once opened the way into Troy. Now another kind of wooden horse might open the way for him and two friends to escape from the German prison camp for captured Allied fliers. How they made their break is a story of terrific suspense! Published at $2.75.

Tops in Swordplay!

THE powerful lord of Perugia couldn't believe his own eyes. No living man had ever escaped the locks and guards of his torture chamber—no one except his prize prisoners, Baron Melrose, and Tizzo, the laughing Firebrand who challenged the finest swordsmen of Europe. Published at $2.75.

Tops in Gunplay!

WHEN the rampaging Apaches destroyed a wagon train and carried off the lone survivor the Army called Ward Kinsman in from the hills to lead a rescue party. But Ward found himself tangled in treachery that caught the troopers in an Indian ambush. Vivid action, tough fighting and hairbreadth escapes! Published at $2.50.

Tops in Science Fiction!

KIM RENDALL is an outlaw in the distant future, living on a fantastic planet where mechanized terror wielded by a tyrannical government has taken over. Kim conceives the daring plan of seizing an outmoded spaceship to make his escape and bring about the overthrow of the all-powerful rulers. Published at $2.50.

STEVE CANYON IS SOMEWHERE OFF THE CHINA COAST... MEANWHILE —FAR INLAND...

WHY HAVE YOU NOT SHOT HOGAN, THE YANKEE LOUT, AS YOU PLANNED, PANG?

THE SURLY CUR IS LEADING THIS RAID ON THE PUPPET ARSENAL IN MASTERLY FASHION! IF HE CONTINUES TO GUIDE US BACK TO OUR FORMER GLORIES, THEN WE COULD WAIT UNTIL HE WINS FOR US BEFORE DESTROYING HIM!

DON'T STOP MOVING, YOU MEN!... PLANT THE PRINCESS SNOWFLOWER'S FLAG AND FALL BACK BEFORE THE PUPPET TROOPS RE-FORM!

WE'LL BLOW UP WHAT WE CAN'T CARRY FROM THE FORT!

TRUCKS FILLED WITH SOLDIERS NOW ARRIVE!

THEY'LL BE THE TROOPS TRAINED UP NORTH! THAT'S OUR CUE TO HIGHBALL OUT OF TOWN!

HELP! AMERICANS HERE!... IN THE JAIL!

...BUT, MISTA HOGAN — COMES COUNTER ATTACK!

THEY'LL TAKE THEIR MAD OUT ON ANY YANK IN THE JUG!

STAND AWAY FROM THE DOOR IN THERE!

MY FRIEND IS BADLY HURT!

HE'S DEAD! IF YOU'RE THE ONLY ONE LEFT, COME ALONG — RIDE DOUBLE WITH ME!

T-THANK YOU, MR. HOGAN...

OH, MY BLEEDING EYEBALLS! IT'S THAT DOLL BABY — REED KIMBERLY!

PIXIE PUZZLE ADVENTURIES

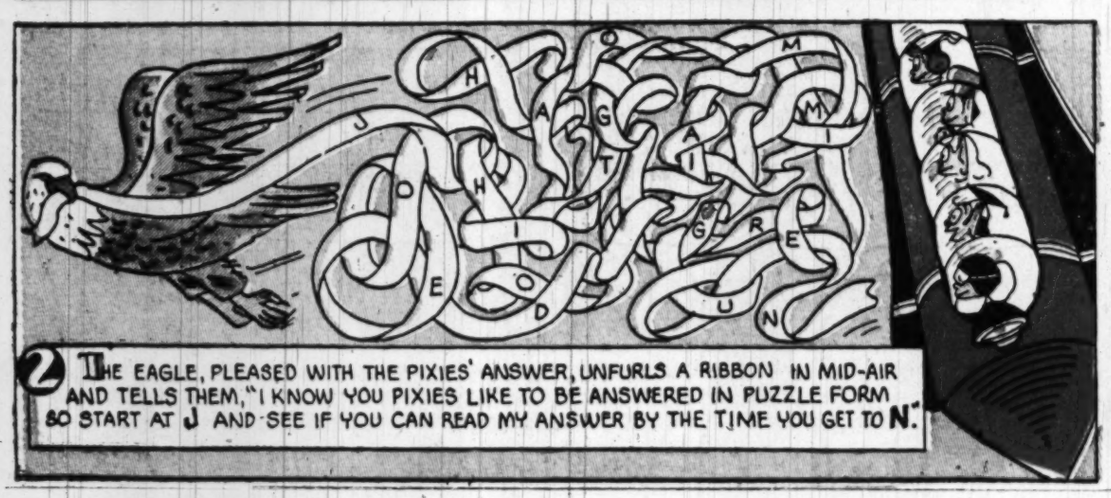
by Matt Curzon

Copyright, 1950, New York Herald Tribune Inc.

1 AS THE EAGLE COMES CLOSE TO THE PIXIES' ROCKET, THE PIXIES ASK HIM WHAT THE TROUBLE IS ON EARTH.

THE VAIN EAGLE TELLS THEM, "I WON'T ANSWER YOUR QUESTION UNTIL YOU ANSWER MINE. WHAT AMERICAN COIN, A PENNY, NICKLE, DIME OR QUARTER HAS MY PICTURE ON IT?

YOU'VE SEEN THESE COINS. DO YOU KNOW WHICH ONE CARRIES THE EAGLE'S PICTURE?



2 THE EAGLE, PLEASED WITH THE PIXIES' ANSWER, UNFURLS A RIBBON IN MID-AIR AND TELLS THEM, "I KNOW YOU PIXIES LIKE TO BE ANSWERED IN PUZZLE FORM SO START AT J AND SEE IF YOU CAN READ MY ANSWER BY THE TIME YOU GET TO N."

3 WIZZIE LOOKS THROUGH A TELESCOPE. "THE EAGLE IS RIGHT," HE SAYS, "I CAN SEE A BASEBALL GAME AND SOME ONE IS UP AT BAT."

DO YOU WANT TO SEE THE BATTER, TOO? FILL IN ALL THE SQUARES THAT CONTAIN A DOT.

4 AS THE PIXIES NEAR THE EARTH, THEY SEE A BASEBALL COMING THEIR WAY.

"WOW!" EXCLAIMS CLOUDY, "DI MAGGIO HIT ANOTHER HOME RUN!"

"THAT WAS SOME HIT," AGREES SPUNKY, "I CAN NAME FORMER BASEBALL STARS WHO WERE ALSO HOME RUN HITTERS."

CAN YOU NAME AT LEAST 5 MORE HOME RUN KINGS?
